

N. Y. STAGES ONE OF ITS GREATEST SHOWS WITH KING AND QUEEN IN LEADING ROLES

ACTION IN HOUSE WOULD INCREASE OLD AGE BENEFITS

1,100,000 Additional People Would Get Insurance; Taxpayers To Save $1,710,000,000 in Plan.

WASHINGTON, June 10.—(AP)—With only two dissenting votes, the house approved and sent to the senate today a set of amendments extending and increasing the benefits of the social security law while keeping the old age pension tax at its present level for the next three years.

The vote was 361 to 2, with Representatives Smith, Republican, Ohio, and Thill, Republican, Wisconsin, casting the negative votes. Representative Carlson, Republican, Kansas, first voted "no," then changed to "present," because he was paired with a member who favored the legislation.

The tax amendment has been hailed as a "recovery step" because it would avoid a 50 per cent increase next year in the old age insurance tax.

Same Payments.
If the senate approves the house's action, it will mean that the working man covered by old age insurance will continue to contribute to his retirement pension 1 per cent of his pay, up to $3,000, until January 1, 1943.

In 1943 the rate will go up to 1 1/2 per cent. Under present law the rate is due to go up to 1 1/2 per cent next January 1.

A ways and means committee report estimated "total savings" to taxpayers during the next three years would be $1,710,000,000.

At the same time it estimated that increased benefits would cost an additional $1,200,000,000 during the next five years.

The committee also said that 1,100,000 additional persons—seamen, bank employees and employed persons 65 and over—would be provided old age insurance under amendments which extended coverage to these groups, and that 200,000 additional would get unemployment insurance.

Would Pay Next Year.
Under the amendments, the government would begin paying old age insurance benefits next year, instead of waiting until 1942 as present law provides.

Furthermore, the benefits to be received by persons who reach 65—the retirement age—in the next few years would be greatly increased.

The amendments also would provide pensions for elderly widows and parents and the minor children of deceased old age insurance participants, doing away with the lump sum payment to heirs as in present law.

The maximum federal contribution to states for old age assistance would be increased from $15 to $20.

BAPTIST CONGRESS PLANS SHAPE UP

Thousands To Attend 6th World Alliance Meeting Opening July 22.

Forty-one days from today the sixth Congress of the Baptist World Alliance will open in Atlanta, the first time this world organization of Baptists has ever met in the south, and by reasonable calculation it will not meet again in Atlanta for 100 years.

The congress opens July 22 at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, and continues through the following Friday evening, July 28.

An incident Saturday morning which emphasizes the fact that the meeting is near at hand was the official delivery of the first badge for the congress to Dr. Louis D. Newton, general chairman, by Dr. W. Lee Cutts, chairman of the committee on badges. The badge is a beautiful creation in four colors on a metal background, the chief detail being a globe representing the world with clasped hands reaching from the eastern to the western hemispheres. In the four points protruding from the globe appear the initials "BWA" and "Atlanta, 1939." Small symbols of an open Bible and the cross and the national colors complete the design of the badge, thousands of which will be carried from the Atlanta meeting to every part of the world.

The only other time the Baptist World Alliance has met in the United States was 1911 when it met in Philadelphia. In 1928 the congress was held in Toronto, Canada. Other sessions were held in London in 1905, Stockholm in 1923, and Berlin in 1934. It is likely that the 1944 congress will be held somewhere in the orient, probably India.

With only 41 days left in which to get ready for this mammoth world gathering, the people of Atlanta are enthusiastically united in

FIRST LIEUTENANT OF EVANS ELECTED NEW KLAN WIZARD

Colecott Tells Policy, Says Group Bears No Grudges; Action Will Mark Administration.

By LAMAR Q. BALL.
Doctor Hiram Wesley Evans demonstrated yesterday that there was a great deal of truth to what he has maintained all along about the strength of his grip on the Ku Klux Klan.

His first lieutenant for the last two years was elevated to the post he vacated as imperial wizard of the order.

In less time than it took a write it on the back of the hotel stationery, the new imperial wizard, James Arnold Colecott, 42 years old and a former veterinarian, issued his statement of policies for the Klan for the next four years, a carefully typewritten summary of the golden thoughts that have been rolling off the tongue of Doctor Evans ever since he tossed Klan habits to the breeze six months ago and attended the dedication of a new Catholic cathedral in Atlanta.

Has No Hates.

From now on, according to Imperial Wizard Colecott, the Klan nourishes no hates, loves everyone, bears no grudges, believes in letting the other fellow mind his own business.

As a remnant of the past, he announced in figurative sense only: "The fiery cross will again blaze on the hilltops of America and the Klan serve militantly for God, country and home."

Just as an illustration of how this is no more than a melodious trumpet accompaniment to necessary oratory, Wizard Colecott explained in his hotel room an hour or so later: "I am against floggings, lynchings and intimidations. Anyone who flogs, lynch or intimidates ought to be in the penitentiary. And, you can believe me, I shall do everything I can to help put such people there where they belong."

Stresses Action.

Explaining that his administration would be an administration of action, he said: "We shall ever strive to promote the interest of the native-born, white, Protestant, Gentile population of America. Doubtless, the well-organized minority groups will take care of their interests. It is at least their problem."

Colecott long ago expressed his belief that all persons should be permitted to worship as they choose and that the native-born white has enough worries of his own without worrying about so-called threats of the minorities.

"What will you do for the native whites," he was asked.

"Something has to be done for them," he announced. "Millions of them are out of work, but I don't believe it has been caused

King George and Queen Elizabeth add another bit of historic import to the New York world's fair as they sign their royal names in the book for celebrities. President of the fair, Grover Whalen, (back to camera) looks on.

3 MILLION BELLOW SALUTE AS RULERS TAKE IN THE CITY

Boats, Planes, Guns—All Roar Mighty Welcome; Police With Rifles Do Guard Duty on Roofs.

NEW YORK, June 10.—(AP)—In six hours thunderous with the welcome of more than 3,000,000 residents of a city lost long ago to his vast empire, King George and Queen Elizabeth paid a historic visit today to this metropolis of the west and bowed at the New York World's Fair to a moving demonstration of affection for them.

Then, after a brief call at Columbia University, the royal Britons left at 4:15 p. m., Atlanta time, for Hyde Park to rejoin President Roosevelt for a Sunday visit before returning to Canada for their trip back home.

(The King and Queen arrived at Hyde Park at 6:41 p. m., Atlanta time.)

King Appears Weary.

Through 51 miles of city streets they rode, smiling to a roaring salute from the people and to the almost continuous roll of drums and the blare of brasses.

Before the end, the tanned, slight king appeared weary though profoundly affected.

But the Queen—who had brightly answered, "Isn't that a lovely thing for you to say," when the mayor's secretary had told her on her arrival "All New Yorkers are in love with you already"—looked in the highest of spirits and vigor through it all.

Human Touches.

In the long procession to and from the fair the King rode not on the Queen's right, as is customary abroad, but on her left. He was understood to explain, with a remark that was characteristic of the easy behavior of both: "It's more American. Let us do it that way."

During the great pageant there were many such human touches: the King skipping his luncheon cocktail but the Queen taking hers. . . . Both omitting their dessert to hurry things up. . . . The cavalcade having been made late because the Queen, happy at the presence of such vast crowds, had asked that the procession go slower than had been planned.

Blinks Back Tears.

Then, as they stepped upon a terrace of the fair's federal building, standing easily and with no silk-hatted personages with them, there was such a tumult of affectionate shouts from the crowd that the Queen blinked her eyes rapidly to hold back the almost visible tears.

There was no smile upon the King's lips: He looked solemnly conscious of an extraordinary tribute.

Despite the demonstration at the fair, the number who saw their majesties there was much less than had been expected: the official attendance just before they

HEARING SOUGHT ON TROLLEY FARES

Wilhoit Urges Lower Rates Be Tried in Effort To Regain Lost Business

Jud P. Wilhoit, member of the Georgia Public Service Commission, announced yesterday he will ask the commission to revive an old rule nisi issued against the Georgia Power Company last year and to set a definite date for a hearing on lower transportation fares in Atlanta.

In a statement, Wilhoit, former chairman of the commission, pointed out the power company has lost much revenue since a new fare schedule became effective in 1927.

Urges Discard of Old Fares.

"I, therefore, think it is time to discard the old fares," Wilhoit's statement said, "and that lower fares be tried out in an effort to gain the lost business, serve the public better, and benefit the company financially."

Officials of the power company declined comment on Wilhoit's statement, but said it "would be studied."

The text of Wilhoit's statement follows: "The commission has on its calendar a rule nisi against the Georgia Power Company to show cause why the street car fares in Atlanta should not be reduced.

"A hearing was held on this rule on September 28, 1938, and the case recessed until the commission could study the answer of the Power Company and certain information that the commission requested the Power Company to supply.

Fares in 1927.
"In 1927 the street car fares were 7 cents cash or three tickets for 20 cents. In that year the charges were increased to 10 cents cash or four tickets for 30 cents.

"The information of the Power Company supplied the commission shows that in 1927, the last year the 7 cents cash or three tickets for 20 cents fares were charged, the company transported 73,711,924 cash and ticket passengers, with a gross revenue of $5,127,098.15.

"In 1928, the first year's operation under the increased fares, the number of paying passengers decreased 5,324,276, but the gross revenue of the company increased $242,467.74, or less than one-half

Czech Policeman Is Slain by Germans; New Reprisals Held Up.

KLADNO, Bohemia—Moravia, June 10.—(AP)—The slaying of a Czech policeman in a quarrel with German police was announced tonight shortly after the withholding of additional punitive measures against Kladno for the killing of a German police sergeant.

A German communiqué said the Czech policeman had been killed last night at Nachod and declared the shooting resulted from an "unfortunate chain of regrettable incidents" but gave no further details.

The impression grew, meanwhile, that German police either had apprehended the slayer of the German police sergeant or had clarified the case to their satisfaction.

An investigation of the Nachod incident was under way and those involved were being detained. Nachod is near the former frontier between Germany and Czechoslovakia.

The Czech version of this affair was: The Czech policeman, Johann Mueller, and two fellow officers

MAGAZINE ARTICLE ASSAILED BY ICKES

Secretary Says Feature He Wrote Urging F.D.R. Third Term 'Distorted'

WASHINGTON, June 10.—(AP) Secretary Ickes protested today that a magazine article he wrote urging a third term for President Roosevelt had been "distorted" by editorial treatment that included illustrating it with pictures of eight men who have been mentioned as possible 1940 presidential nominees.

The interior secretary said in a statement that none of the men was mentioned in the article he prepared for the June 20 issue of "Look" and added:

"The result was a serious distortion of a matter of primary national importance."

Arguing for another term for Mr. Roosevelt, Ickes had said in the article:

"This is no time for a candidate whose 'qualifications' consist of the fact that he has been chirruping weak opposition to everything the world's greatest democratic leader has done, or a candidate whose claim to office consists of the traitorous knifing in the back of the commander-in-chief to whom he has sworn fealty or one whose 'strength' is that of knowing nothing, saying nothing, doing nothing."

Along with other pictures, the magazine published in connection

Entry List for Soap Box Derby July 22 Grows Faster Each Day

By WALLACE J. MINSHULL. Plans are shaping rapidly for the sixth annual Soap Box Derby, to be run on Soap Box Derby Downs July 22 when the championship of north Georgia will be decided, and already indications point to the event this year being the most successful ever staged.

Applications for the classic, which is sponsored by The Constitution and Atlanta Chevrolet dealers, already are far ahead of the number received last year, auguring well for the success of the event.

The offer of The Constitution to furnish youngsters with free wheels and other accessories has stimulated interest in the race to a considerable extent, and already

AIR TOURISTS FLY IN COFFIN TRIBUTE AT SEA ISLAND

Major Howell's Speech Features Dedication of Memorial Recreation Park; Planes Parade.

By CARY (CARRIGAN) WILMER.
SEA ISLAND, Ga., June 10.—Georgia's aerial tourists—still slightly on the groggy side after last night's perfect party—joined forces with Glynn county this afternoon to help dedicate a recreation center in Brunswick named for a man who as much as any individual was responsible for making this one of the country's outstanding recreation centers—Howard E. Coffin.

Major Dick Allen, of Augusta, headed a flight of three planes which circled the new park and dropped flowers in tribute to the memory of one of the state's best known adopted sons, and the other planes in this year's tour staged an aerial parade over Brunswick as a prelude to the dedication ceremonies which were featured by an address by Major Clark Howell, editor and publisher of The Constitution.

Major Howell speaks. Praising the developments sponsored by Mr. Coffin, Major Howell credited him with being directly responsible for some of the most outstanding improvements in Georgia's history.

S. R. (Red) Adams, superintendent of the new amusement center, was in charge of the program which continued on into the night and included an air show at the Brunswick airport on St. Simons Island with most of the planes on the tour taking part.

It was Major Al Williams and his Gulfhawk, however, who stole the show with an exhibition of stunting, power diving and aerial acrobatics of all kinds the like of which has seldom been seen either here or anywhere else. It was just naturally a perfect performance.

Gould Directs. Potter F. Gould, of the Sea Island Company, acted as master of ceremonies for the dedication, and the invocation was pronounced by the Rev. Royal K. Tucker.

Major Howell was introduced by Frank M. Scarlett, president of the Brunswick Board of Trade, and the recreation center was officially presented to the people of Brunswick by Major J. Hunter Hopkins, who has been with the tour since it started in Atlanta Thursday.

In addition to the air show, the day's program also included water sports under direction of Captain

Excited Youngsters Take First Train Ride

While the big locomotives puffed and fumed around the Union station yesterday, these two excited little girls waited for the start of their first ride on the train. All alone they left for Morristown, Tenn., to visit grandmother and granddaddy on the farm. The two little travelers are Betty Jean Jenkins, 6, and Phyllis Marjorie Jenkins, 4, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Jenkins, of 629 Spring street. Phyllis Marjorie couldn't bear the thought of leaving her doll behind, so she carried it along too.

W. A. Lindsey, of the Sea Island pool, a track meet, softball game and tennis matches.

Airport Dedication. It was just about a year ago that the Georgia air tour helped dedicate Brunswick's beautiful airport on St. Simons Island. In addition to today's official participation in the opening of the recreation center, there was no end of unofficial participation in the opening of the King and Prince Club here tonight, but even at that it will be "home again" tomorrow afternoon after a couple of short stops en route.

H. E. COFFIN EULOGIZED BY MAJOR HOWELL
BRUNSWICK, Ga., June 10.—(AP)—The late Howard E. Coffin, of Sapelo Island, engineer and developer, was eulogized today by Major Clark Howell Jr. as "in some respects a greater Georgian than many of us native sons."

In an address at the dedication of the Howard E. Coffin recreation center as a part of the annual Georgia air tour, Major Howell, editor and publisher of The Constitution, said of Coffin:

"He had the vision to discern and develop what our state possessed when we perhaps were less observant, less audacious and less willing to gamble on our judgment."

Major Howell traced the career of Coffin from an Ohio farm boy to the head of a large automobile company, a leader and developer of the aviation industry during the war period and later as a "figure of importance in the south's own particular industry—the cotton industry."

He related how Coffin purchased Sapelo Island in 1911 and "retiring" later, "came to Georgia and set about his Sea Island development enterprises whereby these islands, steeped in historic lore and natural beauty, became a modern paradise sought out by thousands."

Referring to the recreation center, built by the city with WPA assistance, the speaker said: "This playground and park, viewed with such an eye as Howard Coffin's—alive to genuine values—cannot but become what he, as an engineer, well might have termed a continuing source of power."

Howard Coffin's dynamic influence, his creative mind and understanding spirit will be found here so long as a single child remains to play or a weary soul to seek refreshment."

WIDESPREAD SEARCH LAUNCHED FOR GUIDE
VENICE, Fla., June 10.—(AP)—A widespread search was made of waters in this vicinity today for Jimmy Groves, fishing guide, whose 32-foot cabin cruiser was found beached near here with its motor running full throttle.

A coast guard plane and searchers in private and commercial craft combed an area of many square miles throughout the day without success. Deputy Sheriff F. F. Kelso said Groves left Boca Grande early yesterday.

HARTSFIELD NAMES CONTRACTS GROUP

Body To Work Out Plans for City Service Being Rendered County.

Mayor Hartsfield yesterday designated Alderman Ed A. Gilliam, chairman of council's finance committee, and Councilman Frank Wilson as members of a special municipal committee to work out details of contracts for city services being rendered Fulton county.

The mayor, City Attorney Jack C. Savage and B. Graham West, comptroller, were named members of the negotiating group in a resolution which council passed several weeks ago.

Under a bill passed at the last session of the Georgia assembly, it was provided that contracts for services between the two governments is desirable, and council has initiated the movement.

Councilman John A. White, author of the measure establishing the committee, pointed out that a contract for sewers now exists and that hospitals, water, parks, fire, health and library activities also should be made a matter of contractual relationship with each government bearing a definite portion of the expense of operation and maintenance and with one recognized department to prevent duplication of services.

White pointed out that the recent row over county contributions to Battle Hill sanitarium could have been averted if such a contract were in actual existence.

the many plans projected by the various committees in charge of details which range from converting Ponce de Leon baseball park into a temple of worship to making arrangements for hundreds of people who will form the cast of the historic pageant which is to be one of the features of the congress.

"Every mail brings increasing registrations from abroad," Dr. Newton stated Saturday. "This is obviously the result of the somewhat eased situation in Europe. Many people over there had temporarily given up their plans to come to Atlanta when the situation got so tense in April. We also have received a number of new registrations from the orient within the past week," he continued.

Asked about the program of the congress, Dr. Newton said: "We have had but one disappointment thus far in the original program plans, and that is the illness of Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes. We had expected to have Mr. Hughes for the closing address of the congress. Dr. J. H. Rushbrooke, general secretary of the alliance, went from Atlanta to Washington last week to discover if possible the final decision of the Chief Justice, and he was advised that it is not now likely that his condition will permit him to come to Atlanta. His place will be filled by some other outstanding Baptist."

Remarkable Array. "The program, however, does present a most remarkable array of distinguished men and women from every part of the world. Dr. George W. Truett's presidential address on Sunday afternoon, July 23, undoubtedly will hold the spotlight of the entire Baptist world. The roll call on Saturday afternoon and evening, the mass meeting on Sunday evening, the pageant on Monday evening, the mission demonstration on Wednesday evening, the young people's demonstration Thursday evening, and the closing session on Friday evening all give promise of exceptional interest for the public."

The afternoon programs will feature the work of the women, the laymen, the young people, and also will provide for the various nationals to assemble for specially planned programs of their own."

The general chairman on arrangements is putting in an average of 16 hours a day, with the expectation of moving up his schedule to something approaching 24-hour duty by July 22. His many associate chairmen and chairwomen are following a similar schedule.

Colonel B. L. Bugg, chairman of the housing committee for the whites, and Rev. E. J. Johnson, chairman of housing for the negroes, report fine progress. Reservations are pouring in daily, with requests ranging from hotels to private homes, including tourist camp accommodations, train camp space, and what have you.

All persons from foreign lands have been offered free hospitality in the homes of Atlanta, and hundreds have been placed, with letters having gone from the respective hosts to the guests in every portion of the world. Many replies have been received, indicating the appreciation of these guests from many nations at the thought of being personally entertained during their stay in Atlanta.

Hospitality Accepted. All persons who would like to entertain a foreign guest are requested to telephone Dr. Newton at once. All persons wishing to rent rooms in private homes are requested to telephone Baptist World Alliance headquarters, telephone Jackson 1000.

Wiley L. Moore, chairman of auditorium facilities, has added Earl Mann, president of the Atlanta Baseball Club, as his associate chairman, since Mr. Mann has made Ponce de Leon park available for the mass meetings for the congress. It is now planned to hold the morning and afternoon sessions, except Saturday and Sunday afternoons, in the municipal auditorium. On Saturday and Sunday afternoon sessions, and all evening sessions, will be held at Ponce de Leon park.

Contracts have been let to increase the capacity of the park with 10,000 additional seats, which will cover most of the playing field. The present open bleachers will be temporarily covered. The seats in the playing field will not be covered. A speakers' stand, 90 by 40 feet, will be erected in center field.

A first aid station will be erected near the speakers' stand, fully equipped with all modern appliances to care for any emergencies that may arise with thousands of people assembled for these mass meetings. Doctors and nurses will be on duty in every session, and ambulances will be on duty to care for any who must be taken to a hospital. This service will be provided through the co-operation of the American Red Cross, the Atlanta Association of Hospitals, the Fulton county Medical Society, the Atlanta Association of Nurses, the undertakers of Atlanta, and a number of surgical supply houses. W. D. Barker and Frank Wilson are in charge of this first aid service.

Finance Chairman. Fred W. Patterson is chairman of finances, and through his committee all contracts are approved. Walter Ward is chairman of transportation, and his committee is furnishing information to countless inquirers concerning every movement into Atlanta. Parks Warnock is chairman of exhibits. He announces that every available foot of space for exhibits at the auditorium has been assigned. These exhibits will represent thousands of dollars in equipment. One of the biggest features of Almost 100 R.O.T.C. Cadets Board Ship at Charleston.

Special to THE CONSTITUTION.
CHARLESTON, S. C., June 10. Georgia Tech's Naval R. O. T. C. unit, nearly 100 strong, embarked aboard the battleship Wyoming and the destroyer Dickinson at 7 o'clock tonight for their annual summer cruise.

The contingent, in charge of Lieutenant Commander Paul R. Coloney, U. S. N., and Lieutenant Commander Wyatt Craig, U. S. N., arrived in Charleston after an all-day run from Atlanta, Ga., where the party entrained at 9 o'clock this morning.

Tenders took the reserve officers to the ships, 57 sophomores and freshmen embarking on the Wyoming, while the remaining juniors went aboard the Dickinson. The Wyoming sailed immediately for New York, with the Dickinson being scheduled to stop at Hampton Roads, Va., before proceeding to New York.

The Georgia reserve officers, in company with units from Tulane, Yale, Harvard and Northwestern, will cruise for 30 days before returning home. A visit to the World's Fair at New York, to Boston and a cruise in southern waters during which they will participate in battle practice at Guantanamo bay, and a stop at Havana, Cuba, are included in the itinerary.

MYSTERY CLOAKS MRS. RUBENS AGAIN

Confirmation of Scheduled Release Is Lacking.

MOSCOW, June 10.—(AP)—The last day of Ruth Marie Rubens' 18-month sentence as red Russia's mystery prisoner passed tonight without either Soviet authorities or the United States embassy shedding any light on her next move.

Shortly before midnight, confirmation was lacking even that she had been released. There had been suggestions that she might leave for the United States to appear in the inquiry of alleged passport frauds there but she was not seen boarding any outbound trains.

There are no more cats in Killkenny, Ireland, other than in any other Irish town, in spite of the old yarn about the big fight.

D. Woodbury and Mrs. Ida Henderson head the young people's commissions and Mrs. J. W. Awtry and Mrs. Geneva Haugabrooks will direct the women's committees.

John A. White and C. D. Hubert are chairmen of the pageant committee. The pageant will be staged Monday evening of the congress week, with a cast of several hundred persons. Many historic Baptist personalities, including John Bunyan, John Milton, William Carey, Adoniram Judson, Luther Rice, Henrietta Shuck and many others will be represented. Brilliant musical features and modern lighting effects will combine to make the engaging theme of the pageant most effective.

Edwin S. Preston is chairman of publicity, one of the largest assignments, which includes not only the press but radio. Sam Shafer is executive secretary at the headquarters office in the municipal auditorium, and Miss Margaret Sprattlin is the office secretary.

FARM TREE PLANTING ACTIVITIES INCREASE

WASHINGTON, June 10.—(AP)—Farmers in 41 states and two territories have more than doubled their tree-planting activities since 1935, the Forest Service reported today.

The trees are distributed by states at cost or less in co-operation with the Agriculture Department. A total of 55,359,728 trees was distributed by state agencies for use of farmers under the program last year, compared with 41,700,000 in 1937, 35,800,000 in 1938 and 28,150,197 in 1935.

Distribution of trees for farm planting last year included: Georgia, 7,038,800.

"My Dad's the nicest man in the whole wide world, I bet'cha! Why I wouldn't swap my Dad for anybody... not even Dizzy Dean!" You probably wouldn't express your feelings in such childish words, now that you've grown up... but Dad still remains the first man in your heart—we bet'cha! He'd probably get all embarrassed if you came right out and told him so—and thanked him over again for all the grand and wonderful things he's done for you... But there's another way of letting him know that your heart belongs to him... and that's by putting some real honest-to-goodness thought behind that gift you're going to give him on His Day—next Sunday, the 18th!

Your Old Dad

By Glyndwr Williams.

You're the picture of your mother
On the day that we were wed;
You've the smile that made me love her,
Her eyes, and golden head.
On your cheek a dimple seems to play—
It fascinates me so—
Your face is radiant as the stars,
Your laugh, an afterglow.

When you were just a little tot
And sat upon my knee,
I'd make some funny faces just to Hear you laugh with glee.
Then when you were tired
And cuddled—oh, so near I'd tell you little bedtime tales
To drive away each fear.

The parade goes by before my eyes,
Still vivid with the years,
Of goblins, gnomes and princes
With smiles that veiled all tears.
Of course you'd interrupt me
But what could I expect?
To coin a bunch of lies like that Should hardly gain respect.

To raise you was a problem—
Without a mother's care.
Each day my heart was in the task,
At night a little prayer
To prepare you for this world of ours,
For life's initial test,
I know I wasn't perfect
But I did my level best.

Last week when you were married
And nothing went amiss,
I didn't dare to bother you
But all I ask is this:
If GOD will be so generous
As to bless you with a lad,
When he looks up into your eyes,
Just think of your old Dad.

Alley Cat Strolls on Carpet Of Royalty---But Not Long

NEW YORK, June 10.—(AP)—The alley stroller that believed in the old saw, "A cat may look at a king," was a disillusioned feline today. . . . It appeared suddenly for a stroll on the 300-foot red velvet carpet flung out for royal feet to walk on. . . . The police were ruffled and red-faced over this single untoward event on the royal couple's arrival and the cat was promptly shooed back to its mousing among the pier sheds.

Many commoner feet trod the royal carpet in the scramble for the bouquet the Queen discarded for a smaller one as the party sped away from the Battery. . . . One woman fell to her knees and kissed the carpet.

The tired old sod of Battery Park and its scrubby trees were saved from general destruction by police lines which held the crowds far back on the fringes. . . . Those who tried to enter the wide area reserved for dignitaries were told the King himself couldn't crash the line. . . . The best the pressing crowds could do was advance 150 feet or so into the park. . . . They caught only fleeting glimpses at the smiling, sunburned Queen and the King, deeply tanned and hale but apparently weary. . . . The best views of the royal pair were obtained in downtown skyscrapers, through field glasses.

Every Precaution. The city and federal governments left nothing undone in the way of precautionary measures. . . . Even the ocean bottom was inspected. . . . The department of docks sent a diver down Thursday to look over the underpinnings of Pier 1. . . . Apparently he found nothing more alarming than barnacles.

New York is by reputation the best policed city in the world but it had something less than ordinary protection today because most of the "finest" were detailed to guarding royalty. . . . A check-up showed that foot patrolmen were absent from Madison Park and Fifth avenues and other main arteries. . . . Prowl cars worked the area but crime apparently was taking a holiday along with the rest of the city.

The cops' womenfolk got a break. . . . They were guests of the city in one lane of the West Side Express highway, which had been closed to traffic, while the King and Queen rode down the open lane.

On Historic Soil. King George carried on an animated conversation en route to the fair with Mayor LaGuardia, a ready conversationalist.

The King, who indulges in a few quips about the unpleasantness between the crown and the colonies back in '76, landed on historic soil within eyesight was the site of a metal statue of his ancestor George III which was melted down for bullets which the Revolutionaries shot at the Redcoats and just across Bowling Green is the place where George Washington took the oath as first President of the United States—now the location of the sub-treasury building at Broad and Wall.

The King wore a two-tone outfit—dark gray oxford cutaway with trousers to match and a pearl top, which was greeted by oh's and ah's in a town where a topper seldom brings a murmur. . . . the Queen had on a pale blue crepe frock with a full-length cape of the same hue swinging from her shoulders. . . . her hat was a blue felt, turned up on one side and caught with a feather spray. . . . she carried a blue bag and wore her favorite two-strand pearl necklace.

Unlovely View.

Those who planned the trip from the Battery to the World's Fair couldn't have chosen a faster or more unlovely way. . . . it started up the ramshackle West Side, flanked on the left by pier sheds and across the Hudson river by industrial plants of New Jersey; and on the right by a hodge-podge of old brick in the Turkish-Armenian section far downtown, Greenwich Village, Hell's Kitchen and the tough Upper West Side where is located the notorious warrens of San Juan Hill. . . . It got better, however, when they turned into 72d street and entered the leafy roads through Central Park. . . .

They passed through part of Harlem, too. . . . all the while they got sideways glimpses of the great buildings and hotels but never nearer than the Hudson. . . . They passed through deep canyons between buildings, where commoners are wont to throw confetti made from telephone books and not bothering to tear them up sometimes.

The Triborough bridge is one of the wonders of the city they saw. . . . The ride up the Hudson to the Roosevelt estate at Hyde Park is one of the most eye-filling trips

DEBATES ON TRADE POLICY CONTINUES

Roosevelt Cornerstone Hotly Contested in Fifth Year of Life.

WASHINGTON, June 10.—(AP)—Secretary Hull's trade agreements program, cornerstone of President Roosevelt's foreign policy, will complete five years of activity Monday with debate still continuing as to whether it has helped, or harmed, the nation's commerce. The State Department can produce impressive figures to show a growth of foreign trade. But opponents argue that the United States' international commerce would have been even larger without the agreements.

It is an issue that has every indication of growing in intensity in the next 12 months, for next year the trade agreements act will come up for renewal in congress. Within the framework of trade agreements 60 per cent of the total United States foreign commerce is now carried on.

COMMUNITY CHEST TO PLAN 1940 WORK

Atlanta Agencies To Hold Study Meetings During Summer.

Planning of next year's service of the 33 Atlanta Community Chest agencies will begin this week with study meetings of representatives of the different agencies and the Chest budget committee, it was announced yesterday by Dr. Herman L. Turner, past president of the Chest and this year's budget committee chairman.

Out of the study meetings, to continue through the summer, the budget committee will arrive at the exact amount to be needed for next year and to be fixed as the goal for next fall's campaign, Dr. Turner stated.

Agencies giving family and adult care will meet with Harry Stone and J. S. Roberts, of the budget committee, and will include Family Welfare, DeKalb Family Service, Salvation Army, Atlanta and DeKalb Red Cross, Travelers' Aid, churches homes for girls, Community Employment Service, Jewish Federation for Social Service, Legal Aid Society, Social Service Index, Good Will Industries.

Agencies for public health, care of the sick and handicapped will meet with Cherry L. Emerson, J. W. Lee and Herman Heyman and include Community Shop for the Blind, Home for Incurables, Home for Old Women, Morris Hirsch Clinic and Atlanta Tuberculosis Association.

Agencies for care and protection of children, to meet with Dr. Turner and Mrs. Emmett L. Quinn are Child Welfare Association, Atlanta Child's Home, Sheltering Arms, Gate City Day Nurseries, Carrie Steel Pitts Home, Hebrew Orphans Home and Hillside Cottages.

Agencies for youth guidance and group work, to meet with Alvin B. Cates, D. F. McClatchey and G. K. Selden, are Y. W. C. A., Butler Street Y. M. C. A., Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, Camp Fire Girls, Jewish Educational Alliance and Urban League.

EXTENSION SEEN AS BOYS' CLUB AID

Directors Plan Additional Help for 950 Enrolled.

Plans for expansion of the Atlanta Boys' Club, which during the year has enrolled 950 underprivileged youths in a series of activities designed to promote honesty, kindness and fairness, will be evolved at a meeting of directors at 4 o'clock Wednesday afternoon.

Civic clubs of the city have joined enthusiastically in the objective to give wholesome, supervised play and recreation to the hundreds of boys denied park and other privileges.

Officers of the organization are Henry C. Heinz, president; Hal F. Hentz, vice president; Major R. B. Pittor, vice president; Jesse Draper, secretary, and Major R. J. Guinn.

The clubhouse is two and one-half miles from the nearest park and is open from 9 a. m. until 9 p. m.

King, Queen Admire Beauty of Mount Vernon---Give CCC Lads Big Hand

Wandering through the boxwood garden of George Washington, the King and Queen inspect Mount Vernon. Trailing them are the Mrs. Horace Towner, regent of the Mount Vernon Ladies' Association, and Charles Walls, superintendent.

President Roosevelt and King George talk it over after climbing into their car at Mount Vernon after visiting the plantation of Washington, who was a thorn in the side of another George. The King placed a wreath inside Washington's tomb.

A big day for the CCC camp at Fort Hunt, Va., as Their Majesties come a-visit. The King shakes hands with Sergeant John Draganza, CCC Director Fechner stands on the right; parasol hides the Queen; Mrs. Roosevelt, background center.

Country Squire Roosevelt Grooms King and Queen at Cool Retreat

President and His Majesty Will Have Opportunity to Discuss International Situation During Restful Stay at Hyde Park Home.

HYDE PARK, N. Y., June 10.—(P)—The ancestral home of President Roosevelt offered a welcome retreat tonight for King George and his Queen—wary but happy over the tremendous, day-long ovation with which New York city's millions greeted them.

After a swift drive up the Hudson river through a light but steady rain, the royal couple turned into the President's quiet estate at 6:41 p. m., Atlanta time, there to be greeted once again by Mr. and Mrs. Roosevelt.

With the President and his wife when the royal party swung up the tree-shaded drive were the President's 84-year-old mother, Mrs. James Roosevelt, and his son, James.

Welcome Along Route.
The President's wife stepped forward first to welcome the Queen with a handshake, then turned and introduced her visitor to her mother-in-law, after which the King moved forward so that she could be presented to him.

Over the great porch hung four flags, in this order: the royal standard, always evident wherever the King is; the British flag; the American Stars and Stripes; and the President's flag.

Members of the royal party said Poughkeepsie gave them the most enthusiastic welcome after New York city was left behind. State Department officials said about 1,000 persons per mile lined the highway for the entire 75-mile drive.

It was only yesterday in Washington their majesties and Mr. and Mrs. Roosevelt parted after a long round of formal affairs.

Find Quiet at Last.
The motor cavalcade whipped through the well-guarded countryside without delay, once the party was through with its engagement at Columbia University. Although Riverside drive in New York city was crowded with cheering thousands, the crowds thinned out as the party sped upstate, mainly because of the rain.

Within the century-old home of the President, the royal couple found quiet and an informal restfulness.

It was expected that King George and Queen Elizabeth would find the repose of the President's 1,200-acre estate in striking contrast to the pretentious grounds and palaces of Britain's sovereigns.

The President and Mrs. Roosevelt made a thorough, but quick survey of the estate shortly before their majesties left New York for Hyde Park, just to be sure everything was in order.

More Serious Talks.
In the cool study of the stone and stucco house, with ivy clamoring over its walls, President and King had their first chance to speak of more than pleasantries.

Mr. Roosevelt already had indicated that he and the King probably would touch on international affairs. While he said the conversations would not be of special significance, foreign offices the world over watched, but with almost certain utility, for any clue to what might pass between the heads of two powerful nations.

One bedroom each was set aside for the British monarchs. And they could retire as early as they wished, because no entertainment was planned after dinner—to which 30 guests were invited.

Mrs. Roosevelt told reporters there would be two tables because the dining room is small. Her sons and their wives were to sit at the smaller one.

Air of "Livability."
The Roosevelt home, almost cluttered in spots with bric-a-brac, books and furniture of various periods, is impressive chiefly for its air of "livability."

It is spacious enough for the family, but most of the British royal party had to remain on the King's blue and silver special train at near-by Poughkeepsie. Only two ladies in waiting, two gentlemen attendants of the King, and Prime Minister MacKenzie King, of Canada, were able to share in its hospitality for the night.

For three hours tomorrow afternoon, Mrs. Roosevelt said, George and Elizabeth "can do just what they please." They will be invited to drive about the state or countryside or to swim in a sparkling, blue-lined pool two miles through the woods near the President's Dutchess Hill cottage.

Those three hours of respite will be sandwiched between a picnic at the cottage and dinner at the "big house."

Will Go to Church.
The morning, however, was reserved for the President and King, first lady and Queen, to add the spiritual ties of worship at St. James E. scopal church to the bonds of friendship between England and America.

Fresh green stuffs and strawberries from the Roosevelt gardens were on the menu during the stay of their majesties.

"I never knew Ma to buy anything like that," Mrs. Roosevelt explained.

"Ma" is her affectionate name for the President's mother, the actual owner of Hyde Park house.

From a side porch on newly groomed lawns, the King and Queen may look down upon the Hudson, its waters nearly hidden by the verdant branches of tall old trees. Across the river diagonally is the "heaven" of Father Divine, New York negro evangelist.

NEW YORK ROARS A ROYAL WELCOME

left was put at a little more than 147,000. The great turnout was on the streets of New York—hundreds of thousands of obscure men and women and children who stood patiently to gaze at and cheer these young titular rulers of an empire of 500,000,000 people.

They landed near the site where the statue of another George—the third—had been melted down by the angry colonists to make bullets to fight a war for independence nearly two centuries ago and near the spot, too, where George Washington was inaugurated as first president of the United States.

Deafening Welcome.
But they landed in friendliness, in a scene where the old quarrel was forgotten in the memories of the long peace since, to a welcome as impressive, if not more noisy, than ever was given to any other men and woman reaching these shores.

As the destroyer Warrington—upon which they rode from near-by Fort Hancock, N. J., to Manhattan's tip at the Battery—pulled the Statue of Liberty, the King, slender and serious, went from starboard to port and stood stiffly at salute. The Queen stood rigid beside him.

The harbor, lying under a light haze in the intense sun, burst into tremendous noise and life.

Cutters Race Ahead.
Coast guard cutters racing on ahead scattered the pleasure craft from the area of the Battery pier. The whistles of harbor craft boomed out a rising bass roar; overhead cruised a fleet of the United States army's mighty "flying fortresses."

The city's fireboats spouted their shining streams; blimps went softly back and forth in the sky. The crowd at the historic Battery—as shabbily venerable an area as the King and Queen saw in their trip through the city and out to the World's Fair but brave in the colors of the Union Jack and the Stars and Stripes—train-

F. D. R. WILL FEED KING HOT DOGS IF SUN IS OUT TODAY

WASHINGTON, June 10.—(P)—A President and a King will picnic together tomorrow on a hill-top-by-the-Hudson made famous by Eleanor Roosevelt's honey outings for visiting princes and princesses.

Mrs. Roosevelt's flair for making home folks out of royal company has given the hot-dog an international reputation and made the President's woody New York retreat the most talked-of picnic spot in modern times.

Now it looks as if Dutchess Hill will cinch its place in history. If it isn't too hot, King George VI and Queen Elizabeth, with their party from the British court, will sample Eleanor Roosevelt's frankfurters.

Hot or not, the young British rulers will get a real American picnic, with mounds of country ham sent in from different states, cold turkey—smoked and plain—pickles and olives, buttered rolls and green salad.

If the sun plays fair, the British monarchs will share the hot dog treat—plus baked beans and Boston brown bread.

ed their throats in shouts of welcome.

Across the water, the army's batteries on Governor's Island boomed out the 21-gun salute.

Bands, perspiring in the heat, burst forth with the old hymn of the empire, "God Save the King," and with the national anthem, "The Star-Spangled Banner."

Their majesties walked across a wide red carpet in disembarking and were met by two top-hatted representatives of this city and state—Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia and Governor Herbert H. Lehman.

There was handshaking all around, and then Mrs. LaGuardia presented to the Queen a bouquet of red roses. Her majesty wore a pale blue dress with a cape, a hat of the same shade turned up at one side, and carried orchids.

The King, in an oxford gray cutaway, doffed his handsome gray topper and extended his hand.

With the Queen he entered a limousine, whose glass windows were bullet-proof, and set out on the ride to the fair. The band burst into "Rule Britannia" as the procession moved off slowly, under a rain of ticker tape—Lower Manhattan's traditional gesture of welcome but one which the authorities had sought to avoid.

Upon the roofs of the near-by buildings stood policemen armed with rifles, and on all the 51-mile route through the city picked detectives examined rooftops and overpasses.

The procession, following West street to Duane, the West Side elevated highway to 72d street, the East drive to Central Park, then north to 96th street, then to the great Triborough bridge and out Grand Central parkway to the fair, fell quickly behind schedule.

Slows Down Parade.
King George personally was responsible for slowing down the royal progress to a speed far less than that called for in the program.

Police Commissioner Lewis J. Valentine twice sent word back to the King's car that the "road was clear" only to get word by courier that his majesty and the Queen had agreed they should travel slowly through the city to give the people a chance to see them and for themselves to see the city.

At every available spot stood unnumbered thousands—some calling out greetings, some standing pop-eyed and awed at the only welcoming celebration of this kind ever held in this city of parades. Children—hundreds of thousands of them—stood in groups, waving the Union Jack.

The King and Queen saw most all of the city—its tenements and mighty skyscrapers, its best and its worst.

At the fair—a "World of Tomorrow" visited by a King and Queen whose traditions go far back into the world of yesterday—a throng saw them. The total number of those who got at least a glance at the royal entourage was figured by Commissioner Valentine at 3,000,000, counting the vast crowds along the way from the Battery to the fair grounds

YOUNG DAUGHTER OF REP. BROWN SEES KING'S TRAIN

SPECIAL TO THE CONSTITUTION.

WASHINGTON, June 10.—Perhaps no one in Washington got a greater thrill out of their majesties' visit here than Rosaline Brown, 10-year-old daughter of Representative Paul Brown, of Georgia, for she was shown through the royal train by Queen Elizabeth's lady in waiting, Baroness Numburnholme.

Representative Brown had taken Mrs. Brown and their daughter to the Union station from whence the latter two left for their home in Elberton about the same time that King George VI and Queen Elizabeth departed last night for New York. Thinking it would be nice for little Rosaline to see how British royalty traveled, Mr. Brown secured a train pass for her. She was immediately taken in tow by a lady in waiting, was given a royal rose and a promise that Queen Elizabeth would write her from Buckingham palace.

"King George and Queen Elizabeth are certainly a royal couple in more ways than one," Representative Brown said. "No two people could have been kinder to my daughter. My little girl was thrilled to death by the royal reception she got."

whose presence made the royal entourage more than half an hour late.

Another Salute.
As their car entered the grounds under escort, the entrance was cleared of all save police and representatives of the federal government.

The 21-gun salute roared out again—this time from Fort George Washington. Two dozen Indians, holding aloft the flags of the fair, stood at attention.

Above the roar of the motorcycle escort rose a long series of cheers and massed troops—400 soldiers, 200 marines, 200 sailors—snapped to attention. Two bands and a bugle corps played the British national anthem as the crowd screamed and whistled.

After reviewing the assembled troops in the fair's Court of Peace, the King and the royal party had luncheon in the fair's federal building, while outside bands steadily thumped out martial airs. The King appeared tired but the Queen showed no weariness.

Both shook hands, many hands—the hands of at least 300 persons in a reception in Perylon Hall, where 260 others, showing frank disappointment, were introduced collectively.

Italian Presented.
Among those presented was the Italian commissioner-general at the fair. Bowing before the King, he raised his arm in the Fascist salute.

Intermittent rain fell through the sunshine and the fair grounds, a glittering area of white modernistic buildings and green shrubbery, were alive with umbrellas and folded papers used as such. There was a curious mixture of the formal and the informal in the royal couple's visit to the fair, and it was seen, too, in the music which ranged from heavy marches to such popular stuff and the "Penny Serenade" and "Hold Tight."

The greatest demonstration there occurred when the King and Queen after luncheon—where they omitted dessert—stepped out on the terrace of the federal building. The crowd roared a great welcome and the Queen smiled broadly, but the King was more serious. In the interval between the British and American anthems he whispered to her and she nodded in acknowledgment.

BRITISH GLEEFUL OVER RECEPTION GIVEN TO RULERS

King Gets Craziest Welcome Ever,' Headline Chortles; Fascist Press Barely Mentions Visit.

LONDON, June 11.—(Sunday) (P)—The British and French press told the story of New York's reception to King George VI and Queen Elizabeth in large, ecstatic headlines today while newspapers in Rome and Berlin gave it brief mention on back pages.

The consensus of London's Sunday editions was that yesterday's welcome to the greatest city of the new world was "tumultuous." Paris newspapers called it "triumphal."

But in Berlin and Rome newspaper readers learned little more than the fact that the King and Queen had reached New York.

The Berlin Morgenpost, most widely read newspaper in the Nazi capital, headed its story: "America disregards courtly etiquette."

Notes "Cousin" Incident.

The German press noted that in Washington Vice President Garner slapped King George on the shoulder while Congressman Patton, Democrat, Texas, greeted him with "How are you, Cousin George?" and addressed the Queen as "Cousin Elizabeth."

The Italian public merely was told that the royal visitors arrived in New York, the bare details of who met them and what they did. The only thing approaching comment in Rome was the remark in some newspapers that although the United States and Britain had the same fundamental ideas, the United States was not contemplating becoming allied to Britain.

The news of the mammoth re-

Shades of Coolidge! King Has Dry Wit

WASHINGTON, June 10.—(P) King George's sense of humor was compared by Senator Pittman, Democrat, Nevada, today with that of the late President Calvin Coolidge, renowned for his dry, New England wit.

"You have some beautiful paintings here," the King was quoted as saying, as he surveyed the canvases in the capitol rotunda which depict early American history.

The King let his eye travel around the rotunda walls, taking in the paintings which depict the surrender of the English General Burgoyne at Saratoga in 1781 and the surrender of the General Cornwallis at Yorktown, in 1781.

Turning to Pittman, the King remarked, with a twinkle in his eye:

"Oh, yes, I see there are some of a later period, too."

ception rivaled the inauguration of a monument to Marshal Joffre in Paris for top place among French newspapers.

French Overjoyed.

The royal visit to the United States had the full approval of France as likely to stimulate American sympathies for the British and French.

A Sunday Express banner headline said: "New York Goes Crazy Over King and Queen." The tabloid Sunday Graphic's headline was: "King Gets Craziest Welcome Ever," and the Chronicle-Referee said: "New York Goes King Crazy."

A Sunday Graphic editorial headed "Conquest of Democracy," said: "Nothing in the career of their majesties touches the heart or influences the world so potentially as this phenomenal conquest of the most critically democratic nation in the world. It is magnificent and augurs well for peace."

At Warwick, Anthony Eden said that the people of the United States, who are the "most generous and hospitable in the world," seemed to have "excelled even themselves" in welcoming King George VI and Queen Elizabeth.

The former foreign secretary recently visited the United States himself.

A Wearying Day But Their Majesties Can Take It

This striking close-up of the King and Queen shows them still smiling despite the grind of parades, parties and handshakes.

They are leaving the British embassy for Washington's Union station and New York city, where they received a deafening welcome.

of 1 per cent, and in 1929, the paying passengers decreased 6,658,069 under 1927 and the gross revenue increased $106,510.37, or less than one-fourth of 1 per cent.

"In 1930, the number of paying passengers carried totaled 61,614,486, a decrease of 12,097,226, with a decrease of $328,664.71 or about three-fourths of 1 per cent.

"The loss of passengers and revenue of the company has been steady, year by year since 1929, and in 1937 (the last year that the company's information covers) the company transported 48,989,541 cash and ticket passengers, with a gross revenue of $3,730,240.43, a loss of approximately 25,000,000 paying passengers and a revenue loss of approximately $1,400,000 since 1921.

"After a 10-year trial of these fares, the facts shown in the information supplied by the company demonstrates beyond question that the increased fares have not given the company the increased revenue which it was believed it would do. During the same period the company has made reduction in fares on the Morningside, Ansley Park and Virginia-Highland lines, and admit that the reduction in fares has resulted in considerably more riders using the service and a substantial gain in revenue to the company. They also admit that the 5-cent Shoppers' Special buses operated in the downtown section in Atlanta are their best paying transportation operation in Atlanta.

"Experiments conducted during the same time in other cities and communities served by the Georgia Power Company in reduced fares have resulted in every case in passengers in a considerable number coming back to the cars and buses and given the company substantial increase in revenue.

"I shall, at the next meeting of the commission, ask that the rule nisi against the Georgia Power Company be set for a definite date in the near future and that hearing should be continued until a final determination of the matter is had after full information is given.

"The company, under the new fares, has lost approximately 35 per cent of its paying passengers, and approximately 25 per cent of its revenue under the 10-cent fare with four tickets for 30 cents.

"I, therefore, think it is time to discard the old fares that have proven unacceptable to the public and unprofitable to the company, and that lower fares be tried out in an effort to gain the lost business, serve the public better, and benefit the company financially."

New Destroyer Struts Its Stuff --And Does Everything But Talk

$5,500,000 U. S. Ship's Feats Called 'Astounding,' Boat Races 44 Miles an Hour, Stops Dead in 58 Seconds and Speeds 24 Miles an Hour in Reverse.

ABOARD U. S. S. HAMMANN, AT SEA, June 10.—(P)—They called on this new $5,500,000 destroyer to show her tricks today—and she answered by doing everything, figuratively speaking, but a loop-the-loop in the broad Atlantic.

What she did do was "astounding"—in the words of Senator Ernest Lundeen, Minnesota Farmer-Laborite—and breath-taking to other civilians aboard. For example, she raced through the water off Fire Island at between 39 and 40 knots (43 to 44 miles an hour to landlubbers), stopped dead in 58 seconds, or 2 1-2 lengths, turned like a racing car on a half-mile track, and speeded 20 knots astern, that is, in reverse.

The occasion for her strutting her stuff was her "builder's trials"—one of three trial voyages staged before the United States navy accepts her officially from her builder, the Federal Shipbuilding and Drydock Company. Aboard to watch her tricks were ranking navy officers, civilian representatives, and, for the first time in recent naval history, a group of newspapermen.

The 341-foot, 1-500-ton ship, one of a dozen of her type, was launched February 4. She was named for the late Ensign Charles Hazeltine Hammann, of the United States naval reserve, and represents the very latest in design and power equipment.

Her two high-pressure, high-temperature turbine units develop enough power to lift the 300,000-with the article photographs of Vice President Garner, Secretaries Hull and Wallace, Postmaster General Farley, Senators Taft, Republican, Ohio; Vandenberg, Republican, Michigan; and Lodge, Republican, Massachusetts, and Thomas Dewey, district attorney of New York.

Secretary Wallace took public note of the article by saying at a press conference that "I am sure all members of the cabinet whom Secretary Ickes has honored are completely loyal to the President."

Ickes said the publication also had "distorted, mutilated, supplemented and transposed the article itself."

Publisher Replies:
Apprised of Ickes' criticism, Gardner Cowles Jr., publisher of "Look," authorized this statement: "When Look purchased the article from Mr. Ickes he knew exactly how it was to be used, and he has since approved it.

"In editing Mr. Ickes' article the editors of Look exercised scrupulous care to preserve intact the message of his original text. With the exception of a few words inserted to describe pictures, the article as published contains no words that were not written by Mr. Ickes.

"Because Mr. Ickes preferred the article in its original form, Look has agreed to publish his text in full in its next issue . . . and invites its readers to judge whether the article as originally published changed the meaning of what he wrote by so much as a jot."

COLESCOTT NAMED NEW KLAN WIZARD

by any minority. My battle will be an active campaign of positive action in behalf of those suffering millions. I shall not engage in a negative campaign against a small minority about whom no one need worry."

As to political expressions, Colescott offered: "The Klan is opposed to Communism, Nazism, Fascism and every other ism of alien origin. We do not hold with any citizen that the President of the United States has the right to violate his oath of office five minutes after taking over and through the establishment of military force liquidate any portion of our citizens or deprive them of their freedom. We are for civil laws, courts and juries."

Had General in Mind.

As to just what that paragraph of his platform meant, he said: "I had General Moseley in mind when I wrote that. I can't understand an American citizen suggesting the use of martial law to deprive the American citizen of his relative wealth, comfort and happiness. I believe no man should be ruled by martial law. If the general public is properly informed, it will not tolerate such government."

As to foreign policy, Colescott said:

"We are opposed to any group of people abroad setting up the conditions under which we Americans have to fight for their liberty."

As to his confidence in the principle of the American plan of government, he said:

"I am confidently looking forward to the day when the United States has mopped up with anybody who attempts to deprive our people of their liberties."

And, as to religion: "We believe in the Constitution of the United States and the amendments thereto, which provide for religious freedom, and shall ever strive for the complete separation of church and state."

Election System.
The Klan's system in electing Colescott to their highest office illustrates the grip which the wizard has on his fellow members.

The wizard appoints the grand dragons in the various states, subject to their acceptance by the states.

"We are always careful," said Colescott, "to appoint a man who is popular among his own Klansmen. Sometimes they are rejected but rarely."

These grand dragons then elect the wizard.

"What is the membership of the Klan nationally?" Colescott was asked.

"We never reveal that," he answered. "One grand dragon doesn't know how many members are under another grand dragon."

Initiation fees are $10 to $25 and annual dues $3 to $8 as fixed by the local Klans.

Born in Indiana.

Born in Terre Haute, Ind., the son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Colescott, the new wizard was graduated from Terre Haute Veterinary College in 1917 and enlisted immediately in the army. He served overseas with the first division, and after 23 months was transferred, after the war, to the fifth division. He became a second lieutenant.

Officially connected with the Klan since 1923, he served as grand dragon in Ohio and as "imperial representative" in Texas, Pennsylvania, Indiana, Michigan and Kentucky. He lives at 8 Collier road, is married and has a daughter, 14, a student at North Fulton High school.

For the last two years, Colescott has been in the Atlanta headquarters as chief aide to Doctor Evans, to whom he has always been loyal. His promotion to the wizardry means a continuance of the Evans policies, softened extensively in the last 10 years as prosperity and age have mellowed him.

Colescott intends to establish his headquarters in the old Klan building at Buckhead, once the seat of activities when the Klan was a flourishing agency, nurturing policies which Evans has discarded.

SALARY SCHEDULE FOR TEACHERS IN GEORGIA ADOPTED

State Board of Education Sets Amounts for Next Year at $10,100,000; Finance Body To Meet.

A salary schedule for state teachers amounting to approximately $10,100,000 for 1939-40 has been adopted by the State Board of Education, it was announced yesterday as the board prepared to notify county school authorities immediately just how much money they can expect from the state during the next fiscal year.

The finance committee of the board is to meet Wednesday to determine county allotments on the basis of anticipated revenue. Since no new tax laws go into effect this year, it was said that the receipts the next fiscal year will approximate those of 1938-39—when the state was able to pay the schools only on a basis of 86 per cent of the appropriation of $9,637,000, or, enough only to pay the teachers three and one-half months of the "guaranteed" seven-month school term.

Meanwhile, Dr. E. G. Kirby, chairman of the Carroll County Board of Education and president of the department of school superintendents and board members, predicted his county would be "unable to open schools for the fall term" unless the legislature provides revenue for salaries already due.

Strike Mediation Is Favored

Public Believes in Labor Unions But Is Against Closed Shop Principle, Gallup Poll Discloses.

By DR. GEORGE GALLUP, Director, American Institute of Public Opinion. Copyright, 1939.

NEW YORK, June 11.—What does the American public think about labor unions?

That question is in the forefront today with such important states as Oregon, Minnesota and Pennsylvania passing stringent laws curbing the activities of the unions, and with sharp pressure being put on congress and the President by businessmen for the modification of the Wagner labor act.

It is four years this month since congress passed the Wagner act with its arsenal of provisions intended to protect labor in its rights to organize, but today a nationwide survey by the American

Public's Attitude on Unions

The following chart of American public opinion toward labor summarizes more than 30 nation-wide surveys conducted in the last three years by the American Institute of Public Opinion:

A majority (70 per cent) of Americans say they are in favor of labor unions today. Fewer Americans say they favor unions now, however, than said so three years ago, before the wave of sit-down strikes. (Favoring labor unions three years ago—76 per cent.)

Sit-down strikes are opposed by the voters and a majority (67 per cent) favor state laws to make them illegal.

In spite of the adoption of the "union shop" principle in several industries, the general public has not yet accepted the idea that all workers should be required to join the union. (Opposing "union shop"—71 per cent; opposing closed shop—73 per cent.)

The public approves the basic purposes of the Wagner labor act, but the largest number of persons with opinions on the act (48 per cent) believe that it should be amended to make it fairer to employers, while 18 per cent think it should be repealed and the remaining 34 per cent think it should be left unchanged.

To protect the public's interest, a great majority of voters (86 per cent) say there should be an automatic federal mediation system which would swing into action before a strike could be called. A majority also favor laws regulating the conduct of strikes themselves (84 per cent).

There is also a widespread belief that the government should regulate labor unions much as the government regulates business organizations (Favoring government charters for labor unions—75 per cent).

The AFL has greater popularity with the rank-and-file of Americans than has the CIO, and President Green, of the AFL, is more popular than John L. Lewis (Preferring Green—80 per cent). Just before the November, 1938, elections, the Institute found that 55 per cent of the voters thought a CIO endorsement of a candidate might cause them to vote against the candidate, while only 12 per cent would vote for the candidate and the rest would be indifferent.

By a vote of more than 3 to 1, however, the public is on record against the use of "citizens' committees" and vigilante groups in strikes.

GALLUP POLL

Institute of Public Opinion shows that the average American wants some changes in the relations of labor and business and labor and the public.

Favor Labor Unions.

1. The Institute's survey shows that the great majority of Americans are in favor of labor unions and believe in labor's right to organize.

2. In spite of the victory of John L. Lewis and the United Mine Workers in winning the "union shop" in the soft coal fields of Pennsylvania, West Virginia and Kentucky, the general public has not yet accepted the principle of either the "union shop" or the closed shop.

3. Tired by repeated strike troubles, the great majority of Americans favor an automatic federal mediation system for all disputes between employers and organized labor, such as is now in effect in the railway and maritime industries.

Amendments Favored. Finally, recent surveys show that although the public approves the aims of the Wagner act, there is substantial sentiment for revising the act to make it fairer to business. Only one person in three says it should be left unchanged.

The public's attitudes go a long way toward explaining the severe labor curbs that have been enacted in recent months in half a dozen states. And just as the public's reaction to the sit-down strikes in 1937 foreshadowed the anti-sit-down legislation of 1939, so today's survey may indicate some of the future directions of United States labor policy.

Favor Mediation.

The idea of automatic federal mediation before a strike could be called has had the backing in recent weeks of Senator Wagner, of New York, and William Leiserson, newly appointed member of the National Labor Board and former head of the railway mediation board.

To test the support for the idea throughout the country the Institute asked a carefully selected cross-section of American voters in every state:

Would you favor a law requiring employers and unions to submit their differences to a federal labor board before a strike could be called?

KAHN CO. NAMED DE SOTO AGENCY

Plymouths Also To Be Sold by Dealer in DeKalb County.

George P. Dean, regional manager for the DeSoto Motor Corporation, division of the Chrysler Corporation, announced Saturday the appointment of the Kahn Motor Company as DeSoto and Plymouth dealers for Decatur and DeKalb county.

This new agency, located at 314 Church street, is headed by Nathan Kahn, who has been identified with DeSoto sales in Decatur for the past two years. A former student of the University of Alabama, he left school to enter business in Montgomery, where he remained until four years ago. He has been associated with the automobile business here since leaving Montgomery.

He has a staff that represents many years of experience in the automobile business, men who are well-known figures in retail selling circles both in Decatur and Atlanta. They are Roy Lewis, T. A. Rutledge, R. P. Lane, B. R. Brown and Jess Brown.

The company is now showing a complete line of DeSoto and Plymouth cars and invites visits to their new establishment during formal opening all this week.

zest and excitement of competing with other youngsters of their own age for the thrill of coming in a winner and of capturing one of the many prizes offered in zone events and the north Georgia championship. Then their is the culmination of competing in, and possibly winning, the national championships, which will be run at Akron, Ohio, August 13, and in which the flower of juvenile racers of the nation will be entered.

Many prizes have been added to the list already announced, the awards to be made by The Constitution, the John Smith Chevrolet Company, Downtown Chevrolet Company, Decatur Chevrolet Company and the East Point Chevrolet Dealer, Inc., all of whom are co-operating in sponsoring the race.

These gifts include a complete woodworking power tool shop, which will be awarded the winner of the Atlanta race; a Firestone racing bicycle for second place winner, the gift of the Firestone Service Stores; clothing, medals and other awards.

To the winner of the north Georgia championship, to be run at Soap Box Derby Downs July 22, will go a miniature motor-driven automobile, the gift of the Devison-Paxon Company, and to others placing will go a Coyle wrist watch and a trip to the national races, with all expenses paid.

The grand prize, to be awarded the winner of the Akron finals, will be a four-year college course at any college which the fortunate youngster cares to select.

In addition, prizes will be and all boys have been urged to enter the race being held in the community nearest them. Application blanks can be obtained from Chevrolet dealers in West Point, Newnan, Carrollton, Conyers, Marietta, Madison, Monroe and Gainesville.

Races will be held in each of these cities, the winners to compete in the north Georgia championship event for the winners to compete in the finals at Akron.

Stress has been laid by officials in charge of the Soap Box Derby on the fact that all boys entering must read the 1939 rules carefully. Many changes have been made this year, it was pointed out, and no excuse of unfamiliarity with the rulings will be taken should competitors fail to measure up to the required standards.

Rule changes embrace wheel-base measurements, bearings and other details of racer construction, and any car violating the rules will not be allowed to enter, it was announced.

Several veteran contenders in previous derbies held under the auspices of The Constitution and local Chevrolet dealers are planning to enter the championship finals again this year. Among this number is Lamar McDaniel, winner of last year's North Georgia championship and a runner-up in the Akron finals.

Boys desiring to acquire accessories for their home-built racers have been asked to call at The Constitution where they will be informed of the plan by which the necessary equipment can be obtained.

show. The most frequent comment is, "It would protect the public's side of the case."

Support for mediation comes from persons in the lower income groups as well as from the "middle class" and from the upper income level. Only 10 persons in every hundred, on the average, say they have no opinion on the subject.

Plan Explained.

Mediation would call for all parties in a labor dispute to submit their cases to a permanent federal board. If the board could suggest no way out of the disagreement, an investigating committee made up of citizens and experts would be appointed by the White House to study the case and make a public report.

If an agreement did not then follow, a strike could still be reported to, but not before a "warning" and waiting" period had elapsed.

The vote in today's survey by income groups is as follows:

	Mediation. Favor	Oppose
Upper Income Group	84% 16%
Middle Income Group	87 13

NORTH ATLANTA TO IGNORE JURY'S RECOMMENDATION

Charges Against Suburb and Urging Its Charter Be Revoked Cited as Unfair by Mayor Libby.

The town of North Atlanta will ignore the recommendations of the DeKalb county grand jury that its charter be revoked and its monies and records seized by Governor Rivers until a meeting of its council Tuesday night, Dr. Arthur S. Libby, mayor, announced last night.

The chief executive of the town that levies no taxes but exists on fines and forfeitures asserted that the charges made against North Atlanta by the grand jury were "inaccurate and unfair." He said he would take no official cognizance of the report.

In the meantime, Governor Rivers was out of the city but attaches of his office said he had received no official notice of the grand jury's request to impound the records, money and charter of the 7500-population suburban town stretching along Peachtree road.

The grand jury, of which Mell Turner is foreman, investigated numerous charges that North Atlanta was a "speed trap" and that cases were made without cause by its officers.

'Gone With the Wind' Painting To Be Presented Rivers

"Gone With the Wind" will be going to the Governor's mansion, Wilbur Kurtz, Atlanta artist, who is technical director on matters of historical fact in connection with filming of the famous story, stands by his painting of the old governor's mansion at Milledgeville. Characters from the novel occupy the foreground of the painting. One of them, a man on horseback, was painted from a photograph of Leslie Howard, film star. Kurtz said he will present the painting to Governor Rivers. Kurtz is a well-known historian, besides being an artist.

HOUSE WOULD HIKE OLD AGE BENEFITS

a month, as would the contribution for aid to the blind.

Old age assistance is intended for the indigent aged and is distinct from the old age insurance benefits. The states must match federal funds for this purpose, dollar-for-dollar.

Other Provisions. Federal contributions to states for aid to dependent children would be changed from a basis of one federal dollar to two state dollars to straight dollar-for-dollar matching. Estimated cost $29,000,000.

The 3 per cent unemployment compensation tax would be applied only to the first $3,000 of an individual's compensation, instead of all compensation. Estimated savings to taxpayers $85,000,000.

Tax delinquency provisions would be eased. Estimated savings to taxpayers $15,000,000. A plan would be inaugurated whereby states could reduce their unemployment compensation taxes if they had adequate reserves for unemployment benefits. The social security board estimated that if states acted promptly they could reduce tax burdens $50,000,000 to $75,000,000 in this calendar year and $175,000,000 next year.

A special trust fund would be set up for old age pension funds and the amount of the reserve would be reduced drastically. It was estimated that under present law the fund would reach $47,000,000,000 by 1980. The amendments would limit the fund to three times the size of the highest amount likely to be paid out in any one year.

NEW ORLEANS POLICE PATROL 'SUICIDE' SPAN

NEW ORLEANS, June 10.—(P) State police today began a 24-hour patrol of the 150-foot high Huey P. Long bridge over the Mississippi river to prevent suicides. Captain Theophile Landry of the state police made the announcement today. Yesterday a young man believed to be Gaston Rose, 19, leaped from a bridge railing.

That plunge was the fourth of its kind since the bridge has been in operation.

in the United States for development of efficient facilities across the Isthmus of Tehuantepec which would provide a direct outlet for oil shipments to Japan.

Informed sources there said a former official of the Mexican Communications Department had gone to the United States seeking help of shipping and financial interests.

Hungarian Agreement. Meanwhile, German Minister of Interior Wilhelm Frick returned to Berlin from Budapest with what diplomats described as agreement to a far-reaching co-ordination of Hungarian and Nazi internal policies.

Quarters close to the government declared that Frick, in conferences lasting five days, had been given expressions of Hungary's willingness to:

1. Consider fully the wishes of the German minority.
2. Harmonize the police with those of Germany.
3. Put her administration at the disposal of anti-Communist activities to be carried on by members of the anti-comintern pact.

were approached on a street corner by a number of German policemen, apparently intoxicated.

An exchange of words followed and the Czechs, unwilling to argue, withdrew to a small district police station and locked the doors.

The Germans followed, entered the building and began shooting. Mueller was shot in the head.

No New Reprisals. In Prague, the Reich protector for Bohemia-Moravia, Baron Konstantin Von Neurath, decided to "abstain from reinforcing the present exceptional measures" against citizens of this Czech industrial town for the killing of the sergeant, Wilhelm Kniest.

Von Neurath, who had ordered the previous restrictions placed on Kladno's 19,000 citizens, intervened tonight to spare them further penalties, even though it had been announced that new "restrictive measures" would be enforced if Kniest's slaying were not solved by 8 p. m. (2 p. m., Atlanta time) tonight.

One hour before the deadline, Von Neurath's office issued a statement saying "the conduct of the population enables the Reich protector to dispense with additional measures on the expiration of the time limit set by the authorities."

Dozens Questioned. The commander of the German police, who have taken complete charge of Kladno, said Kniest's body was found in a street Thursday morning, declared tonight that "definite progress has been made."

He refused to say whether the killers were among dozens of persons being questioned but admitted that more than one man must have shot at the German policeman.

Referring to an autopsy at Prague, the commander said: "He was struck by bullets of different caliber and it is hardly possible that one man would have shot with two pistols."

Three bullets struck Kniest, two of nine millimeter diameter and one of only six. Since he had not fired his own gun, it was believed he was the victim of a surprise attack.

The German police were of the opinion that the killing was the culmination of a well-organized plan.

"The assassins wanted to shoot someone in German uniform," one officer said. "The possibility of personal motives has been pretty well discounted."

"Kniest's Misfortune." "It was merely Kniest's misfortune that he walked down the street alone when the killers' plans were ready."

(In Berlin the Deutsche Diplomatisch-Politische Korrespondenz, semi-official mouthpiece of the foreign office, accused foreign countries, especially England, of fostering unrest among the Czechs. The Czechs themselves, and not Germany, are bound to suffer as a result, Korrespondenz said.)

"The Reich can meet attempts to stir trouble with all proper means and, if it must be, with force," said Korrespondenz.)

Indiana will restore buildings and sites of New Harmony's one time communal settlement, famous in the 19th century as the scene of a "new order."

Effect on Social Security Payments Under New Plan

WASHINGTON, June 10.—(P) Here is how the social security amendments approved by the house today would affect monthly old age insurance payments to a worker who averaged $100 a month:

Years Coverage	No Payments	Present Plan (Marital Status Unaffected)	Revised Plan (Single Mar'd)
3	$25.75	$25.75	$25.75
5	$26.25	$26.25	$26.25
10	$27.50	$27.50	$27.50
20	$30.00	$30.00	$30.00
30	$32.50	$32.50	$32.50
40	$35.00	$35.00	$35.00

Under the revised plan, the larger "married" payments would be due only if the wife also was aged 65. If she had worked and was entitled to "primary" benefits herself, the married benefit would not be paid unless the total of her and her husband's primary benefits was less than the married benefit. In other words, the husband and his wife could take their choice of each receiving the "single" benefit payment to which they were entitled or the "married," whichever was larger.

The present law provides for a lump-sum payment—of three and one-half times what the workers has paid in—to his survivors in case he dies before reaching 65.

The revised plan provides monthly payments to a dependent child, widow, or parent (over 65) on the following scale, if the worker averaged $100 a month:

Years Coverage	Parent	Widow and Child	Child
3	$12.88	$19.31	$32.19
5	13.13	19.69	32.61
10	13.75	20.63	34.38
20	15.00	22.50	37.50
30	16.25	24.38	40.63
40	17.50	26.25	43.75

Provision is made in the revised plan for lump-sum payments to the estate of a worker who has no survivors entitled to benefits under the above schedule. These will be six times the monthly benefit due under his coverage. After three years coverage the payment, if the average wage had been $100 a month, would be $154.50 compared with $126 under the present plan; after 40 years coverage it would be $210, compared with $168 under the present plan.

500,000 IN MEXICO MOURN DEAD FLYER

MEXICO CITY, June 10.—(P) Francisco Sarabia, Mexico's Knight of the air, returned home today to rest in death in one of the greatest tributes the republic ever accorded one of its heroes.

A crowd of 200,000 thronged the airport for the arrival of a United States army "super flying fortress" which landed in mid-afternoon with the body of the flyer after a non-stop flight from Washington.

Another 300,000 lined streets along the four-mile route from the airport to the Federal Communications building in the heart of the city where the beloved flyer was borne to lay in state.

PLANS COMPLETED FOR 21ST MEETING OF GEORGIA LEGION

Dance, Floor Show and
of Convention Which Will Open on June 20.

Arrangements have been completed for the twenty-first annual convention of the Georgia department, American Legion, to be held in Atlanta for three days beginning Tuesday, June 20.

Indications point to a large attendance, Vernon R. Frank, commander of the fifth district and chairman of the convention committee, said yesterday.

Congressman Martin Dies, of Texas, chairman of the special house committee investigating un-American activities, will be one of the principal speakers appearing on the convention program, it was announced yesterday by Logan Kelley, state commander of the American Legion.

Congressman Dies will address a public meeting at the municipal auditorium at 8 o'clock the night of June 20. His talk is expected to be based on the subject of Americanism, stressing in particular the work of his committee in suppressing propaganda and organizations inimical to the American form of government.

The program in detail, as announced by Commander Frank, follows:

Tuesday, June 20.
(Anasley hotel for Legionnaires. Registration to 8:15 (Henry Grady hotel for Auxiliaries). (Atlanta hotel for 40 and 8.)
9:30 A. M.—Conducted tour through Ford plant. (Fleet of cars will be at the Anasley hotel and Henry Grady hotel at 9 to take those who wish to go through the plant and return them to the hotel. This trip will take about two hours and present ticket for admission.)

We try a farm, in our search to find one person in the United States not benefited by aluminum

JIM MADE A FARMER OUT OF US

(We found Jim's farm about 3 miles north of Route 30. Jim, himself, was just starting his tractor. There were the usual greetings, and we introduced ourselves as from Aluminum Company of America.)

JIM SAID, "Say, you fellows are just a couple of weeks too late. One of the men putting up our new electric line told me the wires were aluminum. It was the first time I knew aluminum was used for that. Anyway, it set me thinking."

"I remembered seeing Homer Adams painting his barn with aluminum paint, and then it came to me that this tractor and a lot of my other machinery was painted with aluminum paint, too . . . at the factory."

"When I remembered that my milking machine pail is made of aluminum, too, I gave up. Aluminum has come to the farm! And all the time I thought I couldn't afford aluminum. Guess it kind of crept up on me!"

So we told Jim the story of how we got started making aluminum fifty years ago when it was too expensive to be much good to anybody; how hard it is to get aluminum out of its ore, and how the aluminum business is just like any other business—a job of making a useful product cheap enough to go to work for the greatest number of people.

"Why," Jim said, "you people are like farmers. You have nothing to start with but earth. You dig, and you cultivate in laboratories, and use the latest machinery, and by and by you get a crop—only yours is metal. I raise hogs for a living, but I suppose city people don't often thank me for their breakfast bacon. You've given me a new slant on the aluminum business."

Maybe we will still be able to find that elusive person who has not been benefited by aluminum. If you think you know any such person, we should be glad to hear from you. Aluminum Company of America, 1930 Gulf Building, Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania.

Girl Finishes Elementary School Making No Grade Lower Than 'A' Fan.

Mary Helen Kelley, 12, of 312 Conley drive, East Point, made her bid for fame yesterday.

She presented report cards on her school work from kindergarten through elementary school, and on them was nothing but "A" grades—271 of them.

The daughter of Mrs. J. W. Kelley, Mary Helen entered kindergarten at the Capitol View school. She attended grade school at Central Park in East Point, and took a leading part in promotion exercises there this year when Principal B. D. Purcell presented her certificate.

She says she intends to make only "A's" when she goes through Russell High school during the next four years.

Mary Helen's other claim to fame lies in the fact she has attended every opening day game of the Atlanta Crackers since she was three months old.

BONFIRE PLANNED FOR UNSAFE TIRES

Hemphill Avenue and 14th Street Is Scene of Safety Week Climax.

Thousands of old and worn automobile tires that will be taken out of service this week to prevent accidents will be burned in a huge bonfire at Hemphill avenue and Fourteenth street at 8 o'clock Saturday night.

The bonfire will climax Atlanta's observance of Tire Safety Week, a week during which Atlanta's attention will be directed toward the dangers of riding on worn tires which have been held responsible for a large number of the thousands of accidents in and around the city each year.

MARY HELEN KELLEY.
With Handful of "A's."

Many of the tires which will be destroyed will have the appearance of good tires but will have been found to be not road-worthy by the discovery of glass, particles of iron, steel or gravel that have worked beneath the tread and so injured the fabric as to make the tire a hazard.

Parking facilities will be available for those who want to drive to the site of the bonfire, the committee in charge said Saturday.

The tires will be stacked in such a fashion that the bonfire will not endanger adjoining property nor threaten spectators, the committee said.

ART STAFF PLANS BEAUTY DIRECTORY

Atlanta's Most Attractive Points To Be Listed.

A list of the most attractive points in Atlanta—literally, a beauty directory—is being made by the art staff of the High Museum of Art for the benefit of landscape classes.

The classes, beginners, advanced students and professionals, begin a six-week summer course tomorrow. Classes will be conducted by the regular staff of the winter school.

When the listing of Atlanta's most attractive points has been completed, it will be posted in the museum with the artists' conceptions of the place.

South Georgia Mules Dying In Heat; 92 High Predicted

Man's faithful friend, the mule, is having his troubles these overwarm June days.

While the north Georgia variety seems to be taking it very well, reports drift up from south Georgia that the mule isn't as tough as his reputation.

Approximately 30 have died of heatstroke in Laurens county; Abbeville reports six dead and 20 others in a bad way, while Americus mentions several dead and many ill.

Reasons vary. Laurens county thinks the farmers, late with their plowing because of the rains, might have overworked their animals.

Abbeville advances the theory that the mules have not been sheared or their blood warmed up enough for such hot weather.

Americus warns farmers to give first aid to their stock at the first sign of heatstroke. Without help, the animal either dies immediately, or is paralyzed and dies later. All three centers report the veterinarians very busy.

Meanwhile, the weather bureau forecasts another of those days that seem to be tougher on mules than humans. Skies will be partly cloudy, and occasional showers are expected.

Temperatures will range between 70 and 92 degrees.

South America Lacks in Trained Soldiers

Of 85,000,000 Men in Ten Nations, Only 2,000,000 Could Take Field.

BUENOS AIRES, June 10.—(AP)—The 10 South American nations could raise little more than an "internal security force" from among their 85,000,000 inhabitants in the event war threatened the Western Hemisphere.

That is the opinion of military observers who say it is doubtful that more than 2,000,000 could be armed effectively from this huge supply of manpower, including some of the finest native fighters in the world.

These observers figure this situation—in which lack of money largely spells the difference between potential manpower and military strength—is one reason the United States quietly is inviting various Latin American army and navy leaders to conferences.

Argentina and Brazil Alone. Argentina and Brazil alone have been able to shape an armaments expansion program which, after a fashion, keeps pace with the world rearmament race.

But even these two countries have weaknesses which tactical experts say would limit their wartime efforts to maintaining order within South America, preventing uprisings from within and protecting essential sources of supply.

Argentina has completed an $11,000,000 air expansion program and now has the finest air force in South America.

Brazil, keeping pace with her sister nation, likewise has purchased many new warplanes.

In the number of army effectives, military observers rank South American countries as follows:

	In Service	Trained Reserves
Argentina	40,000	500,000
Bolivia	5,000	100,000
Brazil	100,000(*)	250,000
Chile	36,000	180,000
Colombia	11,000	40,000
Ecuador	5,500	25,000
Paraguay	5,000	50,000
Peru	19,000	25,000
Uruguay	7,000	100,000
Venezuela	9,000	2,500

South American army leaders are concentrating on air power because of the absence of adequate railway or highway communications.

Argentina leads in air strength with about 250 planes. There also are 132 naval aircraft.

About 200 Planes. Together, Brazil's army and navy have about 200 planes, many of them new first-line craft purchased to replace obsolete models.

Brazil recently bought 32 powerful Vultee attack bombers from the United States.

Chile's air strength is rated at about 150 effective planes. Other South American nations have smaller but efficient air forces, several making regular replacements from the United States, Italy or Germany to keep their planes up-to-date. In all South America there are only five battle ships.

The newest of these—owned by Chile—is 26 years old. Argentina's two battleships were built in 1901 and those of Brazil a year later.

Here is the ranking of the leading South American naval powers in modern vessels:

	Cruiser	Destroyer	Submarine
Argentina	3(*)	16	3
Brazil	2	10()	4
Chile	3()	10	9
Peru	2	2	4
Colombia	1	2	0

HOUSE GROUP FAVORS $65,000,000 TVA BONDS

WASHINGTON, June 10.—(AP)—A house military subcommittee recommended legislation today to authorize the Tennessee Valley Authority to issue $65,000,000 worth of bonds to finance its purchase of the properties of two private power companies.

The TVA had asked for authorization of a $100,000,000 bond issue.

The $100,000,000 issue was requested in order to enable the TVA to advance funds to municipalities seeking to use TVA power but Chairman May, Democrat, Kentucky, said the committee decided the $65,000,000 figure would be sufficient.

Junior Assistants at Y. W.'s Camp Highland

CAMP HIGHLAND TO OPEN JUNE 20

6 Weeks of Outdoor Sport, Study and Recreation Offered by Y. W. C. A.

Six weeks of supervised recreation, outdoor sports, regular hours of eating and sleeping, learning new skills, living co-operatively and acquiring new appreciation of nature marks the program offered young girls and their mothers by the Y. W. C. A. this summer when Camp Highland begins its 21st season June 20.

Camp Highland has been a popular spot for campers for many years, due partly because it is easily accessible by train and motor. It is located 12 miles from Atlanta, just off the Marietta highway. Camp equipment consists of 11 screened bungalows, an open air recreation pavilion, a lodge, screened dining room, arts and crafts room, a health house and office, concrete swimming pool, tennis courts, a riding ring, and 107 acres of rolling hills. Nickajack creek is used for fishing.

Miss Frances Keller, director of both adolescent and adult camp activities and Y. W. C. A. health education secretary for seven years, will be in charge. Assisting her with the first-year girls will be Miss Jessie Primrose, kindergarten specialist of Greenville, S. C., who will begin her second year at Camp Highland this year. The camp staff and their duties include: Miss Marjorie Warwick, Decatur, swimming; Miss Betty Ann Brooks, Agnes Scott, hiking and woodcraft; Miss Grace Wilbanks, Ocala, riding and dramatics; Miss Helen Price, Savannah, dancing; Miss Edna Harrell, land sports; Miss Ruby Joe Champion, Harrogate, Tenn., arts and crafts; Miss Elizabeth Carr, Warrenton, pianist; Miss Sara Lawrence, Atlanta, business manager; Miss Nell Stanton, dietitian; and Miss Mable Ward, Grady, graduate, camp nurse.

Junior assistants, leaders in high schools and colleges, to be on the staff, will be Barbara Ann Hazenore, Margaret Stewart, Betty Tidwell, Frances Spain, Mary Ann Henry, Clara Rountree, Elizabeth Harrell, Virginia Wallace, Ruth Dillon, Margaret Brooks, Virginia Collar, Frances Radford and Ann Rye Smith.

NEW RULE ASKED ON BATTLEFIELD

Bond Holders of Kennesaw Association Seek To Void Condemnation Action.

Four holders of first mortgage bonds of the insolvent Kennesaw Mountain Battlefield Association filed papers in United States district court yesterday, asking that condemnation proceedings by which the federal government had acquired 400 acres of land for use as a park be voided, that all judgments be set aside, and another assessment of the value of the land be made.

They were Mrs. Stella T. Rambo,

Mrs. Harry T. Holland, George M. Brown Jr. and Dan Y. Sage. The four alleged all previous steps were void, as they were never served or made parties to the proceedings. The proceedings whose validity they question were recently affirmed by the supreme court, after being in the lower courts for more than a year. The supreme court upheld Circuit Judge Samuel H. Sibley's action in raising a jury's low valuation of the land to $16,000, during a trial to fix its worth after assessors, the government, and the owners had failed to reach an agreement. At the time, Judge Sibley was sitting for District Judge E. Marvin Underwood.

National Park Service already has begun work on improving the disputed acreage, and a date had been set to distribute the $16,000 to the land's owners.

In 13 states jury service is compulsory for women as well as men.

Costs Nothing To Enter the Soap Box Derby Every Boy Age 10 to 15 Eligible

Boys! Build Your Racer Now Win a Four-Year College Scholarship

The Soap Box Derby is strictly a boys' event, designed to promote both craftsmanship and sportsmanship through competition in building and driving Soap Box Racers. The rules governing the building of racers are strict but are such that any boy can easily follow them. They are designed to insure equal opportunity to all entrants and thus further the spirit of fair play. Parents and sponsors may advise how best to build a racer, but cannot do any actual work.

Every phase of the work in building a sturdy, fast racer is given in the new rule book. Drawings that show sizes and methods of procedure will be found. Suggestions for materials to use, wheels, steering gear, brakes and other things are shown in detail. The overall cost for materials in any car cannot exceed $10. This is ample, however, as will be found in the costs set up in the rule book.

Some changes have been made in the rules for the 1939 Derby, therefore, every boy should get a copy of the new rule book and read it thoroughly before starting to build his 1939 racer. Parents, urge your boys to enter now. Go to any local Chevrolet dealer for official entry blank and a copy of the rule book. Both are quite essential to properly enter!

CONSTITUTION PROVIDES WHEELS WITHOUT COST

To enable every boy, regardless of circumstances, to have a representative racer, The Constitution has devised a plan whereby boys may secure (without cost) a complete set of the necessary regulation metal parts for a racer. The set consists of 4 steel disc wheels, 62 bolts, nuts and lock washer, 4 hub caps and 12 screws; 8 ball-bearings, 4 racing tires for wheels, 4 axles and 4 axle mountings; 4 body plates; 4 carriage bolts and nuts; 20 extra bolts and lock washers and 10 feet of steering cable. With this set, a rule book, a bit of lumber and a few tools, any boy can build a speedy racer. A racer capable of carrying him to victory and fame. Details of how to get this complete set can be had by calling or writing the office of The Atlanta Constitution. The set was made by Eagle Lock Co. especially for building Soap Box Racers. It is sold at retail for $6.50; but can be had through The Constitution without one cent of cost.

ATLANTA GA., JUNE 11, 1939.

The Baptist Alliance

Soon, in Atlanta, Baptists from all over the world, representatives of every land where the Baptist faith has penetrated, will gather for the great Baptist Alliance. This city will then be host to a greater convocation, with more widespread significance, than has ever been here before.

It is estimated that the number of visitors drawn here to attend the various sessions of the Alliance, will be 50,000. Many of these will come from distant states, distant lands. The Christian homes of the city will be full, as well as the hotels. There will be thousands who will sleep in special quarters arranged at Lakewood, and others will make their temporary homes, while, here, in Pullmans. There will, in fact, be a Pullman city with dining cars, baths and all other conveniences.

In addition to these, there will be thousands who will commute, every day, from towns of Georgia and, even, Alabama, South Carolina and other neighbor states. The homes in those Georgia cities within reasonable driving distance of Atlanta, will be filled with guests.

It would be easy to refer to the tremendous commercial benefit that will come to Atlanta by such an influx of visitors. No one can compute the total amount of additional cash which will be poured into the commercial veins of the city.

Likewise it is self-evident that the advertising value of the Alliance to the city is tremendous. Already, for years, the name of Atlanta has been a focal point for Baptists the world over. For weeks preceding the sessions of the Alliance, during the meeting itself and afterwards, no city in the world will be so prominent in the news, the conversations and the thoughts of millions of Christian people.

But there is a greater benefit, one which the city cannot help but realize. That is the spiritual effect. Imponderable, intangible, powerful, the future life of Atlanta and all her people cannot but be affected for the better by the gathering here of such a throng, united in desire to serve Him as best they may, to lift His word a little closer to the ideals of brotherhood and peace and love which He preached two thousand years ago.

Irrespective of denominational alliance, there is no Atlantian who can not enjoy the deep spiritual fruits of the Alliance meeting here. Its effect will reach into every strata of life and the touch of its inspiration will reach into every heart.

Atlanta is, of course, proud to act as host for the Baptist Alliance. The city opens her doors and her heart to every delegate. Yet it is a pride touched with humility, for all Atlantians know that, regardless of what they do for the visiting Baptists, the Alliance itself cannot help but bring immeasurably greater blessings upon the city than any the city can bestow.

Progressive DeKalb

The county of DeKalb, Fulton's pleasant neighbor, has set example in many activities which could be followed by other counties of Georgia to their advantage in more ways than one.

Decatur, the county seat, is a town of homes, composed in vast proportion of citizens who find their work in the city of Atlanta. Despite this overwhelming city influence among her people, no county seat in Georgia is more aware of the importance of the rural areas in the development of the community.

The people of Decatur are, almost unanimously, convinced that their chief community interest lies beyond the city limits, on the farms and among the people who wrest a livelihood from the inherent wealth of the soil.

Many cities have tried to accentuate the friendliness of the urban for the rural. Comparatively few have demonstrated their sincerity by enhancing the interest of the city people in things rural, rather than in inviting the rural people to glimpses of city life and city entertainment.

DeKalb county has reversed this process. It is the people of its city, Decatur, and of other town communities, who have displayed their interest in the problems and advantages of the farm. The result is a closer spirit of friendship and a far keener understanding of mutual problems than exists in the majority of county areas, either in Georgia or any other state.

This spirit is well evidenced in the announcement, by the DeKalb County Chamber of Commerce, that annual fairs have already been arranged for this year, for 1940 and for 1941. They will be held, three days each year, at Panthersville, Chamblee and Tucker. And it is safe betting that the people of Decatur will find far greater value in visiting any one of these fairs, than would the farm residents of DeKalb in visiting any similar program urban Decatur could possibly offer.

The secret of county co-operation lies in town going to country, rather than country going to town.

Age No Handicap

With the cabinet decree appointment of General Maurice Gustave Gamelin, age 66, to the supreme command of the military forces of France, that recent popular question in the United States—is age a handicap?—pushes itself more or less uninvited to the forefront.

When consideration is given to the important fact that, in case of war in Europe, the British army would be fighting side by side with the French, the question of the general's age as a qualification or a handicap, takes on additional significance. Gamelin, under a recent agreement between the two powers, would become commander-in-chief of the united forces.

If France, according to the weight of expert opinion the most efficient military power in the world today, employed United States army and navy regulations, Gamelin would have been retired to the relic pile at the age of 62—regardless of his ability as a military organizer and tactician. For four years now he would have been twiddling his thumbs in idleness or sticking his fingers into problems the solution of which he was not qualified to undertake. His country would have been deprived of his valuable services.

Of course he might have been given an administrative position, perhaps appointed governor of some colonial possession, provided his political theories were not too far out of line.

Strangely enough the chief trouble-makers on the other side of the Atlantic are comparatively youthful. Hitler has just turned 50. He was only 44, a mere child in comparison to Hindenburg, when he pushed himself to the front in Germany. Mussolini is only a few years past the half century mark. He has been in charge of Italy for 17 years. The question, however, as to whether the two gentlemen have done more for, or to, their respective countries is a matter for debate.

On the other hand, Neville Chamberlain, the man who is guiding the destinies of the far-flung interests of the British, to the extent that any one man is ever permitted to guide them, is 70 years of age. His predecessor, Baldwin, whose steady hand and steadfast purpose during the abdication crisis met general British approval, was also three score years and ten. And it should never be forgotten that the "Tiger of France," Georges Clemenceau, at the age of 76, stepped in and united his people for victory after the younger defeatist element had brought the nation to the brink of disaster.

So experience, ability and maturity, in Europe at least, seemingly outweigh the fire and dash of youth, which not infrequently plunges headlong into difficulties from which it is difficult to recede.

Refuting a Slander

From the evidence of their own confessions, American women have refuted that ancient canard of the idle wife who spends all her time at the movies, playing bridge, gossiping with neighbors or squandering her husband's money in shopping orgies.

A recent survey reveals that the favorite spare-time occupation among American women is reading. Evidently the female of the species is determined to raise her literate standards and to learn more about the world in which she lives and the people who inhabit it. Though, as a matter of fact, the survey does not reveal the quality of the reading matter in which Mrs. America indulges.

Four out of every ten American women—40 per cent—state they enjoy reading more than any other occupation for their spare time. Next favorite amusement is doing fancy work. So state 11 per cent. Third comes sewing and dressmaking, with 8 per cent; fourth is going to the movies, 6 per cent; fifth, watching or taking part in sports, 5 per cent; playing cards, 4 per cent; listening to the radio, 3 per cent, and all other occupations combined, 23 per cent.

Those figures should—but of course won't—silence the gag writer whose favorite piece of alleged humor concerns feminine bridge parties or gossip sessions.

The survey, conducted by the Ladies Home Journal, also reveals that time doesn't hang so heavy on the hands of the missus while friend husband is away. For 49 per cent of the women questioned don't consider they have enough leisure time. Idle moments are about right, in the opinion of 41 per cent, while only 10 per cent concede they have too much spare time on their hands.

One other startling revelation in the survey report is that, while only 1 per cent of the women place card playing at the top of their preferred list of amusements, 8 per cent of their husbands would sooner sit in a rubber of contract than do anything else.

A wrestling ace took up the game as a boy to correct a digestive ill. He ascribes his present abounding vigor to the roughage, of course.

No longer does one see the tax dollar divided in the manner of a drug store pie, as one can't crowd 1,590 degrees into the 360 in a pie.

A new customs ruling in North Ireland declares oysters are livestock. But are Irish bulls permissible in months without an R?

It is found that members of a western legislature were never sworn in. Technically, all its sloth has been illegal and should be slept over.

ONE WORD MORE

By RALPH MCGILL.

THE LATE HUEY LONG There was a fellow in town the other night from Baton Rouge. He had been down there all through the reign of the late Huey Long. We were talking of this and that about Huey, and wondering if ever the whole story of his assassination would be known.

This fellow was one of the inside circle, so to speak. He believed there was no drawing of straws, or lots, as one story has it. He rather believed there was a deliberate play on the quiet but emotional gentleman who, after a quiet picnic with his family, received a telephone call and was so aroused at what was told him, he took his pistol and went to the capitol to shoot down Huey Long.

One may hear all sorts of fantastic stories about the plot against Huey. Actually it must have been fairly simple. Certainly it had none of the elaborate ramifications which some people believe. The truth is that Huey, brilliant and yet warped, lived by the sword. None was more ruthless than he. It was not at all surprising that he died by the sword. He was a dangerous man. He did much good but the evil lives along with the good he did.

Some of the greater stories of the south concern the late Tzar of Louisiana.

HARRY COSTELLO One of them is told by Harry Costello, newspaperman, publicity expert, public relations man and entertainer de luxe. Until you have heard Mr. Costello sing the song about Mickey Kelly's wake you have heard nothing. There is one choice line in it which goes, "Oh, they took the ice from off the corpse and put it on the beer." Mr. Costello had a fine baritone and he could bear down on that line with fine effect.

Mr. Costello once worked for Huey Long. He was, in fact, working for Huey until Huey was killed and he continued with the organization for some time afterwards.

The job was had in an unusual manner. Harry Costello said that he was out on a party. He recalled getting in a taxi cab. Apparently he fell asleep. The next he knew he awoke early one morning on a sofa in a living room and on investigating found Huey Long asleep in the living room.

"What am I doing HERE, Senator?" Harry Costello said he asked. "That's what I want to know," said Huey. They began to talk. It developed that Huey had been in the city for some time. He had brought Costello "home." The senator, talking late with friends, had received him and put him to sleep on the sofa.

Out of this early-morning confession there came the job for Costello. On occasion, when the senator felt some fear, it was Costello who first emerged from the car or train. Or who first entered a hotel or the hotel room. He was an almost constant companion.

The kick of the story comes in the last few minutes Huey spent in the capitol. A group of them sat about. It grew late. Twilight came on. Twice Harry Costello got up and started to leave. Each time one of the party said, "Oh, sit down, Harry. We'll go after a while." Once Harry Costello had his hand on the door knob.

Had he turned it and gone out to the dim portico where the emotional upset man waited with the gun, there isn't much doubt but that Harry Costello would have received those bullets.

As it was Harry sat down. And when they did go, Huey was first out the door. The gun roared. The bodyguard fired. One was dead and Huey soon was to die.

THE LOUISIANA TICK LAW Perhaps the best of them all is told by Red Heard, athletic director at L. S. U. Heard entered the senator's office about a week before the opening game with Rice. Huey, of course, had adopted the football team as a hobby.

"We ought to have a good crowd at the game, Red?" asked the senator.

"Well, yes, Senator, but of course the circus will hurt us some." (The game was scheduled for night.)

"What circus and who owns it?" asked the senator.

In a half hour he had located the owner in a Florida town. "They tell me you are the Kingfish of the circus world," he said happily over the wires. "This is Huey Long, the Kingfish of Louisiana. We've got a mighty fine football team here. We are mighty proud of it. We play a big game Saturday night. Your circus is coming in Saturday and we'd like for you to postpone it or move it up so it won't interfere."

The startled Kingfish of the circus world protested he had nothing to do with it.

"You own it, don't you?"

"Well, in a manner of speaking. But you see, these routes are made in advance, a year in advance. It's just impossible."

Huey's voice purr. . .

"Have you, by any chance," he asked, "ever heard of the Louisiana tick law?"

"No, senator, I haven't."

"It requires that every animal coming into Louisiana be dipped and held for two weeks in quarantine. Have you ever," he asked gently, "dipped a tiger or an elephant?"

At the other end of the wire the horrified circus owner saw in his mind's eye great vats with struggling, fighting tigers, lions, hippos, giraffes, monkeys, camels, elephants dipped into them. He thought of them held for two weeks.

"Senator," he said, "I'll call you back."

The L. S. U.-Rice football game had no competition.

SILHOUETTES

By RALPH T. JONES.

A bundle of highway maps—
A handful of temptation
To chuck the job, and go, wheel loose,
A' driving 'round the nation.

But imagination's motor
Has a powerful governor built—
My purse is flat, I haven't got
The price, the dough, the gell.

Young Barbarians.

It was Rudyard Kipling who dubbed boys in their 'teen ages as "young barbarians." It was his theory, I believe, that a growing boy passes through stages analogous to the stages of the race. He passed during its progress up to the degree of civilization we enjoy today, such as it is.

Maybe so. Lads are barbarians in many things they do. We are inclined, however, to alibi them with the title old adage, "boys will be boys." We excuse because we love them, despite their blunders, their crudeness and their thoughtless mischief.

But, no matter how we love them, we shouldn't let our excuses go to the point where we do not point out the error of their ways. For love would help its objective to greater perfection and to greater happiness. It may be excusable for a lad to be a barbarian, sometimes, but it is inexcusable on the part of his parents if they permit his barbarity to repeat itself, in the same manner.

Two Letters Of Protest.

Recently two protests have reached this desk, both about the misdeeds of boys.

One from an Atlanta lady who resides in one of the better residential sections. Her family, she relates, is enjoying a quiet evening of bridge the other evening when they were startled by a great crash of breaking glass in the front of the house. At first they thought the milk bottles on the porch had been knocked to the concrete driveway by roving cat or dog.

Investigation revealed, however, that it was the beveled glass in their front door which was ruined. Broken in wanton mischief by some youngsters of the neighborhood. Not by any such thing as a tossed rock. That could be explained as accidental. But these boys had crept on the porch with deliberate intent and broken the glass panel by rocks held, all the time, in their hands. Used to pound the glass, hammerlike.

Now that is carrying exuberance, mischief, barbarism or any boyish trait too far.

The parents of those boys, whoever they are, will be unkind to the boys themselves if they don't punish them and take steps to see that such an action, or anything like it, is never repeated. For, uncorrected, those are the kind of boys who grow up to be terrible things, criminals, murderers, even Nazis or Jew-baiters.

With No Intent
For Evil.

In the other case the boy involved evidently didn't realize he was being cruel or breaking the law.

He was a high school lad who set out to provide a rare collection for his school museum by killing, stuffing and mounting as many varieties of birds as he could catch.

He didn't know there is a strict federal law to protect migratory birds and he didn't stop to think of the cruelty he was perpetrating against a beautiful and valuable form of nature life.

That boy, however, has been warned. He got a letter from the Bureau of Biological Survey, at Washington, telling of the serious violation of law he had perpetrated and warning of the penalty that could be imposed. Believe me, he hurried to write a most apologetic letter in reply, with the promise he'd always remember the lesson.

The boy's name is withheld, because really he doesn't deserve publicity about his mistake. But the story is told here in the hope it will serve as warning to other boys and, perhaps, add a little to their appreciation of the beauty and importance of birds—alive and free.

Boys are barbarians—they wouldn't be natural if they were not. But we needn't let their barbarism go uncorrected, need we? Boys, as raw material, may be boys, but it is the job of parents to transform them into men and gentlemen.

THE TEST OF TRANSLATION.

To the multitude which gathered on the Day of Pentecost—when "every man heard them speak in his own language"—the significance was simply the wonder that unschooled men had been miraculously enabled to speak foreign tongues. But in the long perspective of the centuries we are enabled to discern a truth which is infinitely more meaningful. It is not nearly so important to discover that Palestinian peasants can speak foreign languages, as to discover that a Palestinian religion, which hitherto had been confined to the Aramaic dialect, was capable of being translated into all the known languages of the nations.

If the Christian religion could only find expression in the Aramaic language, then it could only live in the lives of Aramaic-speaking people. So up to the day of Pentecost the question was still unanswered: is this religion of Jesus a Jewish religion? Is it true only in Palestine, and can it function only under peculiar conditions of place and time? It had yet to prove that it could speak other languages, and live in other environments and experiences of life. It must meet the supreme test of translation. At Pentecost it broke through the walls of its environment, and came out of the tomb of its local form. When men heard its message spoken in their own language, then Christianity started "from Jerusalem unto all the nations."

Challenge to the Church.

Here is to be found the story of the triumphs and the defeats of the Christian church. Not only each nation but each age and even each generation meets the church upon its threshold with the question: "Can you speak my language?" Because in its last analysis it means, can you translate your message into terms of my life? We must understand that the differences in languages are not simply racial, national or geographical. They grow with the changing life of a people, and their meanings change with the ever-changing conditions of life. New words are coined to meet new situations, and names are fashioned for new ideas and ideals which are born into human life. So each generation in every land challenges the church. "Can you speak my language?" in terms of the problems of my generation, and answer the questions which vex the souls of men of my day?

It has been a natural instinct of men, and a wholesome symptom of religious vitality, to seek to express from time to time their religious faith and aspirations in creedal statements. The statements reveal the viewpoint of their day, and express in the language of their generation their religious experiences. Thus they formulated their ideals which challenged their spirits, and called the people of their day to higher levels of living. This was also true in the creation of the rituals which symbolized the sentiments, and spoke to the emotions of the people in a language which they understood.

But the church in seeking to make these creeds and rituals the fixed and final forms of religious faith and aspiration, has insisted upon imposing these limitations of expression upon the souls of future generations. It was the fatal failure to understand that each generation must express its own life in its own language, and that truth lives on the lips of the people. If it cannot be translated into the language of daily communication, it will cease to play a part in the lives of men. Here is to be found the explanation of the "dark ages" of the church, and at the same time the philosophy of every genuine revival of religion, whenever the Spirit of God finds free play in the souls of men, then will all men hear the message of Jesus "in his own language."

Christ's Commission.

Pentecost calls for a reinterpretation of the Christ commission to go into all the world and make disciples. It must no longer be thought of merely in racial and geographical terms. "All the world" means all the life of the world. It means carrying the Christ and His spirit into all human relationships, and to do that it must get itself uttered in the language of all human relations. We may put a church on every hilltop and in every valley, but if we leave the commercial, social and political areas of life untouched by the spirit of Jesus, we have failed.

This is not to be the mechanical method of the school boy, who searches for an English word to match a Greek word in his task of translation. Something infinitely more is meant than to try to find a formula of Jesus which will solve the social and political problems of today. But our search must be first for the principles and spirit of Jesus. We are to translate the Christ conception of "neighbor" and "brother" into the relationship of employer and employee and into the racial relation of peoples. In some way we must compare the value of a sheep and a man must get itself uttered in the markets and in the factories of today's industrial life. It is on the streets and in the offices, and amid the buzz of bands and the whirl of wheels of our industries, that men must meet the astounding experience of Pentecost, when they hear the Christ message spoken in their own language.

Strength.

Give me vision enough to see Beauty,
To inhale the sparkling freshet called Life,
And exhale with sad reluctance
My verse.
Give me wisdom enough to know the joy
Of understanding enough to overshadow doubt,
When sorrow and parting come.
Oh, let me understand all things
That make a heart

HIGH TREASON

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY.

Quite apart from his personal likes and dislikes, the question that General Moseley poses is high treason.

He accuses certain citizens of the United States of planning to seize the government of the United States, to alter its forms and procedures. He indicates that these citizens have combined for the purpose of revolution. That is treason.

General Moseley cannot be pushed aside as a screwball. After all, he has held ranking position in the United States army. He has had access to the files of G-2, the intelligence section of the army. He must know what it means to accuse citizens of treason. He is no Fritz Kuhn, no Pelley who went to heaven for a few minutes and talked with God and sold an article on it to a magazine. General Moseley, active or retired, is a responsible person and must assume his responsibilities. He cannot dodge them.

RESPONSIBLE FOR CONDUCT

His situation is further complicated by the fact that he is still a servant of the American people, definitely on the public payroll and responsible to the army for his conduct. He can still be punished for conduct unwarranted of an officer. But more than that, if he is involved in acts which may be treasonable, he can be court-martialed and be indicted.

To speak of not making a martyr of General Moseley is utter nonsense. Here stands an accusation. The accused has the right to be tried. The accuser must bear the responsibility for having made the accusation. He must come into court with clean hands. There must be no question of his personal allegiance; there must be no question of his relationship to a foreign power. Everything should be clear and above board.

Now, let us turn to the question we can form of General Moseley's accusation. I shall admit that it is not altogether coherent but it seems to me that it can be simplified in this manner:

PATTERN OF ACCUSATION

1. General Moseley seems to believe that the President of the United States, working with Communists and Jews, is seeking to drag the United States into war; 2. He believes that there is a combination of Communists and Jews to seize and take possession of the United States; 3. He contends that already an interlocking directorate consisting of Communists and Jews exists which has taken possession of the key agencies of the government.

He makes these assertions. But he names no names, provides no evidence, gives no dates, facts or figures. If he possesses specific data, it should forthwith be available. If his accusations are of such a character that a grand jury would receive them and find them true, there should be indictments. If there is a word of truth in his accusations, men and women should be tried before juries and should be convicted and punished. That is due process of law. That is the American way. If he is repeating hearsay and gossip, he should be made to hold his peace. That is the American way.

TIMES TRY SOULS OF MEN

It must be noted that we are passing through a period of American history which bears heavily upon the spirits of men. Ten years of depression; 11 or 12,000,000 of unemployment; the national debt is increasing beyond reason; taxes are high; arrogant personalities enter into government; business is not progressive, men and women are discouraged.

But more than that is the question of the Presidency. The "two-term tradition" has been fundamental in George Washington declined a third term. It was this tradition that saved us from the intrigues and conspiracies so usual in Republics. We never had a Louis Napoleon; we never had a Porfirio Diaz; we never had a de Castro; we never had a Hitler, a Stalin, a Hitler or a Stalin.

Every four years, the President became an ordinary person. He either pleaded with his fellow-citizens to re-elect him or he retired to a small college town or to a company, or he retired to a small town. The Die committee served its country well by bringing this disease to public attention. Now is the time to act. Now is the time to discover whether there is a scintilla of fact in the accusations. If there are traitors, try them. Hang them. But we must be sure that we try the right ones and hang the right ones. No decent citizen would protect a traitor, but we must be sure that he is a traitor. Only the duly constituted courts can decide that. America must be ruled by law . . . not by gossip and prejudice.

NEEDS DIAGNOSIS

We have here a social cancer that needs immediate diagnosis and operation. It ought not to be left to chance. Some say that General Moseley wants to be President and realize that he has no chance at the ballot, but he must lose America. How then does he dare make such a charge without evidence? If he has the evidence, let it be produced. If he is repeating gossip, let that be made known.

WHOLESALE WAY

The President, as soon as he retires from that high office is an ordinary person, unguarded when he walks the streets, unnoted in his personal conduct. His children are not princes and provide search for an English word to match a Greek word in his task of translation. Something infinitely more is meant than to try to find a formula of Jesus which will solve the social and political problems of today. But our search must be first for the principles and spirit of Jesus. We are to translate the Christ conception of "neighbor" and "brother" into the relationship of employer and employee and into the racial relation of peoples. In some way we must compare the value of a sheep and a man must get itself uttered in the markets and in the factories of today's industrial life. It is on the streets and in the offices, and amid the buzz of bands and the whirl of wheels of our industries, that men must meet the astounding experience of Pentecost, when they hear the Christ message spoken in their own language.

Once the "two-term tradition" is destroyed, the question of a third term is not as important as is the danger of a term for life. No man can be President for life without taking on the characteristics of a king or a dictator. No congress can withstand a President who has created so powerful a political agency that he can hope to be President for life. Against any such person, there are bound to be intrigues and conspiracies. I dare to risk the opinion that such intrigues and conspiracies will be strongest and most potent in the army and in congress. History in all other countries, where an elected official developed excesses of power, indicates that that would be so here.

I am making no accusations against President Roosevelt. I am merely trying to diagnose a social disease of which General Moseley is a symptom. That disease will become increasingly acute and will reach the characteristics of a nation-wide epidemic when it is certain that Mr. Roosevelt will run for a third term. It will take on a revolutionary character should he

Dream Comes True for Rae Neely as Her Poem, 'Marguerite' (of Navarre), Comes Off the Press

Beautiful Story of 'Sister and Wife of Kings' Written by Atlanta.

By YOLANDE GWIN.
Through the eyes and pen of a gifted Atlanta writer a limited number of the intelligentsia here will have the opportunity of reading the poem, "Marguerite," which came off the press yesterday.

Rae S. Neely (Mrs. Frank Neely) of this city, has written the narrative poem and with its limited edition of 500 copies, all signed by the author, bids fair to take an unprecedented place in the literary annals of Atlanta and the south.

Beautifully written, "Marguerite" is the story of a woman by a woman, and is told in a distinguished and frequently beautiful verse, with simplicity set against complexity.

The poem is the story of Marguerite of Navarre, the sister of Francis I of France, and the grandmother of Henri IV, first of the Bourbon kings. Laid in the first half of the 16th century, the poem is interesting for its picture of Renaissance France as well as for its portrait of Marguerite, "the sister and wife of kings."

Marguerite of Navarre's place in the French Renaissance, by virtue of her birth, would supply an adequate theme for this richly embroidered narrative, but Marguerite was also colorful and forceful in her own right. In her book, Rae Neely presents a complex yet poetically authentic character; a woman of the court, loving power and display, a writer and a humanist, and above all, a woman capable of feeling and of arousing deep emotions.

Mrs. Neely's poem is dedicated to the History Club of 1894, for whom it was originally written in March, 1938. The author said yesterday:

"The subject was a paper regularly prepared for the club. I wrote 'Marguerite' in a more or less skeleton form for the study club, but since then I have worked over it, rewritten parts of it and finally completed it in its present form."

The French Renaissance was such a remarkable period, according to the author, that every phase and every figure bears a charmingly romantic and historic interest. Color, intrigue and pageantry are found in this period, and it would be impossible to view it lightly either from a historical or a literary standpoint. Mrs. Neely points out that there is a world of material for fiction, poetry and historical novels in the period of the silver threads which make up the patterns for misty centuries passed. At no period in history was there a time so dramatically portrayed, so vital with life and so imbued with the glories of life and state, than the first half of the 16th century when Marguerite lived.

Likened when her chosen subject in that she delights in the study of culture and the arts, Mrs. Neely, is one of the city's most highly educated women. She is an accomplished writer, but "Marguerite" is her first published book.

And how does she feel about becoming an authoress?

Here is what she says:

"I do not feel anything, for I am bewildered to believe that my dream has come true; that I actually have written a book of poems, and it has been published. I think young girls have dreamed of writing beautiful verse, and of going on the stage, and I was no exception. I have dreamed of poems stage—yet, but the publication of 'Marguerite' is an attainment of one of my childhood ambitions."

Mrs. Neely admits that stored away in forgotten places, but cherished for some fleeting bit of memory, are hundreds of poems she wrote during school days. She wrote them for love of poetry, she wrote them for the thrill of expressing beautiful thoughts on paper, and she wrote them because her poetic mind directed her pen in verse.

"But," she added with a smile yesterday, "I made the most distressing marks in English at Girls' High, and there was absolutely no excuse for it, for my teacher was Miss Jeanne Muse, and certainly the fault did not lay with her. It was just me."

Schoolgirl faults, however, only served as a stepping stone to the literary pedestal, upon which Rae Neely now occupies. Her exquisite style, her easy mastery of the language, her narrative of the life of Marguerite of Navarre, and the narrative poems distinctive and forceful fashion, will be of everlasting value to cultural Atlanta, both from a literary as well as historical viewpoint.

The book is published by the University of Georgia Press, and its dedication page reads: "To the gracious memory of Jennie Hammond Gilbert, and in tribute to the history class of 1894." Mrs. Neely also gives acknowledgement to "Mr. Samuel Putnam, for the inspiration of his Marguerite of Navarre, and for his generous permission to use several translations that are printed in this volume."

DR. MELTON WINS U. S. POETRY HONOR
Atlanta Author Named as Bringing Most Advancement to Georgia.

Dr. Wightman F. Melton, author, educator and president of the Atlanta Writers Club, has been honored by the National Poets' Center as the Georgia author who has done most to advance poetry and poets in this state.

His name has been inscribed on the parchment honor scroll for distinguished service. The scroll was presented to Dr. Melton by Mrs. A. M. Elton, chairman of the club's poetry group, who was official representative at the World's Fair poetry forum.

Dr. Melton is the father of Quimby Melton, publisher of the Griffin (Ga.) News. He formerly taught journalism at Emory and Oglethorpe Universities, and is the writer of several books.

Prospect of war is not so acute now, observes European observer. What's that? Has someone actually caught Mussolini smiling?

The name of Rae Neely was added yesterday to Atlanta's literary hall of fame, with the publication of her narrative poem, "Marguerite." The author, wife of Frank Neely, had dedicated her first book to the History Club of 1894 for whom it was originally written.

German's Weakness for Uniforms Held Factor in Hitler's Success

Fuehrer, Termed Master Psychologist, Also Quick To Sense Teutonic Love of Decorations and Titles; Shows Them in Profusion.

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER.
BERLIN, June 10.—(Correspondence of the Associated Press) The Nazi of today, after six years of absolute rule by his Fuehrer and his party, is imperfect because he has three things:

1. A uniform.
2. A decoration.
3. A title.

It is now generally conceded even by the die-hards of former regimes that Adolf Hitler, outsmarted all his political competitors by realizing that the love of uniforms is ingrained in the German.

Today, there is scarcely a German who hasn't some uniform or other. After Hitler's fighting columns, the SA and the SS, had their uniforms, the Nazi party followed—in other words, the wheel-horses of the various wards—were given their distinctive brown uniforms.

More Uniforms Born.
Then the Nazi motor corps was organized—and again a uniform was born. The Air Protection League workers, the Labor Front, the "Werkscharen" or skilled apprentices, the Nazi field police, the students, the news photographers, and hundreds of others were granted uniforms by Hitler.

One class of officials were bursting with envy, however, and were in danger of acquiring an inferiority complex amid so much uniform.

Adolf Hitler knew the Germans better. The short-lived German republic, much to the chagrin of its older citizenry, forbade the issuance of German or acceptance of foreign decorations.

Adolf Hitler knew the Germans better. The short-lived German republic, much to the chagrin of its older citizenry, forbade the issuance of German or acceptance of foreign decorations.

A continuous, ever increasing shower of decorations has begun to descend upon the Nizza Third Reich.

Adolf Hitler, master psychologist that he is, has been quick to sense the German weakness for titles. And so titles are showered in the same profusion as decorations and uniforms.

Change of headquarters of the Georgia Public Forums to the University of Georgia Evening School and Junior College at 162 Luckie street, N. W., was announced yesterday by Miss Emily Woodward, director. The office force will continue preparation of materials for use on 1939-40 programs.

The radio forum at 3 o'clock this afternoon will be on the subject, "What's Ahead for Youth?" and participating will be Marcus Bartlett, Alva Lines and Glenn Hogan, seniors at Emory University.

Miss Woodward will attend the convention of the Future Farmers of America at Lake Jackson camp tomorrow, and will conduct a forum at the camp Wednesday on the subject, "Farm Technique."

The final radio forum of the season will be held next Sunday afternoon, when the subject for discussion will be "Looking Backward and Forward With the Georgia Public Forums." Taking part will be Dr. Harmon W. Caldwell, president of the University of Georgia; Dr. I. S. Ingram, president of West Georgia College, Carrollton, and Walter Paschall, Atlanta radio announcer.

BABY HEALTH CENTER SITES SET FOR WEEK
Dr. J. P. Kennedy, city health officer, has announced baby health centers for babies under four years of age will be held this week at 1:30 p. m. at the following locations:

Monday, Lee Street school; Tuesday, Luckie Street school, and Peoples Street school; Wednesday, Fair Street school; Thursday, Andrew Stewart Nursery, and Friday at Kirkwood school.

TWINS FOLLOW TWINS.
The second set of twins within 19 months was born to Mrs. Birdie Dean, of Newton, Conn. The eyes enlarged the family to seven children.

"One thing I can never understand," Old Inquisitive growled over his shrimp, "is why the lawyers make the law so complicated. Why can't they come right out and say what they mean in simple language?"

The usual argument loomed ahead. I could see that. So I tactfully informed this hot-head he was inclined, because he happened to be smart, to regard complicated things too simply. There's more to taking out an appendix, I tried to impress upon him, than cutting a man open and nipping off a sprout down in the abdominal cavity. If that was all there was to it people could go to the butcher for their appendectomies instead of to the hospital.

"Well, can't they ditch all the fancy phrases?" he rattled on, paying scant attention to me. "Just junk the whole works. Toss it overboard. Get rid of habeas corpus, corpus juris, juris et de jure and I et de shrimp?"

Again I attempted an interjection, but once O. I. gets going, especially on matters pertaining to the law, he's non-stopable. And his English gets more slovenly as he grows hotter.

RIDDLES—MORE RIDDLES
"Why can't they use language their clients can catch on to?" he practically demanded to know. "Riddles and more riddles. That's what it is. Look at this New York fair business, for instance. I betcha a lawyer had a finger in that!"

"I wouldn't be surprised," I shot back, more or less triumphantly, not knowing for the moment what he was driving at. "The lawyer enters into the affairs of the people at every turn. Naturally. . . ."

"Perispher," he grinned sarcastically. ". . . Now, ain't that pretty? But what's it got to do with the word of tomorrow, or the day after tomorrow, for that matter? Sounds like a lawyer's fancy name for a ball! Like non compos mentis means a guy's bawdy!"

I admitted that it did, that lawyers sometimes . . . but it was no use. He wouldn't even let me admit anything.

REAL THOUGHTS
"They always hide" their real thoughts behind a lot of hokey," he quipped. "That's why the shy-stone kin fool so many peop. . . ."

"Ah, dry up!" I cut him off. "That doesn't apply to lawyers except."

I gave up—temporarily.

New York Skyscrapers
By CHARLES ESCOURT JR.

NEW YORK, June 10.—The private life of royalty has carried a dime of cash money in his pockets or anywhere else on his person since he was promoted from Duke of York. The Queen doesn't pack any filthy lucre either. That's what lords and ladies-in-waiting are for.

They get the money from the custodian of the regal roll (Lieutenant Colonel E. D. MacKenzie, C. M. G., D. S. O.), who goes around disguised under the title of "comptroller of the household."

He feels it out for the lords and ladies-in-waiting, who turn it over to the folks who are in trade. The whole labyrinth run out of dough 'way back in Edmonton, and sent Montreal a wire asking for more. A banker hopped a plane to pop the question, and a plug hat and a morning coat for the job of handing it over and getting a receipt.

Nobody knows what the King and Queen spent the money on. Very few ever will. Presents probably went to pop the question, and a plug hat and a morning coat for the job of handing it over and getting a receipt.

They bought the stuff, too. None of this "on the cuff" stuff. British royalty has an inviolable rule never to accept a present from anyone they do not know.

HUSH UP, PLEASE
Since a London newspaper 16 months ago printed a hint about an interesting event (Fleet Street for "blessed event"), the British press has laid off, presumably after a suggestion from Buckingham palace that speculation on the subject was not only untrue, but embarrassing.

However, throughout the royal tour there has been nothing but speculation among those on the fringe of the throne. The speculation was inspired by an allegedly militant desire among the loyal subjects for a male heir.

Though long for a male heir, despite the great success of two former British queens (Victoria and Elizabeth, if you need help), pointed out that the chances of a suitable marriage for the future Queen Elizabeth are more restricted than for any royal princess in history.

Speculation was so noisy that a member of the palace's private circle detached himself from courtly manners and let down his hair as follows:

The present Queen Elizabeth is 39 years old. Her last child, Margaret Rose, arrived "under the most difficult circumstances" (Caesarian is the word for it). Even if there is no war, a very busy 10 years lie ahead of their majesties, with an exhausting schedule of royal duties. The great personal success of the Queen during the tour of Canada, when she repeatedly "stole the show," is accepted as a satisfactory indication that a Queen is at least as acceptable to the throne's subjects as a King.

So let everybody, for gosh sakes, hush their mouths.

LOVE MATCH
Every writer on royalty starts—and almost invariably ends—his career by "arguing that the boy and girl have made love match. The evidence for believing that about Bertie (what she calls him) and Bess (what he calls her) in utmost private; in semi-private, he calls her Elizabeth) is appended here: Every opportunity they've had clusively. Some people think any birth with a bottle of shank and a lot of bolony is a doctor."

"An' the barristers kin say less in more words," he rambled on, "—and mean more in less words." I horned in—"than any class of people on earth," he finished.

Naturally, I admitted, when he finally let me get in a word that lawyers often seemed too windy, as well as unnecessarily vague at times. But, not infrequently, this seeming fault, while meaning nothing to the layman beyond providing a reason for criticism, means everything to the legality of the transaction.

REMEDY WORSE THAN DISEASE
"That's what I'm talking about—why can't they simplify it?" he wanted to know. He filled his mouth with shrimp now that he had decided to let me talk.

"Isn't that a pretty large order?" I inquired. "It's like asking the doctors to build up a brand-new lexicography—to start all over from scratch. It would be chaotic. The remedy would be worse than the disease. It would be impossible without disrupting the whole legal system."

"So you're willing to go right on letting the people think the lawyers are crooked?" he demanded to know between chews.

"Hokey yourself!" I shot back somewhat heatedly. "There isn't any more dishonesty among lawyers, as a class, than among doctors, painters, embalmers or chimney sweeps."

"Well," he drawled rather softly, no doubt thinking he had wounded my feelings, ". . . most people think so."

"You're pretty far behind the times, aren't you?" I tried to be sarcastic. "Over 300 years ago some people were thinking the same thing. But it wasn't any truer then than now. Ben Johnson, the English epigrammatist, went so far as to write a special lawyers' epitaph. Remember it: 'God works wonders now and then: Here lies a lawyer—an honest man.'"

"Sure." Old Inquisitive grinned, rather nastily I thought. ". . . An' when somebody changed the line to read 'Here lies a lawyer and an honest man' put it on a footstone in the cemetery, the first person to come along and read it wanted to know how come they buried 'em both in the same grave!"

Here lies a lawyer—an honest man.

LAST WEEK!

Carroll's Semi-Annual PRE-INVENTORY SALE

With the music season coming to a close and with the countless number of student recitals practically over, this column joins the other vacationists, and with today's issue "sounds the last note" until next September.

In retrospect, this has been one of the busiest musical seasons we have ever had. It is a happy fact that musical activity grows in Atlanta and in Georgia each year. And with many of the major musical events of next year already scheduled and announced, next season bids fair to surpass any yet.

Let's all get a good vacation, musicians and music lovers, so that we will all have renewed artistic energy next fall.

Concerto Festival.

The major coming event is the continuation of the Concerto Festival on Thursday night. This event will take place at the recital hall of the Chamber of Commerce. The Atlanta Philharmonic orchestra, under the baton of George L. Under, will play the scores for young pianists and violinists to gain their first experience playing with a symphony orchestra.

This wonderful opportunity that is given student musicians of Georgia is sponsored by the Georgia Federation of Music Clubs. It was originated by Evelyn Jackson, who conceived the idea of making an opportunity for ambitious young musicians to appear with orchestras. Miss Jackson is the permanent chairman of the festival for the federation.

The concertos that will be played Thursday night are the Mendelssohn "Concerto in G minor," the Mozart D major and the Chopin Concerto for Violin and the Debussy Concerto for Violin.

The public is invited to hear these young musicians perform, there being no admission charged. This season's Concerto Festival opened with two events yesterday, one at 3 o'clock and one at 8:30 last night, both at the Chamber of Commerce. At these programs the young musicians played the junior concerto, "In E-flat," by Schumann, and Haydn's "Kaiser Concerto."

Miss Boyd's Recital.

Vinnie Ream Boyd presented her junior pupils of the Spoken Word in recital yesterday (Saturday) morning at her home studio, 892 Forrest road, N. E. The program included varied types of selections presenting work toward a standard of beauty and correctness of the spoken word.

On the program were Viola Soris, Jeanne Kleiber, Ann Trinkle, Betty Nash, Joan Walters, Alice Davis, Lenard Woodruff, Anna Swanson, David McAfee, Shirley Janette Knight, June Dobbs and Esther George.

Miss Hancock's Recital.

Earl Chester Smith will present his daughter, Miss Hancock, in piano recital at 4 o'clock this afternoon at the Grand Theater building. Invitations have been issued to a wide circle of friends of the young artist and of Mr. Smith.

Miss Hancock's recital will include "Prelude and Fugue No. 21, B-flat," by Bach; the entire "Sonata, Opus 2, No. 1," by Beethoven; a Chopin waltz and Nocturne, "The Bumble Bee," Korsakoff-Rachmaninoff; Four Little Poems, "The Eagle," The Brook, "Moonshine," all by MacDowell; and "Whispering Dance," also by MacDowell.

Mrs. La Fontaine's Recitals.

Allie La Fontaine presented her dance pupils in two brilliant recitals last week. Both events were very elaborate, with gorgeous costumes and fine choreography.

The first was Friday night in the auditorium of Bass Junior High school, and the second was Saturday night in the auditorium of Girls' High school in Decatur.

Miss Schukraft's Recital.

Helen Schukraft presented her dance pupils in their annual recital at Joel Chandler Harris school auditorium Monday night. The program included dance numbers of various types, including tap, ballet and acrobatic. The accompanists were Evelyn Crawford, Louise Ellis and Eugenia Mason.

Those taking part on the program were Muri Barnes, Shirley Barnes, Beverly Beavers, Betty Bryan, Anne Burdett, Ellen Carroll, Miriam Carroll, Eileen Cox, Carolyn Dunton, Frances Dunton, Jo Earnest, Jimmie English, Laura English, Louise Garrison, Betty Jean Harper, Betty Jackson, Frankie Jacks, Alice Johnson, Gloria Korman, Lanier Landrum, Robert McClellan, Ted McClellan, Arthur McDonald, James Murphy, Dianna Murr, Betty Olds, Harriet Pause, Cynthia Phillips, Martha Phillips, Ola Mayfield, Janet Pitt, Merilee Rankin, Anne Van Ruse, Mary Howard Watkins, Dixie Watson, Gordona Woodward, Winona Woodward and Margaret Wolfe.

"Ballerina" Opening.

Music lovers and disciples of the dance will jointly enjoy the motion picture, "Ballerina," which opens at the Emory theater today and runs through Tuesday.

MRS. ARMISTEAD SUCCUMBS AT 84

Widow of Late Fulton County Tax Collector Dies in Milledgeville.

Mrs. Annie Hewson Armistead, 84, widow of Thomas M. Armistead, for 35 years tax collector of Fulton county, died yesterday afternoon at the home of a son, Ernest S. Armistead, of Milledgeville, after an illness of two weeks.

Mrs. Armistead was born in Conyers, Ga., May 25, 1855, the daughter of Jeff and Salea Warren Hewson. She married Thomas M. Armistead May 16, 1884. Mr. Armistead died in 1922 while still in office.

For the last ten years Mrs. Armistead had made her home with a daughter, Mrs. E. A. Erwin, of 2895 Peachtree road.

Other survivors include another daughter, Miss Louise Armistead, of Charlotte, N. C.; four other sons, John W. Armistead, of New York city, formerly of Atlanta; Sam Armistead, of Atlanta; Frank Armistead, of Charlotte, N. C.; and four grandchildren, Miss Mary Anne Armistead, of Atlanta; Ernest Armistead Jr., and Alton Armistead, of Milledgeville, and Miss Ethel Erwin, of Atlanta.

Funeral arrangements will be announced by H. M. Patterson & Son.

ENLARGED HEALTH PROGRAM IS URGED

Association Ends Meeting With Appeal for Legislative Financing.

Concluding a three-day session the Georgia Public Health Association went on record yesterday with an appeal for legislative financing of an enlarged public health program.

Dr. Guy Lunsford, director of county health work, said no figure was set but contended the program advocated would require "considerably more" than the $600,000 appropriated by the assembly two years ago.

In a resolution, the association said:

In view of the great need for expansion of public health services among the people of Georgia, to more adequately care for the health of mothers and babies of the state and to insure the prevention of spread of infectious and contagious diseases and the occurrence of premature deaths from preventable causes among our people in all walks of life, the general assembly of the state of Georgia is respectfully and urgently requested to make available sufficient funds for the operation of an enlarged public health program throughout the state of Georgia.

GEORGIA GROCERS OPEN MEETING HERE TOMORROW

Barbecue Today for 1,500 Retail Food Dealers Preliminary to Talks on Common Problems.

The men who operate Georgia's grocery stores—some 1,200 to 1,500 of them—will gather in Atlanta today to start the 19th annual convention of the Georgia Retail Food Dealers' Association. While problems of retailers are to be discussed officially tomorrow and Tuesday, the grocers today will register at the Biltmore hotel headquarters, and this afternoon will be guests of Atlanta meat packers and bakers at a barbecue at Lakemoor, country home of Wiley L. Moore, Atlanta businessman.

Principal Speakers.

Mrs. Stephen May, of New York city, and W. H. H. Jones, of Augusta, representative in the general assembly from Richmond county, will be principal speakers at the session beginning at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning, following addresses of welcome by Governor Rivers, Mayor Hartsfield and J. H. Merritt and M. Blank, of Atlanta.

Lester W. Grady, of Macon, will respond to the welcome, and John W. McDaniel Jr., of Augusta, president of the association, will introduce M. Blank, of Atlanta; W. J. Hinley, of Savannah; J. C. Anderson, of Augusta; W. J. Carreker, of Griffin, and Morris Konter, of Savannah, who are vice presidents. The Rev. F. L. Church, of Atlanta, is chaplain.

"A Day in a Grocery Store" is to be presented tomorrow by Mr. and Mrs. Lester Grady, of Macon, while S. A. Camp, of Atlanta, is scheduled to bring a message to the Georgians from the National Association of Retail Grocers.

Banquet and Dance.

The National Biscuit Company will be host to the grocers at luncheon tomorrow and at a banquet and dance tomorrow night at the Biltmore.

"Present Day Problems of the Retail Grocer" will be the subject of round-table discussion Tuesday morning, following an address by President McDaniel. Resolutions and nominations for 1940 officers will be made also.

Emory L. Brooks, president of the Atlanta Retail Food Dealers' Association, will preside. The convention will adjourn Tuesday following another luncheon given by the National Biscuit Company.

251 OLD HOUSES TO BE DEMOLISHED

Work To Start Tomorrow on Clark Howell Homes.

Job of demolishing the 251 old houses that will be supplanted by the Atlanta Housing Authority's Clark Howell Homes will begin tomorrow.

Contract for the work has been awarded M. H. Screws, F. D. Rimer and J. H. Hudgins under a joint arrangement. All houses must be torn down within 60 days under the contract's terms, to make ready for the construction of the new buildings, which will be located on the area bounded by Techwood, Luckie, North avenue and Mills street.

The project, the first of the Authority's $17,000,000 slum clearance program to get under way, will house approximately 600 families now living in substandard quarters. Rentals will be about $3 a month per room, with small added charges for utilities. Tenants will be restricted to those whose incomes do not exceed five times the amount of the rent of their quarters.

Abernathy, Mailho, Nicholson, Hafey Hold Southern Batting Lead

In Dixie's FIELDS AND STREAMS

Since 1900 when an organized effort for the protection of wild-life interests in the United States began to attract public attention, hunters and fishermen have realized that the only way to protect their interests is through organization of conservation clubs for the purpose of focusing public attention on the need of a progressive wild-life movement.

In the deep south this program has been slow to start in view of the fact that nature was more favorable to wild-life resources in this part of the country than in any other region. Due to this fact, the supply of game has been more abundant and the need for protection has been generally accepted only in the last ten years.

FIFTY CLUBS FORMED. During the past three years the program of organizing county and local conservation clubs has received added emphasis as the need has become more apparent. It is estimated that over 50 such clubs have been organized in the state of Georgia during the past three years. Some of these clubs, it is true, were formed only for the purpose of getting quail from the state game farm, and others for selfish interests, but among those formed are quite a few clubs which have functioned generally on a sound program of improving wild-life conditions in the state. In order to acquaint readers of this page with the more prominent clubs which are set up as permanent organizations, a brief summary of the clubs and the results which they have obtained will be discussed.

BARTOW CONSERVATION Organized in Cartersville, Ga., during the month of December,

YOUNG ADVANCES TO FIFTH PLACE; MAULDIN DROPS

Marshall Loses Twenty Points; Smokies Push Team Batting to .320.

Woodley Abernathy, Knoxville outfielder, improved his average slightly during the past week and with .411, he is the only Southern association regular over the .400 mark.

Emil Mailho, Atlanta outfielder, keeps within striking distance of the top and now has .398. Abernathy leads in runs batted in with 43 and Mailho in stolen bases with 12.

Bill Nicholson, of Chattanooga, is back on the hit wagon again and has pulled up 20 points to .363 to take the third spot. Bud Hafey, of Knoxville, lost 20 points and fell down to fourth with .376 but has the lead in runs with 57 and in total bases with 121. Babe Young, of Knoxville, came up eight points to take fifth with .357, and the hit lead with 71.

Calvin Chapman, of Nashville, has the home run lead at 13, and Dutch Meyer, of Knoxville, leads in doubles with 18.

The fast-stepping Knoxville Smokies have the leading batting mark of .320 while the even faster stepping Memphis Chickasaws have the fielding lead with .973. The league-leading Chattanooga Lookouts are last in fielding with .959 but are far in front in double plays with 65.

Crip Polli, of Chattanooga, broke even in two games and continues to lead the pitchers with seven wins and one loss. Frank Lamanski, of Knoxville, is second with four and one while Dick Bass, of Chattanooga, and Herman Besse, of Memphis, have seven wins and two losses.

TEAM BATTING. Includes games of Wednesday, June 7.

Bolling's Double in Ninth Wins for Phils

REDS BLAST FOUR HOME RUNS, BUT DODGERS WIN, 7-6

Phils Take Two From Cards; Cubs and Giants Winners.

The Phillies beat St. Louis twice Saturday, 6 to 5 and 5 to 3, with the home team's newly arrived first baseman providing the punch for the first win.

Jack Bolling, obtained from the Atlanta club of the Southern association, went to work a few hours after he arrived by airplane. He led the batting order and vindicated Manager Doc Prothro's judgment with the victory hit, a two-bagger in the ninth, that scored Kirby Higbe.

Outfit 12 to 6 in a game in which Cincinnati hit four home runs, the Dodgers nevertheless capitalized to the fullest extent on their blows to come from behind and beat the Reds, 7 to 6, in the opener of their series.

The Chicago Cubs scored first blood in the current series with the Boston Bees, winning, 2-1, behind Lefty Earl Whitehill, starting and winning pitcher. The Cubs scored their runs in the third and seventh, each time behind doubles. Root replaced Whitehill in the ninth when the Bees scored.

The Giants slammed out 11 hits for a 6-to-2 victory over Pittsburgh Pirates in the first game of their series. Hal Schumacher went the route on seven hits for his fourth win.

BLANKS A'S, 6-0, ON TWO BLOWS

Tigers Beat Nats Twice; Other Two Games Are Rained Out.

By The Associated Press.

The Detroit Tigers took both ends of a double-header with the Washington Senators, slugging out 19 hits to take the nightcap, 17 to 5, after winning the opener, 6 to 5, with a ninth-inning rally.

Hank Greenberg, of the Tigers, hit his 14th and 15th homers of the season with a circuit blow in each contest, while Rookie Frankie Croucher had two homers for Detroit in the second game.

TIGERS 6-17; NATS 5-5.

Miss Hoffman Weds Richard L. Jordan

The marriage of Miss Helen Hoffman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Hoffman, and Richard Lewis Jordan, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. F. Jordan, was solemnized yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock at Lake Wood Heights Methodist church. Dr. Louie D. Newton and Rev. Arthur Maness read the marriage vows.

Mrs. Edward Lovett and Madison Vann presented a program of music.

The altar of the church was banked with palms, ferns and floor baskets of white gladioli and interspersed with tiers of white cathedral candelabra holding burning white tapers.

Frank Jordan and Benson Jordan were groomsmen, and Dr. Walker G. Browne was best man. Miss Myrtis Hoffman was maid of honor. She was gowned in a duobonnet and white chiffon dress, with which she wore white accessories. She wore a shoulder bouquet of white roses.

Mrs. J. W. Walton, matron of honor, wore an olive green and white chiffon dress. White accessories and a shoulder bouquet of white roses completed her costume.

The bride entered with her father, by whom she was given in marriage. She was gowned in a navy blue and white dress. Navy blue and white accessories and a shoulder bouquet of bride's roses and valley lilies completed her outfit.

Mrs. Hoffman, mother of the bride, was gowned in a powder blue lace. She wore white accessories and a shoulder bouquet of pink roses. Mrs. Jordan, mother of the groom, chose for the occasion a navy blue triple sheer, with which she wore white accessories. Her shoulder bouquet was pink roses.

The bridal couple left after the ceremony for a wedding trip and upon their return they will reside at 734 Ponce de Leon court.

Anderson-Williams Wedding Set for June

BALTIMORE, Md., June 10.—The announcement of the engagement of Miss Maude Brown Anderson, daughter of Mrs. W. D. Alexander Anderson, of this city, and the late Lieutenant Colonel Anderson, corps of engineers, United States army, to Thomas John Chew Williams, of Baltimore and Philadelphia, is of interest to their many friends.

Miss Anderson is the granddaughter of the late attorney general of Virginia, the Honorable William A. Anderson, of Richmond and Lexington, Va., and Mrs. Anderson, and of the late Judge and Mrs. William Fannin Brown, of Carrollton, Ga.

Mr. Williams is the son of Dr. and Mrs. Richard Claggett Williams, of this city, and grandson of the late Judge T. J. C. Williams, of the juvenile court of Baltimore, and Mrs. Williams and of the late Mr. and Mrs. Thomas John Chew, of Baltimore and Prince William county, Virginia.

Miss Anderson and Mr. Williams are both graduates of the Johns Hopkins University. Miss Anderson graduating with a bachelor of science degree and Mr. Williams taking his bachelor of engineering degree from the School of Electrical Engineering. He holds a commission as first lieutenant in the engineer reserves.

The wedding takes place June 30 and they will reside in Philadelphia, where Mr. Williams is an electrical engineer on the staff of the General Electric Company.

Miss Sutton Weds George C. Currie.

WASHINGTON, Ga., June 10.—A marriage of interest throughout the south is that of Miss Emma Danforth Sutton, daughter of Walter Lee Sutton, to George Christian Currie, of Lake City, Fla., which took place on Saturday in Danburg Baptist church.

Dr. Willis A. Sutton, of Atlanta, uncle of the bride, performed the ceremony in the presence of friends and relatives. Miss Jessie Sutton, sister of the bride, was maid of honor, while Mrs. Charles Raymond McCarty, of Highlands, N. C., was matron of honor.

Bridesmaids were Miss Frankie Lou Warnack, of Brooklet, Ga.; Misses Elizabeth Blackmon, Emmelle Thurman, of Danburg; Mrs. Stacy Turner, of Thomson; and Miss Elizabeth McCarty, of Florida. Grace Walton, of Danburg, was flower girl.

Van H. Priest, of Madison, Fla., was Mr. Currie's best man and ushers were Welby Compton, of Augusta, and George H. Standard, of Gainesville, Ga.

Following the ceremony, a reception was given at the bride's home. Judge and Mrs. C. E. Sutton assisted in receiving the guests.

The bride is the daughter of Walter Lee Sutton and the late Mrs. Harriet Wynne Sutton, of Danburg. Since her graduation from Shorter College, at Rome, she has been engaged in teaching, and for the past year was a member of the high school faculty in Edgefield, S. C.

Mr. Currie, a native of Quitman, Ga., is the son of Mrs. Cora Christian Currie and the late Walter Lee Currie. For several years he has been a prominent businessman of Washington, Ga., but during the past year he has purchased a business in Lake City, Fla., where he and his bride will reside.

Marriage Announced.
Announcement is made today by Mrs. Francis M. Waites of the marriage of her niece, Miss Bertha Frances Roberts, to Walter Dillard Moseman, the ceremony having been solemnized last December 31.

State Federation President Describes Trip to General Federation Council

By MRS. ALBERT M. HILL, of Greenville, President of Georgia Federation of Clubs.

After traveling from the Atlantic seaboard to the Golden Gate, being thrilled by the great variety of beautiful scenery which included the grandeur of the Grand Canyon, "having seen more than we could remember and remembered more than we could have seen," we arrived in San Francisco atuned for an inspiring and soul-stirring council meeting. Council theme, the same used by Georgia Federation for the 1938 convention at Albany, "Enlarge the place of thy tent—lengthen thy cords and strengthen thy stakes" (Isaiah 54:2), struck the deeply spiritual note, which was rather analytical in nature—reviewing the past, taking stock of the present and outlining definite objectives for which clubwomen must strive if they continue to make constructive contribution to our national life. Every speaker stressed the fact that democracy is fighting for its life and pled with clubwomen to exert their influence as members of the largest group of organized women in the world and as individuals to combat the forceful propaganda of dictators.

Mrs. Sallie Orr Dunbar demonstrated her rare ability as a leader and presiding officer by steering the sessions safely and happily through some very tense moments, usually winning her point by her earnestness of purpose, clarity and vision, and her fairness at all times. Said she: "We must get back to certain spiritual fundamentals, we are grasping toward a return to the religious precepts upon which our very government was founded. Democracy will not work unless the individuals who constitute a democracy make it work through service, integrity and devotion to fundamental principles. Never has woman's opinion carried such weight; never has our solidarity been so evident, and in peace as in other organizations. We must apply this strength and solidarity."

Mrs. John L. Whitehurst, first vice president, urged her hearers to safeguard democracy by bending their energies toward obviating its weaknesses such as poor housing, heavy taxes, inequality in educational advantages; help to "sell democracy" to regenerate faith in religion; especially among our youth; assume responsibility of citizenship—the apathy of citizens being the outstanding weakness of our democracy today.

Dr. Burdette Speaks.

Dr. Clara Burdette, first president of the California Federation of Women's Clubs, a pioneer in the General Federation of Women's Clubs of which she is a past president at present, chairman of the historical and continuation committee, spoke most interestingly on the subject, "To What Purpose Has It Been?" Now in her nineties but full of pep and enthusiasm, it seemed most fitting that she should make a plea for a sane adjustment of old ideals and new ways of living and thinking—a safe and wise method of "keeping abreast of the times." She quoted a president of the University of California who had experienced great difficulty in bringing his trustees to a realization of the necessity of meeting the changing way of college life. "When I am dead tell my trustees not to weep for me for I shall be no dearer than they have been for years." It was her thought that, because of past accomplishment, our organization should now proceed with greater strength, power and endurance, "to be ready to meet a member of a woman's club should feel it her very special duty to think, talk and act pro-America. Always being sure to think before she talks or acts in order that she may be sure of typifying the highest ideals of our great land."

"Effective Publicity Promotes Human Welfare" was the title of an interesting address by Marshall N. Dana, editor of the Portland, Ore., Journal. He classified women as belonging to two great groups—those who have been stirred and have an itch to do and those who are happy enough just to be here. Attributes that are most needed in womanhood are heartiness, simplicity, sincerity, warmth of heart and the desire to help, not command. True Americanism, he defined, as "living actions, not words." Concerted action by organized women "would end crime's long night," he asserted. Both Mr. Dana and Grace Bangs, of the New York Herald Tribune, urged appreciation of the importance of effective publicity if we successfully adjust democracy to human welfare.

Public welfare department presented a very interesting program with interesting speakers who stressed the necessity of human conservation to national existence—more important even than soil conservation of which we hear so much, or our obligation to defend our land against foreign invaders. Dorothy Thompson in a radio broadcast begged for individual responsibility to be recognized in the saving of our democracy. Many of you may have heard her interesting discussion in which she stated that "democracies have the sitters" and Europe is now suffering from a "war of nerves." Truth at present is not pleasant, she declares, for we are governed by propaganda, and governments are using the taxpayers' money to sell themselves to us, but the protection of truth is the protection of self, and the people who have the courage to face facts achieve the greatest happiness.

Twentieth Birthday Is Celebrated By Chatsworth Club

Mrs. Jesse M. Sellers was recent hostess to the Chatsworth Woman's Club. The rooms opened to the guests were attractive with quantities of spring flowers. This meeting celebrated the twentieth anniversary of the club. An article which appeared in the Chatsworth Times 20 years ago, giving details of the organization meeting, was read, and several other articles told of the activities the club participated in at that time. The members were organized under the name of the Chatsworth Civic League. Some of the old members present gave interesting accounts of past club work, minutes of some of the meetings were read from an old minute book. Miss Raney Goswick gave a good talk on the world's fair, and comments were made on this subject.

During the business session, presided over by the president, Mrs. E. P. Adams, an interesting library report was given. During the month of May, 776 books were circulated to adults and children. The number of books in the library is 1,152.

June meeting will be with Mrs. M. D. Jefferson with Mrs. Robert Vining and Mrs. Nichols as co-hostesses. Mrs. Sellers, assisted by her daughter, served a salad course. Members present included Mesdames M. D. Jefferson, E. P. Adams, J. S. Jones, Johnnie Hartley, Robert Vining, Roy McGinty Jr., and Miss Nancy Goswick. Visitors were Mrs. H. P. Kitchen and Miss Mary Phillips.

is managed, so our thanks go again to the Atlanta Constitution and Mrs. Bessie Shaw Stafford and Mrs. M. H. Harvie Jordan, who serve us so faithfully and so well. Our extension report was the first received by the chairman so there was commendation for our Mrs. E. M. Bailey. We are always envious because of our Tallulah Falls School, our gifts, scholarships, and our student aid—all this together with the success of the Cornelia Woman's Club in carrying off the first prize of $50 in the safety contest, made us very happy. There were eight of our state at the council meeting—Mrs. Ritchie, Mrs. Butler, Mrs. Clifford Smith, of LaGrange; Mrs. W. Taylor, of Cochran; Mrs. C. M. Awtrey, of Greenville; Mrs. L. M. Bradford, of Manchester; Miss Catherine Tift, of Atlanta; and your president—an excellent delegation to a meeting so far from home.

Too long this article is growing and yet I have only touched a very few of the high spots of this council meeting, made colorful with gorgeous flowers such as only California can produce, made rhythmic with lovely music by gifted artists, made happy by the cordiality for which the west is famous. I have said nothing at all of beautiful Treasure Island whose flowers and play of lights are alone worth the trip to the Pacific coast, nor have I mentioned the trip to the Golden Gate and around the bay that was one of the many courtesies extended by the California women. All these I must give you as we meet. It was a privilege to go to this meeting as your president and I am deeply grateful to you for the enrichment which has come to me and which I hope to pass on, in a measure at least, to you.

Let me leave with you a quotation from Mrs. Dunbar: "In the Department of Justice there is a large mural bearing the inscription, 'If we would guide by the light of reason, we must let our minds be bold.' If the clubwomen of 1939-40 are to make their best contributions to the enrichment of life, we must let our minds be bold. We care enough to face life's conditions as they are and apply our talents to the solutions of the problems of humanity? Let us enthusiastically place our strength behind the functions of those things required to enrich and safeguard all we hold essential—all we hold dear. Let us not dodge the real issue of life nor claim we do not know or care." The challenge is ours.

Inman Park Woman's Club which recently brought into Georgia Federation its splendid group of more than 100 members is the realization of the vision of one woman, Miss Sue Methvin, who was made honorary life president, in recognition of her ability and leadership. Sensing the great need for a woman's club, Miss Methvin called key women of Inman Park to a meeting in her home for the purpose of organizing. Two meetings were held in her home with interest so aroused that the third assembly was in an auditorium and there were 106 present. The body was chartered and meetings are now held in Greenfield Masonic Temple, until another vision is realized and the club has its own home.

The "Sundown Fashion Parade" officially opened the Atlanta Woman's Club popular swimming pool. Mrs. Calvin Shelverton, recently elected club president, has as swimming pool chairman, Mesdames Anthony Addy, Conway Hunter and George Stanley. Dancing on the patio followed the fashion show.

Mrs. Ralph Butler will be guest of the Tifton Twentieth Century Library Club at its closing meeting, the year. The occasion will feature a luncheon honoring the newly organized junior club. Incoming officers of the senior club are Mrs. J. J. Clay, president; Mrs. W. E. White, first vice president; Mrs. Bennie Bowen, second vice president; Mrs. C. B. Culpeper, recording secretary; Mrs. J. E. Kohn, corresponding secretary; Mrs. C. R. Dyer, assistant secretary. The retiring president, Mrs. Nichols Peterson was made honorary life president.

Mrs. Frank A. Dennis, of Eatonton, chairman of public welfare in Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs, addressed the graduating class at Rabun-Nacoochee school at Rabun Gap during the recent commencement.

Mrs. Hinton Blackshear, of Atlanta, has been made beneficiary of one of the recreation scholarships offered for the first time at Emory this summer through the Atlanta Girl Scouts Council. There will be an institute on recreation during the session.

Catherine Tift, of Atlanta, who was the lovely representative of Georgia's Junior Clubwomen at the recent Council of General Federation in San Francisco, enjoyed the unusual privilege of being escorted around the studios in Hollywood by Frank Freeman Jr., formerly of Atlanta and whose father, originally from Greenville, Ga., has succeeded Zukor as head of Paramount Pictures, Inc. Catherine was given the opportunity of meeting the stars and had the "thrill of her life."

Elton Woman's Club met recently with Mrs. M. E. Loughridge, with Mrs. J. C. Louride assisting hostess. Mrs. W. W. Keith, vice president, presided over a musical program during which Mrs. W. W. Keith Jr. sang in response to roll call each member answered with her favorite musical composition. Cooking school sponsored by the club was such a decided success it was decided to make it an annual event.

Mrs. M. A. Brantley is the incoming president of Quinman Woman's Club and serving with her will be Mrs. H. R. Garrett, first vice president; Mrs. Russell Emerson, second vice president; Mrs. Frank Barker, recording secretary; Walter Warren, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Lawton Lee, treasurer. Directors are Mes-

James A. L. Tidwell, L. C. Chapman, D. B. McDonald, Brantley Baum and Royal Daniel.

Tunnel Hill has as new officers for the Woman's Club, Mrs. E. Baldwin, president; Mrs. J. E. Moore, vice president; Mrs. Louis Rogers, recording secretary; Mrs. Charles Chester, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Ivan Moore, treasurer. The retiring president is Mrs. Jessie Brewer.

Bainbridge Tallulah Falls Circle completed its scholarship essays on "Citizenship" in the young ladies have been asked to repeat the performance. This circle federated two years ago with Miss Margaret Conger, as president, and the first year won the district gavel and the state loving cup for making the largest per capita gift to Tallulah school. Membership has grown from 12 to 20 and the group is one of the most active circles in the state.

Among those joining the party on the Governor's special train bound for the New York World's Fair Monday will be the Conger family from Bainbridge; Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Conger, Margaret, Abe Jr., medical student at the University of North Carolina; Willis, law student at Mercer, and Leonard who has recently graduated from the high school.

Woman's Club Holds Interesting Meeting

Mesdames J. A. Willis, C. B. Lord, J. L. McMullan, T. T. Barton, Claud Catlett, were hosts to the Jefferson Woman's Club recently at the Community Cabin.

Meeting was opened with the American Creed read by Mrs. H. J. W. Kizer. The club sang "America," and gave the salute to the flag.

Mrs. M. B. Bryan presided over the business session.

Mrs. J. E. Randolph, treasurer, reported $25.40 in health department fund; $4.83 in general fund; $17.65 received from recent play.

Mrs. H. J. W. Kizer announced the awarding of prizes for best essays on "Citizenship" in the high school. These were won by Johnnie Mobley, Marilyn Roberts, Peter Webb and Enoch Brown, in the respective high school grades.

Mrs. H. E. Aderhold, public welfare chairman, told of the work done in the cancer control campaign recently put on in Jefferson, and announced that plans were being made to establish a cancer clinic in Athens.

Mrs. Carl Legg, garden division chairman, thanked the members for their splendid co-operation in the flower show recently held, and stated that a larger number of persons exhibited than in any show held heretofore.

Mrs. J. D. Escoc, club librarian, gave reviews of several new books.

Note of thanks to Miss Joyce Storey, who coached the play recently put on and sponsored jointly by the club and local U. D. C. chapter was ordered.

The program was presented. Miss Gwendolyn Hood, of Commerce, rendered two piano solos. Mrs. J. C. Alexander then gave a talk on the growing of flowers.

Those present were: Mesdames C. B. Lord, T. T. Barton, H. J. W. Kizer, Carl Legg, W. D. Holliday, R. M. Rigdon, H. W. Davis, E. M. Garrison, J. E. Randolph, J. N. Holder, Stiles Dadsman, H. L. Bentley, E. H. Crooks, Malone, M. L. Mobley, W. T. Bryan, H. L. Mobley, J. A. Willis, J. C. Alexander, Stanley Kessler, Hubert Martin, A. M. Hardy, J. D. Escoc, M. Bryan, J. L. McMullan, C. W. Hood Jr., H. E. Aderhold, Misses Gwendolyn Hood and Irene Rankin, and Miss Sharpe.

Chairman Speaks To Carrollton Club

Mrs. John W. Jenkins, of Athens, second vice president, and Mrs. Cleveland Thompson, Millen, chairman of literature for the Georgia Federation, were guests of the Uncle Remus Woman's Club in Eatonton at their meeting last week. Mrs. Jenkins brought greetings and complimented the club on the efficient way in which it is meeting the needs of the community.

Mrs. Thompson was introduced as speaker by Mrs. J. Frank Walker, chairman of education. Mrs. Thompson spoke interestingly on "The Negroes' Contribution to Literature," saying, "Our negroes in the south have been so bound down by poverty they have failed to make the contribution they have done in other sections." She listed many negroes making very real places for themselves, particularly through the medium of poetry.

The presentation of a pageant, "Mothers of the Bible," was a recent outstanding event put on through the fine arts department and all churches co-operating. The pageant was written and directed by Mesdames Robert Rainey, Claud Singleton and Charles Fincher.

Plans were made for summer activities which include the continuing of all departmental work, children's story hour, collecting jars for distribution to county women, book reviews and regular meetings.

The meeting was held at the home of Mrs. John L. Adams, hostess, with Mesdames J. O. Wall, Tom House and S. I. Walker assisting.

Mrs. Frank A. Dennis, president of the club, presided.

Georgia Club Wins National Award

When the Georgia delegation attending the General Federation Council in San Francisco heard that Cornelia, Ga., had won the award of $50 for their "safety program," a telegram of congratulation was sent to the safety chairman, Mrs. Ben W. Crow, and now that the check has been received the Cornelia Woman's Club is the proudest in the state.

Mrs. Miller Williams, the retiring president, writes: "We are so thrilled we don't know what to do." When planning the work for her administration, Mrs. Williams chose "public safety" as the major project, since there had never been any special work along this line in Cornelia and the need was great.

Mrs. Ben W. Crow was made public safety chairman and her committee was composed of Mrs. Herbert Kimsey and Mrs. Williams.

Report of work accomplished that won the award over all the states follows: 1. Secured the co-operation of the city commissioners and police department in safety program. 2. Safety committee was composed of a representative from each civic organization in the city. 3. Through co-operation of State Highway Department, safety signs were secured and posted in necessary places. 4. Sponsored a public forum on safety driving at the Community House, with speakers from state patrol and from the main office of public safety. Civic groups attended in a body.

5. All members asked to sign "Drive Safely" pledges and have "Drive Safely" tags put on their cars. 6. Sponsored school patrol group through the Boy Scouts and their leaders. 7. School patrol and Scouts distributed safety posters and pamphlets. 8. Asked all children riding bicycles to sign "Drive Safely" pledges. One Scout entered a contest to get the most pledges signed and won a bicycle as a prize. 9. Parent-Teacher representatives presented "Safety program" at club meeting. School chorus sang "safety songs" and the school patrol explained duties and work.

10. Had safety songs taught in

Club Institute Program Featured By Many Distinguished Speakers

By MRS. ALBERT M. HILL, of Greenville, State President of Georgia Clubs.

Always ready and anxious to make each Club Institute as fine as possible, members of the committee in charge are working and planning for the success of the institute to be held in Athens on July 6 and 7, when the University of Georgia will be host to clubwomen from all over the state.

As the members arrange the 1939 institute, they realize that club institutes in Georgia are passing their sixteenth milestone, which makes them the more anxious to have a program for the clubwomen which will be of real help to them in their club work.

The leader chosen, Mrs. John L. Whitehurst, of Baltimore, is a splendid clubwoman, possessing a genuine interest in the public good, rare intelligence, and arresting personality. She is an easy speaker and infuses her talks with an earnestness that is convincing. In San Francisco, the Georgia group had the happy privilege of seeing Mrs. Whitehurst in action and realizing anew her charm and brilliancy. She was one of the most interesting and forceful speakers on the council program and never failed to hold her audience spellbound. She was full of her plans for the coming institute in Georgia and seemed delighted at the prospect of another visit with Georgia clubwomen.

The theme upon which the general discussions will be based was selected by Mrs. Whitehurst, and is the same as is being used by the present administration of the General Federation: "Adjusting Democracy for Human Welfare."

Mrs. Whitehurst's opening address will be on "Democracy and Its Future in America." Competent speakers selected by the institute committee will discuss the questions, "What Is Democracy?" "Why Is Democracy Being Challenged Today?" "What Is Being Offered in the Place of Democracy?"

There will be parliamentary drills; discussion on federation policies, and a forum on "Program Building," and time allotted for questions after each speaker. Then there is the house party in Miller Hall on the University of Georgia campus where there will be time for relaxation and fun.

Some advantages of such institutes are: (1) An easy and delightful way to keep abreast of the times and to discern the present trends of thought on contemporary educational topics. (2) The satisfaction of a long felt need of higher training and information on new subjects. (3) It affords an opportunity to make contacts with other women who are interested in the same activities. (4) It offers some practical methods of solving home and community problems. (5) Who could wish for a more satisfying vacation with freedom from home cares and responsibilities, with an opportunity to rest and at the same time enjoy stimulating contacts with intellectual and inspirational forces?

Set apart this period to learn better the full meaning of club work and the organization and administration of clubs. Come with your questions to help solve the many problems that arise in carrying through a program of club activities. Let every clubwoman realize what a powerhouse an institute can be in helping them accomplish their objectives and those of the General Federation. You cannot afford to miss it.

Mercer University Scholarships Offered Clubwomen Today

By MRS. J. C. ROGERS, of Dahlonega, State Education Chairman.

Other sections of our state are to benefit by the generous gift of tuition scholarships to clubwomen desiring to fit themselves for forum leadership and as program chairmen.

Emory University will offer such scholarships for the third year this summer, the class to begin on June 12.

Dr. Spright Dowell, president of Mercer University, will give 12 scholarships covering tuition in one of the courses offered during the summer session of Mercer University which opens for registration June 12. Classes begin June 14.

Since the time is so short, Dr. Highsmith, director of the summer session, gives permission for the clubwomen to enter without a formal application any time during registration June 12-13. Excellent courses are offered in economics, education, political science, philosophy and sociology which are especially suited to the needs of forum leaders. But Dr. Highsmith most obligingly offers to clubwomen any course which is given during the summer session. Any clubwoman near enough to Mercer University to take advantage of this great opportunity for further study will please apply directly to Mercer University, and the first 12 will be the lucky women to receive the free instruction.

This second gift of tuition scholarships to clubwomen came in answer to my request of all senior colleges in the state that they each give such scholarships so that clubwomen in every section of Georgia would have this special training within their reach.

Dr. Highsmith, president of the University System of Georgia, assures me that he will authorize the tuition scholarships for clubwomen in all the senior colleges of the University System when approved by each institution.

Neither a formal institutional action and change of policy take considerable time. So while correspondence began just after my appointment as forum leadership chairman in February, some of the permissions have been secured and only within the past week too late for announcements to clubs which have closed for the summer. But we have the satisfaction of knowing that this great privilege of advanced study will be available next summer in colleges and universities located in every section of our state and within easy distance of all our clubwomen.

Clayton Woman's Club Elects Officers.

Officers of the Clayton Woman's Club elected to serve for the ensuing year are: President, Mrs. W. M. Edson; first vice president, Mrs. G. L. Tomlin; second vice president, Mrs. E. R. Taylor; recording secretary and treasurer, Mrs. Russell Ivie; corresponding secretary and reporter, Mrs. C. R. Hendrix; auditor, Mrs. J. A. Green; parliamentarian, Mrs. L. M. Young.

Recent meeting was held at the home of Mrs. J. C. Dover, with Mrs. G. L. Tomlin and Miss Elizabeth Turnbull as co-hostesses. Mrs. L. M. Young presided over the well-attended meeting and Mrs. R. C. Nicholson reported contribution sent to Tallulah Falls school. Mrs. Young reported for the Girl Scout committee.

Mesdames W. L. Ryals, Hugh Cheek and J. H. Jolly supervised the luncheon and gave a favorable report. June duties will be in charge of Mesdames W. L. Ryals, J. C. Dover and E. R. Taylor. Two stunts nights will be sponsored during the summer months. Mrs. C. M. Dickerson, chairman of cancer drive, read a letter received from Mrs. H. B. Ritchie, club commander, commending the club for the liberal contribution raised in Rabun county.

Summary of the year's work, of which the club is very proud, was given by the secretary, Mrs. G. L. Tomlin, and Mrs. Young, the retiring president, thanked the members for their splendid co-operation. Incoming officers will be installed at the June meeting and work for the coming year will be discussed.

Texas Federation Owns Clubhouse.

Texas Federation of Women's Clubs, one of the largest member organizations of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, is the debt-free owner of its magnificent $80,000 headquarters in Austin, Texas, a gift from Mrs. Clara Driscoll, of Corpus Christi.

Erected during the depression, this federation home has threatened the financial security and progress of the organization through a number of administrations.

Recalling the public spirited generosity which prompted Mrs. Driscoll to make possible the restoration of the historic Alamo, the "Savior of the Alamo," by which name she is widely known, was appealed to on behalf of the Texas federation.

In November of last year, she loaned the federation $92,000 at 3 per cent for 15 years. This was a glorious deed to the thousands of Texas club women, but the big thrill came when at a recent club meeting in Corpus Christi, Mrs. Driscoll electrified her hearers, and brought them cheering to their feet, by announcing that she was giving the house to the Texas clubwomen as a gift.

In the presence of Mrs. Joseph M. Perkins, president of Texas federation, and other officers at the federation, papers deeding the Austin house were drawn up the next day.

"In order that the club women of Texas may go about their splendid work with a lighter heart, I give them federation headquarters," Mrs. Driscoll said.

Lens and Shutter--Camera News

By JACQUES H. UPSHAW.

There are a few people inclined to be analytical, who try to find reasons for things. These people ask why photography should have taken the country by storm, why many consider their personal impediments incomplete unless they include a camera. It certainly is not an idle question.

A few common signs indicate the extent of this popular hobby. For instance, it is not unusual today to find a darkroom included in the plans for the most modest little bungalow.

Amateur photography is now good material for movie comedies, cartoons, radio jokes, and even the daily papers; and when any avocation gains such prominence as to merit a place in these forms of entertainment, you may be sure it is national or international in scope. Photography is so widespread it has been referred to variously as a hobby, vocation, religion and even a disease.

It may well be any or all of these. It is definitely a mania with some, notably the enthusiast who goes about snapping pictures incessantly, and forcing his friends to look at the results; a religion to a few serious workers; and a vocation—nothing more—to many who turn out the thousands of photographs required by business.

Skip Commercial Side.
Of merely commercial photography I think little need be said. It is a way of making a living, either good or bad, as can be any other profession. The merger of amateur and professional in one individual already has been spoken of, some weeks ago, as a present to those whom the gods love, to be cherished and cultivated as one of earth's rarest combinations. But this other phase of photography—the purely amateur—has been the subject of inanity, mediocrity, and pictorial and technical perfection—is the thing that interests us now.

Everyone either is a photographer himself or has a best friend who is one, and he or his friend spends his daylight hours with a camera hung like an anchor about his neck, and stays most of the night in the darkroom, trying to find among dozens of negatives one that will give a print to satisfy his artistic and technical standards.

Constantly wearing a camera isn't just like wearing a necktie or a pair of shoes, you know. We all expect our best friends to wear shoes—in fact, rather insist upon it—but for them to have also a two-pound camera always dangling from their necks is, to say the least, a bit more than is necessary. We rather suspect, when we stop to analyze, that this is something not needed to carry on a normal life.

Must Be Reason.
There must be a reason. There are many reasons, you say? Yes, but that is after all a very unsatisfactory hedging of the question. Undoubtedly there are many reasons, but there must be a fundamental one which will account for the tremendous surge in popularity. It is because cameras are interesting little mechanisms to play with? No, for that would not account for the hundreds of amateur photographers who turn out excellent work with ancient or inferior cameras.

Then what about the matter of recording. Everyone, we may say, makes pictures in order to preserve the likeness of his friends and relatives, his pets, his home and surroundings. True; but if this were the main object, amateurs they would not spend so much time on their hobby. One week end a month would be enough time in which to attend to this job.

Perhaps, then, they are intrigued with the physical and chemical magic of photography. Also true; but also only a very small reason. There is something else, something more fundamental, more far-reaching, which runs through the ranks of gadgeteers, experimenters, pictorialists and scientists—all.

The Main Reason.
This main reason, the first-mover, which makes us spend unlimited energy in taking, developing, and exhibiting pictures is the urge to create, which lies in the soul of every man and woman. In varying degrees all men desire to write, to sculpt, to paint, to compose music, to dance; in short, to create a thing of beauty, to give some sensible form to their ideas and emotions. This urge is weaker or stronger as the individual is farther from, or closer to, the ranks of the artist, but it is latent in us all. This germ of the creative urge is what makes us buy a box of water colors when we return from the art gallery, or take up a pencil and try to write poetry after reading Browning or Shakespeare.

Usually this emotive impulse is short-lived. Our enthusiasm for painting quickly dies when we find after a few hours of effort that we have no conception of rep-representing perspective in a plane, and our poetic efforts, die as we consign our self-condemned verse to the flames. We are none too gently faced with the fact that producing a work of art is not merely a matter of the desire to do so.

That photography is a universal hobby is no idle boast. The other day I surprised these six-week-old kittens photographing each other with a camera I had momentarily left.

Camera Takes Place.

And now is when the camera comes into its own. These people who have within them a yearning to express themselves try photography, usually without much hope of success, having been disillusioned so often before in their creative attempts. But, wonder of wonders, they see in even their first prints a suggestion of what they were trying to do. Highly elated, they repeat the performance. Perhaps their first results are very poor, with nearly every fault to be found in photography, but at least it is a creation of their own. Their mistakes are, and how to correct them, and their pictures gradually improve. Some of these amateurs keep improving until they are real camera artists; others, naturally, are satisfied with much more modest success.

Making pictures is like playing a clarinet; one can learn quickly to play simple airs on the clarinet, but to attain the degree of perfection of a symphony orchestra member is the work of a lifetime and the work of an artist. Photography results directly proportional to the energies and thought expended upon it by the photographer.

And that is the reason amateur photography is one of the most important vocations in America, and why it will never disappear from the face of the earth.

Just to prove that photographers are real human beings, the Atlanta Camera Club is having an outing at Lakemoor, on Roswell road, this Wednesday evening, at which the taking of pictures will play no part whatever. The idea is merely to have a good time. But you can hear more about this at the next meeting of the club, Monday at 8 o'clock, in Rich's tearoom.

Dr. Harold B. Friedman is embarking with the Georgia Tech naval unit for Cuba, and promises to return with a set of interesting sea pictures.

Annual Linen Shower Mrs. Slaton Heads Colonial Dames Body At Emory Hospital

The annual linen shower and picnic of the Emory University Hospital Auxiliary will be held Wednesday at 11 o'clock, at the Nurses' home. At this time the linens made by the different churches over the North Georgia conference will be assembled and on display. Mrs. Walter F. Richard, chairman of linens, and Mrs. W. H. Lawson, co-chairman, will be hostesses and will be assisted by the key women, Mesdames Garnett W. Quillian and A. L. Tanner, and the executive board.

Dr. Eugene C. Few will speak. Officers of the auxiliary are Mrs. W. L. Ballenger, president; Mrs. W. D. Singletary, first vice president; Mrs. Fred E. Thomas, second vice president; Mrs. Rembert Green, recording secretary; Mrs. Charles H. Daniel, corresponding secretary; and Mrs. Luther Medlock, treasurer. The other chairmen of committees who will be present are Mrs. W. F. Hutt, publicity; Mrs. Augustus M. Roan, Lucy Elizabeth Pavilion; Mrs. R. L. McMichael, nurses' home; and Miss Clara Bright will be welcomed as the new chairman of the library committee.

This linen shower commemorates the birthday of John Wesley and is held as near the day of his birth as possible. All interested friends over the conference are cordially invited.

Georgians To Attend Baptist Y. W. A. Club

Seventy-five Baptist girls from all parts of Georgia will leave June 20 for a 10-day stay at the Southwide Y. W. A. camp at Ridgecrest, N. C. "in the land of the sky." Twenty-five of these girls will leave Atlanta on a Special Trailways bus, accompanied by Miss Miriam Robinson, Georgia W. M. U., young people's secretary. The camp is under the direction of Miss Juliette Mathew, Southern W. M. U. young people's secretary, and has as its theme: "Our Father's Business—Ours."

At Ridgecrest the Georgia girls will meet over a thousand other young women from all of the southern states and several foreign countries. In addition to the girls, they will have the opportunity to hear and meet such leaders as Dr. L. R. Scarborough, president of Southern Baptist convention; Mrs. F. W. Armstrong, president of Woman's Missionary Union; Miss Martha Franks, missionary to China; Miss Vena Aguilard, French missionary; Mrs. Edwin Dozier, missionary to Japan; Jacob Gartenhaus, missionary to the Jews; Miss Alice Wong, guest from China; Dr. W. O. Carver, Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, Louisville, Ky., and many others.

The program for each day will include worship, periods, mission classes and discussions, conferences, Bible messages, directed recreation, scenic trips, inquiry teas, creative arts and hobbies.

Northwood Club Holds Flower Show

The Northwood Garden Club's annual flower show was held on Tuesday at the North Hills drive home of Mrs. Kenneth Meredith. The judges were Mesdames Chester Martin, J. H. Johns and Raymond Sneed. The grand prize went to Mrs. William Gray.

The winners of class A, large arrangements, were Mrs. Frank Troutman, first; Mrs. Edward S. Wright, second, and Mrs. Ed. Fincher, third. Class D, miniature arrangements winners were Mrs. Edward S. Wright, first; Mrs. Kenneth Meredith, second, and Mrs. James Bawner Jr., third.

After the show tea was served on the terrace to members of the club and their guests.

Mrs. Wilmer Moore, as vice chairman, and Mrs. M. Hines Roberts elected in the treasurer's post held by Miss Isabel Johnston.

The meeting was held with Mrs. Slaton as hostess and the program featured a review of the recent state meeting held here of the Georgia Society of Colonial Dames, read by Mrs. Eldridge. Mrs. George Hillier Jr. and Mrs. J. O. Wynn, reported on the recent convention in Washington, including the luncheon given in honor of the visitors by Mrs. Richard Wilmer, the former Miss Margaret Grant, of Atlanta.

On the nominating committee were Mesdames Philip Alston, chairman; Richard Johnston and Cam Dorsey.

Atlanta Unit President Extends Welcome to Convention Delegates

By Mrs. Dan H. Davis, State Publicity Director of American Legion Auxiliary.

A cordial welcome to Atlanta to attend the Legion Auxiliary convention to be held in that city on June 20, 21 and 22, is extended in the following letter by Mrs. George L. Baker, president of the Atlanta Unit No. 1.

"As president of the Atlanta Unit No. 1 it is my pleasure to extend to every member of the American Legion Auxiliary a most cordial welcome to Atlanta for the twentieth annual convention of the department of Georgia.

"As chairman of the entertainment and housing committee, I want to assure you that everything possible is being done for your pleasure and comfort. All Atlanta is proud and happy to entertain you and we want to make your visit here one long to be remembered.

"The American Legion Auxiliary has become a great force nationally. Care and rehabilitation of disabled veterans and their families, child welfare and Americanism are but a few of the many duties that are incumbent upon addition to these duties, we are, as an organization and as individuals, called upon many times to participate in civic movements, looking to better government and each member of the auxiliary. In better opportunities for the youth of America.

"Our program is essentially the program of the American Legion, however the work of the American Legion would not be complete without the close co-operation of the auxiliary.

"The members of the auxiliary who attend the convention have a great responsibility, as you will receive the mandates of the convention to carry back to your unit, and it will be your duty to see that they are made effective.

"Let us ever keep before us the fact that the American Legion Auxiliary is a service organization, our only reason for being is to render service. Each member is an integral part of the whole and the success of our entire program is measured in terms of our individual effort.

"The American Legion and the American Legion Auxiliary have become a mighty force in our national life, due to the fact that a million and a half men and women have banded together on a common program, and it is essential that if we are to continue to be effective, our membership must continue to increase until every eligible person is enrolled within our ranks. It is an honor and a privilege to be eligible to belong to this fine organization and it is our duty to see that every eligible person is given the opportunity to affiliate with us and take an active part in our endeavors.

"Let me say again, Atlanta welcomes you and the members of Atlanta Unit No. 1 will be of service to you at any time."

Due to school activities and commencement the auxiliary of Ivory Woodward Post No. 127, of Buford, Ga., postponed its meeting from June 2 to June 9, when officers for the coming year were elected.

Mrs. T. R. Settle was re-elected president. Those elected to serve with her were Mrs. A. G. Liles, first vice president; Mrs. W. F. Moore, second vice president; Mrs. F. Y. Light, recording secretary; Mrs. R. L. Neal, corresponding secretary; Mrs. L. H. Kelley, treasurer; Mrs. Fred Sears, chaplain; Mrs. Gordon Spain, sergeant-at-arms, and Mrs. E. E. Benson, historian.

10 to 11—Dance (Miss Atlanta Realtor) (judges to be selected on grounds).
11 to 12—Dancing.

The highlight of the day will be the "Miss Atlanta Realtor" contest at 8:30 p. m. In this contest there will be some 10 to 15 young ladies representing the various board member offices, each representative having been elected by her co-workers to this honor. The winner, who will be known as "Miss Atlanta Realtor in 1939," will be selected not for beauty alone, but for personality, poise, posture, neatness and general attractiveness. There will be a first, second and third prize in this contest.

The winner of last year's contest, Miss Josephine Murphy, who was "Miss Haas & Dodd," has been asked to serve as one of the judges for the contest this year, as will be the custom each year. The other two judges will be selected on the grounds.

The following have been entered in the contest for 1939: Ann Gadd,

The Atlanta Society of Residential Appraisers has arranged a special luncheon for Wednesday, June 14, at 12:30 o'clock at the Piedmont hotel.

This society is made up of about 75 members who are HOLC employees in valuation and property; FHA employees, management department; Building and Loan Association appraisers, and real estate men interested in appraising.

The luncheon is to honor Paul L. Hathaway, appraisal supervisor of the HOLC, who will speak on "The Factor of Comparison in Real Estate Appraising."

Mr. Hathaway is a former contractor and builder, with the last 16 years devoted to the practice and study of residential and commercial appraisal class; governor of the Society of Residential Appraisers and president of D. C. chapter.

He is now conducting a series of educational field conferences originated by the chief appraiser for HOLC fee and salary appraisal personnel.

LIPSCOMB-ELLIS SHOW GOOD SALES

For the Week, $8,750; for the Year, $309,000.

Lipscomb-Ellis Company, realtors, announce the following sales closed during the past week:

No. 12 Bell Meade avenue, in a trade by H. G. Hearn for a vacant lot in Jonesboro, Cherokee E. A. Scott acquired Bell Meade avenue for an investment. Trading price $2,000 on Bell Meade and $500 for the lot, negotiated by J. W. Harris and J. L. Mercer.

Corner Sally street and Gresham street, a residence purchased by L. E. McCracken from George M. Brown, agent for E. A. Scott, acquired Bell Meade avenue for an investment. Trading price $2,000 on Bell Meade and $500 for the lot, negotiated by J. W. Harris and J. L. Mercer.

Miss Gay B. Shepperson and Miss Louisa deB. Fitzsimons to Mrs. Elizabeth A. Allen, the home, the $3,000 class, handled by George S. Hames.

Lot on two acres in Cobb county, on Gilmore road, from Mrs. Sarah Whitely to Mrs. Maude M. Carroll, for consideration of $250, handled by H. W. Whitten.

These sales total $8,750, and bring the total for the year closed through this office to $309,000, involving 71 transfers of property.

Handsome two-story brick home at 1731 Homestead avenue, N. E., with four bedrooms and two baths, on a lot 85x200. Sold by George R. F. Taylor to J. C. Powell, negotiations being handled by Robert F. Head, of Haas & Dodd, realtors.

$250,000 BUILDING OF HOMES TO START

Paving of Sisson Avenue Opens Way for Building by 69 Lot Owners.

A home-building program to be started soon by 69 lot owners on Sisson avenue, between Wisteria way and Delano drive, it is declared will involve an investment of around $250,000. Property owners along Sisson avenue have been waiting for a long time for improvements along the street, and now that the city council, on June 5, passed proper papers to begin this new section.

The building lots, sold some time back, carry restrictions that homes cannot be built for less than $3,500, and with lot-owners ready to start construction as soon as the avenue is paved, it is easy to calculate the large amount involved in the building program.

Two new brick homes have just been completed and 11 additional commitments have been approved by FHA, and construction has been begun by the Dann Construction & Development Company, on plans architecturally designed by Willis R. Biggers. As nearly as constant Mr. Biggers will have charge of architectural work in this new section.

It is interesting to note that some 40 years ago Mr. Sisson, a well-known business man, bought what for many years was known as "The Sisson Farm," with the intention of being "out in the country" from Atlanta.

Now Sisson avenue, within five

Will they renew it? What will it cost next time?

+ RADIO PROGRAMS +

James Melton and Francia White Inaugurate 'Summer Hour' Series

Jane Froman, Jan Peerce in Debut of Another Program Today.

A star-studded summer series featuring James Melton, noted tenor; Francia White, lyric soprano, and Don Voorhees and his orchestra will make its debut over WGST at 8 o'clock tonight. This program replaces the famed Sunday Evening Hour for the summer season. Other features of the program will highlight the guest appearance each week of a popular singer currently enjoying the acclaim of the radio audience.

Jane Froman, Jan Peerce, Erno Rapee and his concert orchestra and the American Singers, a 16-voice mixed chorus, will ring up the curtain on "Musical Playhouse" in its premiere broadcast to be heard over WGST at 6:30 o'clock tonight. The "Musical Playhouse" takes the place of the vacationing Screen Guild Show for the summer.

Mendelssohn's infrequently performed Fifth Symphony in D—the "Reformation"—has been scheduled by Howard Barlow, conductor of the Columbia Broadcasting Symphony, for his weekly broadcast to be heard over WGST at 2 o'clock this afternoon. Mitchell Miller, solo oboist of the orchestra, will be featured.

Ray Noble, Gertrude Lawrence, Leslie Howard, Freddie Bartholomew, Herbert Marshall, Laurence Olivier, Dennis King, Judith Anderson, C. Aubrey Smith, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Roland Young, Anna Neagle, Cecilia Loftus, Basil Rathbone, Brian Aherne, Edna Best, David Niven, Norma Shearer, Madeleine Carroll and Sir Adrian Boult will present a special salute program to the King and Queen of England who are now visiting in the United States. The program will be heard over WSB at 2 o'clock this afternoon. Guy Robertson, favorite star of stage and musical comedy, will receive the Knickerbocker entertainment award when he plays leading role in "Bright Shadow" on the "Knickerbocker Playhouse" program to be heard over WGST at 9 o'clock tonight.

Erich Leindorf, Wagnerian conductor of the Metropolitan Opera Company, will make his American symphonic debut as guest conductor of the NBC Symphony Orchestra's Summer Concert program to be heard over WAGA at 7 o'clock tonight. Leindorf has programmed works by Gluck, Haydn, Debussy and Borodin for his symphonic debut.

The programs include:
1:30—It Goes Like This, WGST.
"I Miss My Sweet."
"Clap Yo' Hands."
"Carolina in the Morning."
"You."
"I'm in the Mood for Love."
"Let's Get Rhythm."
"Don't Worry About Me."
"La Donna e Mobile," from "Rigoletto."
"Sachsa and Natascha," based on a Russian dance by Moussorgsky.
"Waltz in Swing Time," by Jerome Kern.
"Begin the Beguine," by Cole Porter.
"One Alone."
"Lover Come Back to Me."
"Sweethearted Men."
"Sweetheart."
8:00—Summer Hour, WGST.
"A New Moon and an Old Serenade" (orchestra and chorus).
"Our Love" (orchestra and chorus).
"Take Me Out to the Ball Game" (orchestra).
"Home on the Range" (orchestra and chorus).
"Carry Me Back to the Lone Prairie" (orchestra and chorus).
"Fanny Hill" (orchestra).
"I'll Be Home on the Stage" (Miss White and orchestra).
"Love Here Is My Heart" (Melton and orchestra).

Miss Holtzclaw Weds Mr. Quinby

MACON, Ga., June 10.—The marriage of Miss Elizabeth Gilbert Holtzclaw, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. W. Holtzclaw, and Griffith Ernest Quinby, of Louisville, Ky., was solemnized at her parents' home on Clayton street on Saturday.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. W. Holtzclaw and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Quinby, of Louisville, Ky. The improvised altar in the living room was banked with palms and floor baskets of Bermuda lilies.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was met at the altar by the groom and his best man, J. B. White. Her only attendant was her sister, Miss Mary Moore Holtzclaw, who wore a powder blue crepe gown. White accessories and a shoulder bouquet of sweetheart roses and valley lilies completed her costume.

The bride wore a white crepe dress with white accessories and a shoulder bouquet of gardenias and valley lilies.

After the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Holtzclaw entertained at a breakfast.

The couple left by motor for Reel Foot Lake, Tenn., where Mr. Quinby will assist in research work. In September they reside in Louisville, Ky., where Mr. Quinby will continue his studies at the University of Louisville medical school.

Miss Irvine Weds Charles A. Discher

MACON, Ga., June 10.—The marriage of Miss Margaret Irvine and Charles A. Discher was solemnized Saturday at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Stafford Irvine Jr., on Forsyth road. Rev. George M. Wilcox, pastor of the Vineville Presbyterian church, performed the ceremony.

The bride wore a navy chiffon sheer with which she wore navy accessories and a shoulder bouquet of sweetheart roses.

After the ceremony the couple left for a trip to St. Simons Island and upon their return they will reside at 205 Ingleside avenue.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Irvine and Mr. Discher is the son of Mr. and Mrs. C. Discher.

Miss Burks To Wed Lyman A. Hall.

ROME, Ga., June 10.—Of wide social interest throughout the state is the announcement made of the engagement of Miss Frances Burks to Lyman A. Hall, of Calhoun and Rome, the marriage to be quietly solemnized the latter part of this month.

The bride-elect and her fiancé are members of prominent Georgia families, the former being the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Harry V. Burks, of Rome. Her mother was before her marriage Miss Mamie Braselton, of Rome.

Mrs. J. R. Bowman, of Rome, is the bride-elect's only sister.

The bride-to-be is a graduate of Shorter College where she received an A. B. degree. Since that time Miss Burks has taught in the Floyd county schools.

Mr. Hall bears the name of an illustrious Georgian, a signer of the Declaration of Independence. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Hall, prominent citizens of Calhoun. His mother was Miss Leila Mooney, of Rome, and is a graduate of Shorter College. Mr. Hall attended school in Calhoun and the Georgia School of Technology. He is The Atlanta Constitution's representative in the Rome area.

Mr. Hall and his bride will reside in Rome after their marriage.

Breakfast To Fete Miss Aileen Adcock.

Miss Prentiss McIntyre and her mother, Mrs. Lillian McIntyre, will entertain at a breakfast at 10 o'clock today at the Colonial Terrace hotel, honoring Miss Aileen Adcock who will become the bride of Cecil Tillman Jones, of Augusta and Atlanta, at a brilliant ceremony next Thursday evening.

The table will be centered with vari-colored garden flowers and the guests will find miniature gold slippers as favors, with those of the honor guest filled with rice. The breakfast will feature a mock newspaper account of the Adcock-Jones wedding and will be climaxed by a crystal shower.

The guest list includes Miss Adcock's attendants who are Mrs. Hoy Felix Head, matron of honor; Miss Mary Bell, maid of honor; Misses Prentiss McIntyre, Dorothy Keisler, Edna Thompson, Gardner Gunby, Delphine Medlin and Mrs. Linton McCracken, bridesmaids, in addition to the bride-elect's mother, Mrs. Wyatt Adcock, and Mrs. Lillian McIntyre.

Alston—Scheideler.

The marriage of Miss Margaret Alston to Raymond Scheideler was quietly solemnized June 6 at the Sacred Heart rectory. Rev. Father John Emmerth performed the ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas C. Alston and the granddaughter of Mrs. Robert Alston. Mrs. Scheideler attended Girls' High school and is a graduate of the University of Georgia.

Mr. Scheideler is the son of Frank S. Scheideler and the late Mrs. Mary Kurtz Scheideler. He is a southern sales representative.

After a trip to New York the couple will reside at 872 Briarcliff road, N. E.

Give Thanks to Dad...

Thanks to Dad, we have our chance in life. We can see him now, eagerly opening one of our letters from school . . . scanning the hurried lines . . . and then taking out his cheque book to send that extra money for a frat dance. We didn't realize then what sacrifices he made to give us just a little better education than he had ever had. But we know now—and that's why we're going to make this Father's Day an occasion he'll never forget! Father's Day is next Sunday, June 18.

Miss Rosemary Hawk Marries James Simmons at Church Service

The Peachtree Christian church formed the setting yesterday for the marriage of Miss Rosemary Hawk, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Judson L. Hawk, and James Walton Simmons Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. James Walton Simmons, which was performed at 11 o'clock.

Dr. Robert Burns, the pastor of the church, officiated and a musical program was presented by Mrs. Victor Clark. The handsome altar of the church was decorated with silver vases filled with calla lilies.

Miss Elizabeth Randall was the maid of honor and only attendant. She was gown in a maize chiffon, fashioned with a windblown skirt, square-necked bodice and trimmed in self-toned grosgrain ribbon. Her hat was an off-the-face model of white straw trimmed with daisies. Her accessories were white and she carried an old-fashioned nosegay of shasta daisies, blue delphinium and yellow snapdragons.

Entering with her father, Judson L. Hawk, by whom she was given in marriage, the bride was met at the altar by the groom and Dan Holsenbeck, of Kingsport, Tenn., formerly of Atlanta. A handsome brunette, the bride was modestly gown in an imported model of heaven blue Florentine lace, fashioned with a sweetheart neckline ornamented with dusty pink clips. The full flared skirt was topped with a girdle of heaven blue taffeta. Her blue hat was finished with a navy veil. Her accessories were blue and pink. Her flowers were a shoulder spray of deep purple orchids.

Mrs. Hawk, mother of the bride, wore a black and white ensemble, the tailored bodice being topped with an imported embroidered Eton jacket. She wore a white leghorn hat and her flowers were gardenias. Mrs. Simmons, mother of the groom, wore a dusty pink sandwest crepe model, with a bolero jacket effect. Her accessories were white and her flowers were gardenias.

The bridal couple left for a wedding trip to Highlands, N. C., and will later go to Anniston, Ala., to reside. The bride traveled in a navy sheer redingote worn over a smartly tailored navy and white sheer. Her accessories were navy and her white pillbox hat was trimmed in long navy streamers. Her flowers were orchids.

Out-of-town guests were Dr. Henry Holliman, Cincinnati, Ohio; Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Seigel, Baltimore, Md.; Mr. and Mrs. Fred Bell, Anniston, Ala.; Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Mosby, Knoxville, Tenn.; Dr. and Mrs. R. C. Wilson, Athens, Ga.; Mr. and Mrs. Harold Herrin, Winder, Ga.; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Evans, Warrenton, Ga.; Mr. and Mrs. T. M. Edmonds, Augusta, Ga.; Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Bridges, Columbus, Ga., and Mr. and Mrs. W. L. West, Sandersville, Georgia.

Arrival of Atlanta's Aero Club Creates Furore at Sea Island Beach

By Sally Forth.

CREATING a furore at Sea Island beach this week end, according to Sally Forth's scout at the popular resort, is the Aero Club of Atlanta, whose members participating in the organization's fourth annual air tour are spending two days there. Next week end bids to be equally as popular with early arrivals for the Georgia state golf tournament to be held on the Sea Island course June 20-24.

When William K. Jenkins, president of Atlanta's Aero Club, stepped from the plane heading the mammoth silver fleet at Sea Island he was met at the airport by his daughters, Mrs. Collett Munger Jr. and Sara Jenkins, who motored from Atlanta to be on hand for the arrival of the air enthusiasts. Mrs. Jenkins, by the way, and a group of friends were passengers in one of the planes making the tour. When the attractive wife of the Aero Club's president descended the ship's runway, she was presented with an immense bouquet of fragrant gardenias as a token of welcome to Georgia's popular coastal resort.

The first of the series of social gayeties honoring the air tour visitors was a shore luncheon given on the island's white sandy beach. Among attractive feminine figures attending the luncheon were Mrs. Whitman McGonigal and Martha Ridley, whose stunning beach outfits attracted wide admiration.

The colorful deck of Sea Island's picturesque casino pool provided the setting Friday evening for the dinner-dance at which Winslow Nunnally was host to the Aero Club visitors, including Harriet Townsend, Mrs. Bobby Dodd, Nancy Keeler, Mrs. John Knox, Joyce Roper, Mrs. William Ray, Jane Lawless, Coribel Mason and others.

Sally is informed that during the 1939 championship golf tournament, which will attract the presence to Sea Island of many leading Georgians, that Atlantians again will occupy places of honor at the numerous social functions planned in honor of the followers of this popular sport.

Among the round of festivities feting the golfers and their guests will be the cocktail party at which Mr. and Mrs. Alfred W. Jones will be hosts at their beautiful beach home. Mr. and Mrs. Jones, you know, are regarded as Sea Island's official hosts and they are much beloved by the members of the resort's residential colony.

Five o'clock in the afternoon of June 24 is the hour set for the presentation of the trophies to the tournament's winners in the Sea Island Golf Club house. At 7:30 that evening the social program given in connection with the tournament will close with a gala dinner-dance to be held at the Hotel Cloister.

Among the most popular hosts in the constantly-increasing Atlanta colony at Sea Island are Dr. and Mrs. Lon Grove and their lovely young daughters, Dorothy and Frances. The Groves have taken a cottage at the beach for the month of June, and each week they entertain a different group of friends. Dr. Grove is one of the "commuters" of the colony, for he joins his family only on week ends.

Dorothy and Frances are planning a house party for this week. Their guests to include a group of popular sub-debs who will materially enliven things for the younger set during their stay. Leaving tomorrow for the island, the house party guests will be Anne DuPre, Dorothy Sprattlin, Tatty Shipps, Rufford Ragsdale and Laleah Sullivan.

Miss Louisa Robert has as her guests at her Sea Island residence Miss Laura Hill, Dr. and Mrs. Stephen Barnett Jr., Dr. Joseph Boland and Dr. William B. Armstrong. This group occupied a table at the dinner-dance as did Mr. and Mrs. Rufus King and Mr. and Mrs. Jack King at last evening's dinner-dance at The Cloister.

In the cottage colony Mr. and Mrs. Tom Shropshire have had as their guests Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Kennedy.

Miss Miriam Harland is listed among youthful hostesses of the teen age. Enjoying Miriam's hospitality this week end at the cottage of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John H. Harland, are Anne Equen, Anne Van Story and Virginia Nelson.

The middle of the forthcoming week will see numerous additions to the island's residence group. Mr. and Mrs. Cason Callaway, of LaGrange, will arrive to occupy a cottage as will Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Nunnally, Mr. and Mrs. John B. Harris, of Macon; Mr. and Mrs. Frank Peeples, Macon; Mr. and Mrs. P. T. Anderson, Macon.

THE ANNOUNCEMENT made today of the marriage of Wesley Martin to the former Aleine Rudisill, of Lincolnton, N. C., which was solemnized yesterday, comes as a surprise to the friends of the newlyweds.

Aleine, you recall, attended Converse College in Spartanburg, S. C., and during vacations she spent much time visiting friends in this city. It was during one of her frequent visits here several years ago that Wesley met the attractive belle, whom he now claims his bride.

Wesley is a graduate of the University of Georgia and a member of the Sigma Chi fraternity. The bridal couple is spending several weeks in Virginia on their honeymoon, and upon their return they will reside in their new home on Redland road and become popular members of young married ranks.

Meeting Postponed. Kirkwood Chapter No. 223, O. E. S., will not meet on Tuesday, because of grand chapter session in Macon, which many of the members will attend.

Miss Suber Honored. Miss Louise Faver was hostess recently at a bridge luncheon at her home on Druid place, given in honor of Miss Jeanne Suber who leaves soon to make her home in Birmingham, Ala.

The hostess was assisted by her mother, Mrs. B. I. Faver. The guests included Misses Nelle Hardy, Ann Cochran, Ruth Mumford, Reba Sellers, Elaine Bond, Kathryn Thompson, and the honor guest.

Miss Hunter To Wed Holcombe E. Hall

COLQUITT, Ga., June 10.—Of prominent social interest is the announcement made today by Edwin J. Hunter of the engagement of his daughter, Miss Geraldine Hunter, to Holcombe Eugene Hall, of Newton, the marriage to take place at an early date here.

The bride-elect is the eldest daughter of Mr. Hunter and the late Mrs. Hunter. She is the sister of Mrs. Dan Royal and Patricia Hunter, of Colquitt. Her only brother is Emory Hunter. She is the granddaughter on her maternal side of the late Emory and Cornelia Powell Rich. Her paternal grandparents are the late Dr. and Mrs. W. E. Hunter.

Miss Hunter was graduated from Miller County High school with third honor and attended G. S. C. W., Milledgeville, for two years. She received her B. S. degree in chemistry and home economics in 1938 from the University of Georgia, Athens, where she was a member of Phi Upsilon Omicron sorority, and active in Y. W. C. A., scholastic and sorority circles. For the past two years she has been a teacher of home economics in the Newton and Elmore schools.

The groom-elect was graduated from Norman Park High school and will receive his A. B. degree from Mercer University, Macon, July 19. He is a member of the Alpha Lambda Tau fraternity. For the past two years he has been connected with the Baker Bank, of Newton.

Mr. Hall is a son of Mr. and Mrs. James Henderson Hall, of Newton. His mother was the former Maud Sindersine, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. P. Sindersine, of South Carolina. His father is the son of the late Ella Long and Henry Holcombe Hall, life-long residents of Newton, prominent for over a century in the civic, religious and social development of Baker county.

His sister is Mrs. Herbert Ingram Jr. of Coleman and his brothers are J. H. Hall Jr., of New Orleans, La., and Price Hall, of Newton.

Battle M. Barksdale, of Fort Benning, formerly of Jackson, Miss.

The engagement was announced at the West Point dinner for the class of '37, United States Military Academy, held Friday night at the Officers' Club. Miss Harris and Lieutenant Barksdale were honor guests at the dinner. The marriage will be solemnized at a military ceremony to be held in the picturesque chapel at West Point, N. Y., on August 3.

MISS JUDITH COLT, OF PITTSFIELD, MASS.

PITTSFIELD, Mass., June 10.—The interest of fashionable eastern and southern society is focused on the announcement made today by Mr. and Mrs. Samuel C. Colt, of this city, of the betrothal of their daughter, Miss Judith Colt, to William S. Ginn, son of Mr. and Mrs. Evander H. Ginn, of Atlanta, Georgia.

Miss Colt is a charming representative of one of Massachusetts' most distinguished families, numbering among her forebears many leaders in the business, political and social development of the country. She is the granddaughter of the late Zenas Crane, paper manufacturer of Dalton, Mass., and the grand-niece of the late United States Senator W. Murray Crane. Her paternal grandfather is the late James Dennison Colt, an associate justice of the supreme court of Massachusetts.

The lovely bride-elect graduated from Miss Porter's School at Farmington, Conn., in 1933, and completed her education at Sarah Reilly, the daughter of Owen F. Lawrence College in Bronxville, N. Y. She is a member of the Pittsfield Junior League, the Pittsfield Country Club and the Pittsfield Riding and Polo Association. Mr. Ginn is the only son of Mr. and Mrs. Evander H. Ginn, prominent Atlantians, and, like his bride-elect, traces his ancestry to include many notable figures in southern and eastern history. His mother is the former Miss Helen Reilly, the daughter of Owen F. Lawrence College in Bronxville, N. Y. He is now associated with the General Electric Company in ents are the late Percival M. and Ann Ridley Ginn, of Worcester, Mass. His only sister is Mrs. Joseph Brennan, of Atlanta.

Mr. Ginn was graduated from Georgia Tech in 1936 and is a member of the Chi Phi fraternity. He also holds membership in the Pittsfield Country Club and the Mohawk Golf Club of Schenectady, N. Y. He is now associated with the General Electric Company in

Miss Louise Kennedy Weds Mr. Coleman

The marriage of Miss Louise Kennedy and Dr. Reese Clinton Coleman Jr., was solemnized yesterday afternoon at the home of the bride's parents on East Lake drive. Dr. Stuart Oglesby performed the ceremony in the presence of members of the families and a few friends of the bridal couple.

An improvised altar of palms, Cathedral candelabra, and floor baskets of white gladioli formed the background for the ceremony. Mesdames Roy Smith and Arthur Handley presented a program of music.

Miss Bernice Kennedy was maid of honor and only attendant. She was gowned in a yellow mousseline de soie posed over yellow taffeta. She carried a shower bouquet of Talisman roses.

The bride entered with her father, Estus Kennedy, by whom she was given in marriage. They were met at the altar by the groom and his brother, Sam Coleman, who was best man. Her bridal gown of white tulle posed over satin featured a fitted bodice and transparent yoke and a full skirt ornamented with rosettes of plaited tulle. Her illusion veil was caught to her hair by a coronet of white chiffon. She carried a bouquet of roses, valley lilies and white orchids.

After the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Kennedy entertained at a reception. They were assisted by Dr. and Mrs. Reese Coleman Sr., parents of the groom.

Miss Ruth Richards, of Savannah, kept the bride's book and Mrs. J. L. Lewis, Miss Cecile Heard, of Cordele, and Miss Edna Fine, of Metter, presided at the punch bowl.

Mrs. Kennedy was gowned in a

Fourth Annual Garden School To Open in Athens Wednesday

The fourth annual garden school, to be held under the direction of the University of Georgia in co-operation with the Garden Club of Georgia, will open in Athens Wednesday and continue through Friday. Dr. T. H. McHatton will direct the school, with the assistance of Mrs. Reynolds Flournoy, of Columbus, president of the Garden Club of Georgia, and Mrs. Edward Dorsey, of Athens, as chairman of the garden school committee for the club.

Registration will begin in Pounds auditorium on the Co-ordinate College campus at 9 o'clock Thursday and continue throughout the day. Two courses will be offered, the feature course dealing with garden cultural problems and the other with judging. At the end of the latter course an examination will be given and a certificate issued to those passing it.

The school opens Wednesday evening with a reception at the home of Mrs. O. H. Arnold, president of the Ladies' Garden Club of Athens, at 925 South Milledge avenue. Dr. E. D. Pusey will preside over the opening session Thursday at 10 o'clock, with Dr. J. C. Wilkinson, of Athens, giving the invocation. Mrs. Reynolds Flournoy will address the gathering at 10:15 o'clock and Mrs. Edward Dorsey will extend greetings. General announcements will be made by Dr. T. H. McHatton, after which Dr. H. H. Hume, of the University of Florida, will speak on "Bulbous Plants for the South," and Mrs. Fae Huttenlocher, associate editor of "Better Homes and Gardens," will speak on "The Art of Table Arrangement." Luncheon will be held in the Co-ordinate College dining hall.

Thursday afternoon Mrs. O. H. Arnold will preside over the cultural course, "Garden Diseases," will be discussed by Dr. J. H. Miller, plant pathologist of the University of Georgia, and "Insects of the Garden" will be discussed by Dr. H. O. Lund, professor of entomology. Dr. McHatton will speak on "Garden Sprays."

At the same hours, the judging course will be held in Room No. 3, with Dr. McHatton giving the principles of judging, and Roy Bowden, of the horticultural department of the university, speaking on the arranging of flower shows. A visit to the memorial to America's first garden club will follow, with Mrs. W. F. Bradshaw and Miss Nina Scudder serving as hostesses at the memorial. A banquet will be held in the evening and at 8 o'clock Dr. H. H. Hume will give an illustrated lecture on "Trees and Shrubs for Southern Gardens."

Friday morning the cultural course will be presided over by Mrs. Flournoy. "The Meaning of Garden Soil Acidity" will be explained by Professor W. O. Collins, of the department of agronomy, with Mrs. Huttenlocher speaking on the judging of floral arrangements. Professor R. L. Keener, of the department of horticulture, will talk on "The Pruning of Garden Shrubbery" and Professor W. O. Collins will discuss fertilizers for the garden. Plant handling will be explained by Dr. McHatton.

During the same hours, the judging course will be in progress, with Dr. McHatton talking on the selection of exhibiting material, and Roy Bowden speaking on the judging of exhibits of roses, dahlias, perennials, and annuals. This course will be reviewed by the instructors, and the examination will be held just preceding the adjournment of the school.

The committees selected from the Ladies' Garden Club are as follows: Registration, Mrs. T. W. Reed, chairman; publicity, Mrs. Dan Magill, chairman; dormitory, Mrs. E. D. Pusey, chairman; dining room, Mrs. William Erwin and Mrs. McBride Howell, co-chairmen; stage, Professor E. D. Crouse, chairman; flower arrangement, Mrs. J. H. Rucker, chairman; reception, Mrs. T. H. McHatton, chairman.

Hostesses will be Miss Eugenia Arnold, Mesdames Robert Watterson, Thomas Tillman, Albert Sams, James White Jr., Murray Soule, Robert Segrest and Hubert Owens. The pages include Mrs. Julian Cox, president of the Athens Junior Assembly, and members of her organization. The Boy Scouts of Athens will serve as guides.

Ware—Dewson.

Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Ware, of Atlanta and Woodbury, announce the marriage of their daughter, Jeanette, to Shaylor Dewson Jr., of Decatur. The wedding was solemnized on May 26 at the First Baptist church of Decatur, Dr. A. J. Moncrief officiating.

Samuel Baum Attends Annual Fur Fashion Show at Waldorf-Astoria

Fall Furs Shown in New Treatments, Heavy Furs Made Supple. Brown Tones in Lead.

"Familiar furs, glorified by new types of processing and used in a wide range of styles reflecting fitted princess, chubby, ecclesiastic and Byzantine influences, were featured at the first Fur Fashion Show of the season, held at the Waldorf-Astoria, June 5," writes Samuel Baum, of Regenstein's Peachtree.

"The new developments in dyeing and shearing have given an entirely new appearance to many pelts. Unwieldy furs have been rendered as supple as fabrics with the result that the furs in the finished garments could be draped, pleated and even shirred. Heavy, long-haired furs were so sheared as to make them almost featherweight, which will be welcome news to our southern women.

"Fitted lines were emphasized in many garments. The chubbies are somewhat longer than last year. The ecclesiastic or papal influence was evident in many evening robes. Brown furs were dominant. Alaska seal, beaver, nutria and the entire mink and sable range of browns will be notably outstanding for the coming fall."

Mr. Baum will take his time in the markets, selecting his own individual styles and inspecting skins for the finest pelts. He promises his clientele the most magnificent collection of fur garments ever assembled in his long career.

Mr. Baum suggests, should his customers have any particular fur needs, consult Regenstein's Peachtree Fur Salon and let him make selections while in the market, without obligations, of course.—(adv.)

Miss Redwine Becomes the Bride Of Mr. Rountree in Fayetteville

FAYETTEVILLE, Ga., June 10.—The handsome new chapel of the Fayetteville Methodist church formed the setting for the lovely afternoon ceremony at which Miss Martha Henrietta Redwine, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hill P. Redwine, became the bride of Wilbur Dekle Rountree, of Thomaston, on Friday. The Rev. W. J. DeBardeleben, of Atlanta, read the marriage service at 5:30 o'clock before a throng of friends and relatives of the young couple.

Simple and effective in design, the decorations within the church featured a massing of palms and ferns to the rear of the pulpit, the background of foliage being centered with a graceful arch outlined in lighted white tapers. The altar rail and choir loft were also outlined in tapers, and the altar was centered with a mound arrangement of white gladioli and white delphinium. Flanking either side of the altar and silhouetted against the backdrop of palms were four tall white urns filled with white gladioli and delphinium.

Preceding the ceremony a musical program was given by Mrs. Paul McLarty, of Thomaston, organist, and Mrs. L. P. Longino, of Milledgeville, vocalist.

The ushers were A. G. Singleton and Edward Ellison, of Thomaston. John R. Rountree, of Reidsville, was groomsmen, and Elliott Rountree, of Atlanta, served as best man.

Wedding Personnel.

Miss Jeanne Redwine was her sister's maid of honor, and a cousin, Miss Elizabeth Redwine, was the bridesmaid. They were gowned alike in bouffant models of white net, appliqued in roses of lace, the bodices featuring sweetheart necklines and puffed sleeves. The attendants wore heart-shaped hats of white net with streamers of blue velvet ribbon, and carried bouquets of pastel tinted garden flowers.

Misses Kathleen Greer, of Loudon, Tenn., and Sarah Murphy, of Fayetteville, as junior bridesmaids, wore net frocks and carried bouquets similar to those worn by the other attendants, and carried smaller bouquets. Little Miss Bettie Carmichael, of McDonough, the flower girl, was also dressed like the other attendants.

Bride Enters.
The lovely young bride, who was given in marriage by her father, Hill Parks Redwine, wore a gown of fragile lace and tulle. The bodice, fashioned of the lace, featured a wide sweetheart neckline, and the sleeves, full at the shoulders, were fitted into a point at the wrist. Delicate insertions of the lace extended into deep points onto the full skirt of tulle, which ended in a sweeping two-yard train. The full length double tiered veil of bridal illusion was caught to the bride's dark hair with a misty ruching of the illusion and a delicate spray of orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet of lilies of the valley and orchids.

A reception honoring the bridal couple followed the ceremony at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. P. Redwine. The bride's book was kept by Mrs. Ransom Parker, of McDonough, and Miss Vera Frances Pruet, of Opelika, Ala.

Mrs. Redwine, mother of the bride, wore an exquisite gown in petal pink, the bodice of starched lace and the full skirt of chiffon of the same shade. Her hat was of blue straw trimmed with pastel

Miss Belle Quinby Weds in New York

NEW YORK, N. Y., June 10.—Miss Belle Hemphill Quinby, daughter of Mrs. Littleton Dennis Teackle Quinby, of Atlanta, became the bride of Joseph William Balet Jr., of Pelham, N. Y., here this morning in the Church of St. Vincent Ferrer, at Lexington avenue and Sixty-sixth street.

The ushers were John Balet, Charles Mamberger, Lawrence Fisk and William Parramore Bell, nephew of the bride, all of Acorn, Va.

Miss Jean Balet, sister of the groom, was the bride's maid of honor, and her cousin, Emelyn Goodhart Sweet, was the flower girl.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Dennis Teackle Quinby, and they were met at the altar by the groom and his brother, James Balet, who was best man.

After the ceremony the bridal couple were honored at a small reception and wedding breakfast at the Barbizon hotel, the guests being limited to only the wedding party and families. The bride is a member of distinguished southern families and is of Atlanta and Onancock, Va. Her father is the late L. D. T. Quinby, of Virginia, and her mother is the former Miss Lula Belle Hemphill, of Atlanta.

Mr. Balet is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph William Balet Jr., of Pelham, N. Y., and is a member of well known families and is a grandson of the late Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Balet, of the Netherlands, and the late Mr. and Mrs. John Ryan, of New York.

The bride-elect is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Abram Ronsheim, prominent and influential citizens of Cincinnati.

Mr. Mathis and his bride will reside in the Ponchatrain apartments in New Orleans upon their return July 15 from a Caribbean cruise.

sweet peas. Her bouquet was of pink roses and blue delphinium.

Mrs. A. M. Rountree, mother of the groom, was gowned in duchess blue lace worn with a leghorn hat and a cluster of pink rosebuds and valley lilies.

Mr. and Mrs. Rountree left for Iowa City, Iowa, where Mr. Rountree will take a special course at the University of Iowa. The bride chose for traveling a smart white ensemble, worn with a cluster of orchids.

Upon their return in July the couple will reside in Thomaston.

Miss Emogene Hall To Wed Mr. Tipton

MILLEDGEVILLE, Ga., June 10.—Announcement is made today by Mrs. John Marvin Hall of the engagement of her daughter, Miss Emogene Hall, to Ray Anderson Tipton, of Anniston, Ala. The marriage will be an event of this month.

Miss Hall is the daughter of Mrs. Hall and the late John M. Hall. She is the sister of Mrs. Robert Smith, of Newnan. Her brother is J. M. Hall, of Carnesville, Ga. Her mother was formerly Miss Clintelle Frazier, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Jefferson D. Frazier, of Baconton.

The bride-elect's paternal grandparents are the late Mr. and Mrs. Frank C. Hall, of Midway, Ala. Miss Hall graduated at Georgia State College for Women and later attended Duke University for post-graduate work.

Mr. Tipton is the son of Mrs. Anderson Wingfield Tipton and the late Mr. Tipton, of Anniston. His mother was before her marriage Miss Leila Powell, daughter of Mrs. E. T. Powell and the late Mr. Powell. His paternal grandparents are Mrs. L. P. Tipton and the late Mr. Tipton.

His sisters are Mrs. O. F. West and Miss Julia Tipton, of Anniston. Mr. Tipton received his B. A. degree and his M. A. at the University of Alabama. He is a member of the honorary fraternities Phi Beta Kappa, Phi Delta Kappa and Omicron Delta Kappa.

Following the marriage the young couple will live in Marietta, Ga., where Mr. Tipton is a member of the high school faculty.

Mr. and Mrs. Bowling Fete Bridal Couple.

Mr. and Mrs. Owen M. Bowling entertained at a buffet supper last evening at their home on Adair avenue honoring Miss Josephine Williams and George B. Bowling, whose marriage will be solemnized in Swainsboro on July 1.

Miss Walker Weds Dr. Blalock At Afternoon Ceremony in Chapel

An improvised altar featuring an arch of Easter lilies, tall baskets of white gladioli and seven-branched candelabra holding burning white candles, formed the setting for the marriage of Miss Jean Walker and Dr. Tully Talbot Blacklock, which was solemnized yesterday afternoon at 5:30 o'clock in the chapel of Second-Ponce de Leon Baptist church. Dr. Ryland Knight performed the ceremony before an assembly of relatives and friends.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Merritt Walker, and her groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Blacklock.

Mrs. Charles Chalmers, and Robert Harrison presented a program of music.

Ushers were K. D. White, of Columbus, and Dr. W. S. Dorrough. Dr. Walter Emory Wilson Jr. was groomsmen.

Mrs. John J. White was matron of honor and Miss Marion Walker, sister of the bride, was maid of honor.

They wore gowns of corn silk yellow embroidered organza posed over matching taffeta featuring puffed sleeves and shepherdess necklines. Apple green belts tied and a wide brim hat of matching straw. She wore a shoulder bouquet of purple orchids. Mrs. Blacklock, mother of the groom, chose for the occasion a flowered print chiffon gown, which she wore with a large white straw hat.

The lace-covered table was centered with a three-tiered wedding cake banked with sprays of valley lilies, white roses and sweet peas.

Wedding Trip.

Mr. Blacklock and his bride left for a two-week wedding trip and upon their return they will reside with Mrs. Blacklock's parents on Fairview road.

The bride chose for traveling a coat of artichoke green colored crepe worn with a matching green and white print dress. Burnt straw-colored accessories and a shoulder bag of brown of bronze orchids completed her.

Out-of-town guests attending the wedding included: Mr. and Mrs. John Thomas Blacklock, of Waycross; Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Blacklock, of Washington, D. C.; Mr. and Mrs. K. D. Knight, of Columbus; Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Corn, of Macon; Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Smith, of P. C. Maxwell, Misses Lucille Pierce, Zula Pierce and Jane Maxwell, all of Elberton.

Miss Yancey Weds

bera daisies and bronze and yellow snapdragons completed the attractive arrangement.

Bridal Gown.

The bride entered with her father, by whom she was given in marriage. They were met at the altar by the groom and his brother-in-law, John K. Moore. The bride wore a gown of ivory satin made on Princess lines with elbow length puffed sleeves and a full flowing skirt extending into a long train. A two-tiered illusion veil was worn and had by the corners of valley lilies made of mother of pearl. Her only jewelry was a string of pearls, a gift from the groom. She carried a bouquet of white orchids showered with valley lilies.

After the ceremony the bride's parents entertained at a reception at their home on Fairview road, honoring members of the wedding party, members of the immediate families and guests.

Mrs. Walker received her guests wearing lime green marquisette

An announcement of interest is that of the marriage of Miss Sarah Yancey to Chastine Gooden, of this city, which took place on May 27 at the home of the bride's parents. The ceremony was performed by Judge Luther Morris, ordinary of Rockdale county.

The bride is the daughter and only child of Mr. and Mrs. David Calvin Yancey, of East Atlanta, and the daughter of the late J. Robert Yancey and Martin Alvin Brooks, formerly of Grayson, Ga.

After a brief honeymoon the couple is residing with the bride's parents. Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Yancey in East Atlanta.

Little—Elliott.

AUBURN, Ga., June 10.—Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Little announce the marriage of their daughter, Dora Mae, to James Kelly Elliott, on June 2, at the home of the bride's parents, in the presence of their relatives. The trip to North Carolina the couple will reside near Auburn.

U. S. R. H. Honor Roll Requirements For 1939-40 Announced Today

By MRS. J. H. NICHOLSON,
Madison, Assistant Editor,
Georgia, D. A. R.

Executive board of the Georgia Society D. A. R. met in Macon Wednesday, with the state regent, Mrs. Harrison Hightower presiding. The purpose of the meeting was to make plans for the coming year and the following is a list of honor roll requirements for 1939-40 was presented by the state regent and accepted by the members of the board.

National requirements are: National dues sent treasurer-general or to before March 1, 60; D. A. R. Manual for Citizenship, 5 cents; Ellis Island, 10 cents; national decalogue, 10 cents; press relations, 2 tions as to what can be done by groups, organizations and other elements in our national life. This manual is issued by the United States Flag Association, in Washington, D. C., at 25 cents per copy.

"Hats Off: The Flag Goes By"—These familiar words, by Henry Holcombe Bennett are recalled by many Mrs. J. H. Riple gives a few of the high spots in the history of the flag: June 14 is the birthday of our flag, for it was on that day in 1777 the continental congress resolved that the flag of the United States be 13 stripes, alternate red and white; that the Union be 13 stars, white on a blue field, representing a constellation.

The Stars and Stripes did not

State requirements are: States sent state treasurer before January 30, 40 cents; (Article VIII, state-by-laws), approved schools, 10 cents; May 1st Talmadge student loan fund, 3 cents; McCall genealogical fund, 5 cents; S. B. Morgan student loan fund, 10 cents; chapter contribution to Georgia D. A. R. golden jubilee 1890-1900, 10 cents; chapter contribution to redwood garden; chapter contribution marking historic spots, $2; 10 per cent of chapter members subscribers to National Historical Society self-addressed envelopes; 15 per cent of chapter members by chapter chairman, motion pictures, to Mrs. Alfred Lewis Russel, Hollywood Twentieth News, Hollywood Cal., for A. R. post card guide to motion pictures.

Mrs. Hightower gave an interesting account of the national congress in Washington, D. C., in April and outlined the national projects and the state objectives for the celebration of the golden jubilee. She stated that a rug had been bought and placed in the Georgia business room in Continental Memorial hall. She suggested that state officers be nominated for their chapter as alternates to national congress.

Announcement was made that minutes of the district meetings would be published in the state proceedings. Three new members introduced to the board were Mrs. W. W. Barrett, of Waycross, chairman for advancement of American music; Mrs. Johnson, of Albany, chairman of chapter student loan fund, and Mrs. J. W. Garland, of Atlanta, chairman of the spring into existence in its present form overnight, but went through a period of development as a beautiful flower, which comes from a small and insignificant seed.

When the first settlers came to this country they brought with them the flag of their native land. Gradually the colonies settled into 13 distinct communities or states and came to recognize England as the mother country. It is only to be expected, therefore, when an emblem of these colonies was bound them together they adopted an emblem for the new colony, with England represented thereon.

The first flag used by the entire 13 colonies was the "Grand Union," or Cambridge flag, with 13 horizontal red and white stripes alternating, with the English union in the upper corner. Under this flag George Washington took command of the continental forces July 2, 1775, in Cambridge, Mass., and on December 3 of the same year, John Paul Jones raised it on the flagstaff of the Alfred, the flagship of the new American nation.

In May, 1776, according to tradition, George Washington, Colonel Ross and Capt. Morris asked Capt. Ross to make a new flag which they designed. This flag was accepted by the continental congress which met the same year. As new states joined the Union a star and a stripe was added to the flag. This soon caused the stripes to be too numerous, so that on April 4, 1818, congress adopted a resolution that the stripes be 13 in number. Each state thereafter being represented on the flag by adding a star to the Union only. On Oc-

The state assembly of Georgia Society, United States Daughters of 1812, will be held at the Biltmore hotel in Atlanta, on June 14, the meeting will bring together representatives of the various chapters throughout the state, and will comprise morning and afternoon sessions presided over by the state president, Mrs. John Samuel Adams, of Dubuque.

Luncheon, attended by many notables in patriotic work and featuring a special program, will be served to members and friends.

Among distinguished guests on a distance will be Mrs. Arthur J. O'Neill, president of national, Chicago, and Miss Kathleen Wooten, librarian of National, Washington, D. C. also Mrs. Charles F. Rice, honorary vice president of national, and Mrs. Lucius McConnell, past corresponding secretary of national, Atlanta, besides a honorary state president.

As June 14 is National Flag Day part of the exercises will be devoted to its celebration.

Lose Weight Safely

without suffering a hungry moment, or taking strenuous exercises or drugs

FROM coast-to-coast, you now hear women singing the praises of a thrilling new reducing method. A method which Dr. Damrau of New York demonstrated in tests among a group of intelligent and cooperative people who followed directions simply, was responsible for an average loss in weight of 7 pounds per month. Most amazing, this method does NOT call for special diet lists. You never suffer a hungry moment. Nor is it necessary for you to take strenuous exercises, or drugs.

All you have to do is eat sensibly.

which means that you avoid over-eating, and drink $\frac{3}{4}$ of a glass of Welch's Grape Juice, mixed with $\frac{1}{4}$ of a glass of water, before meals and at bedtime. Thus reducing the caloric intake considerably.

This flag, born July 14, 1790, was created and instituted first by a foreign power on February 13, 1778, by the French in Quiberon bay, Brittany, has carried a message of liberty around the world, and has yet to be bowed in defeat. It has inspired poets and musicians to their supreme efforts. It has inspired native born and naturalized citizens to deeds of heroism and valor.

So let us all join on June 14 in saying, "One flag, one land, one heart, one hand, one nation, evermore."

How This Pleasant Way Takes Off Excess Fat

Nothing could be easier, or more pleasant. Yet!—this is what happens. First, this delicious drink satisfies your craving for rich, sweet foods. You have less desire to overeat fattening foods—but you do feel comfortable! Then, the grape sugar in Welch's is quickly consumed, and by this process helps nature to consume excess fat.

This weight is lost naturally and safely. And this remarkable method is just as beneficial and effective for Irene Rich, post 40, still has her lovely slenderness of 16. She says, "Eat sensibly, which means that I avoid overeating, and drink Welch's Grape Juice daily before meals." Thus you reduce caloric intake considerably.

Miss Mullino Weds Dr. Robert S. Howell At Methodist Church

MONTEZUMA, Ga., June 10.—The marriage of Miss Mary Louise Mullino, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Frederic M. Mullino, to Dr. Robert Spencer Howell, of Miami, Fla., was solemnized Wednesday at the First Methodist church. Dr. J. A. Thomas, of Pelham, read the vows.

Miss Estelle Walker and Lawrence McKenzie presented a program of music.

Ushers were Dave Rumph, Edwin McKenzie, Marion Reid and John T. McKenzie.

Miss Alice Chastain was maid of honor and Mrs. R. B. Newton, of Columbus, sister of the bride, was matron of honor.

The bridesmaids included Misses Claire McKenzie, Martha Pate, Obie McKenzie, Mary Ann Easterlin, Lucile Harrison and Ann Clements. The flower girls were Mary and Ann Brown, twin daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Brown.

The junior bridesmaids were Jacquelyn Reid and Marilu Karcher, of Miami.

The bridesmaids were gowned in lime green silk net and the matron of honor and flower girls wore lavender dresses.

The groomsmen were William Curry and Dr. Jack McKenzie, of Miami; Dr. Ben Davis, of College Park; John Mullino, Kankakee, Ill.; Spencer Crawley and Bill Crawley, of Atlanta.

Dr. Mullino gave his daughter in marriage and they were met at the altar by the groom and his brother, Aubrey Howell, of Tulane University, who was best man.

The bride was gowned in white Chantilly lace posed over white satin. Her veil of rose point lace was caught to a lace cap. She carried a bouquet of valley lilies.

After the ceremony the bride's parents entertained at a reception at their home for the wedding party guests.

The bride's book was kept by Mrs. J. D. Lester Jr., and punch was served by Mesdames A. B. McDaniel, of Thomaston; Mrs. George Chastain Jr., of New Jersey, and Mrs. John McKenzie.

The bride couple left on a wedding trip and will be at home in Miami after July 1. The bride wore an ensemble of navy blue triple sheer, with which she wore navy blue accessories.

Miss Kate Weigle To Wed Mr. Jones

AUGUSTA, Ga., June 10.—Announcement is made today by Mr. and Mrs. James Gardiner Weigle Jr., of the engagement of their daughter, Miss Kate Louise Weigle, to Miller Taylor Jones, of this city, formerly of Savannah. The marriage will be solemnized on June 22.

Miss Weigle is the daughter of the late James Gardiner Weigle Sr. and Mrs. Kate Hill Weigle. Her father was affiliated in business for many years with the National Exchange Bank and occupied an important position in the civic and business life of this city.

After graduation from Tubman High school, the bride-elect studied at Augusta Training School for Teachers. For the past few years she has been teaching at Houghton school.

She is a sister of Mrs. Daniel Dean Tompkins, of Sylva, N. C., and Gardiner Weigle Jr. Miss Weigle is the niece of Mrs. Roy Merry, of Atlanta.

The groom-elect is the son of James Franklin Jones and the late Mrs. Aza Talo Talley Jones, of Millersville, Mo. He is a graduate of Jackson, Miss., High school and the University of Mississippi.

He received his B. S. degree in engineering and later took a post-graduate course where he received his degree in civil engineering.

For the past few years he has been junior engineer of United States War Department and came to this city from Savannah last fall.

Stegins and Miss Phoebe Elliott directors, hostesses. The sessions will be presided over by Miss Sara Hall, of Lavalonia, state president, and will be under the supervision of Mrs. Belmont Dennis, third vice president Georgia division, U. D. C. Delightful plans have been made for the entertainment of the delegates and distinguished guests.

The division is honored to have the presence of Mrs. Harry D. Allen, third vice president general, who is returning to Georgia for her second convention. Mrs. Clyde F. Hunt, division U. D. C. president, and other officers will add to the inspiring occasion. Mrs. Hunt, Mrs. C. T. Tillman, first vice president, and Mrs. O. L. Chivers, second vice president and past director of C. of C., will be the judges in the oratorical contest.

Registration will begin at 2 o'clock Tuesday under the direction of Miss Rebecca Black Dupont, division recorder of crosses of honor for life, after which the directors will hold a meeting, followed by a drive to Fort Pulaski with supper at the U. D. C. chapter house, with Mrs. J. Travis, president, official hostess.

Sessions at DeSoto. All sessions will be held in the gold room of Hotel DeSoto, and the evening meeting will be opened with a professional of officers and distinguished guests, pages and flag bearers, Mrs. F. C. Exley, marshal. Greetings will be brought by Mrs. G. C. Stegins, who will introduce Misses Sarah Waters and Charlotte Anne Phillips, presidents of C. of C. locally; Mrs. R. J. Travis for U. D. C.; Dr. T. S. Clay for U. C. V. and Sons of U. C. V., and Mayor Thomas Gamble. Response will be made by the division president, Miss Sara Hall, who will also present her official family. Miss Phoebe Elliott, honorary president Georgia division, U. D. C., will present Mrs. Hunt, division president, and Mrs. Dennis, third vice president, who will introduce Mrs. Allen, vice president general. After the meeting, a ball will be held for the guests in the ballroom of the hotel.

Wednesday morning's session will feature reports of officers, oratorical contest and election of officers and will conclude with a luncheon given by the Winnie Davis chapter C. of C. at the old Pink House, of historical interest.

Woodland chapter welcomed its president, Mrs. W. J. Brady, back after an extended illness and Mrs. Brady presided over an enthusiastic business session, during which good reports were heard. The program centered around a study of Savannah under the direction of Miss Kate Peeler, and a paper on "The Siege and Evacuation" was given by Mrs. J. T. Ferguson. A description of the parks was given by Mrs. J. H. Allen. Hostesses were Mesdames J. A. Rice, J. W. Pye, D. C. Williams and Miss Willie T. Smith. Boynton chapter, Griffin, Mrs. C. Governor Issues Peace Proclamation For W. C. T. U. Day of Prayer

By Mrs. Mary Harris Armor, of Atlanta, Editor Georgia W. C. T. U.

Proclaimed by the Governor, sponsored by the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union and also by the Georgia Woman's Christian Temperance Union, today is Peace Prayer Sunday. All loyal White Ribboners, all Christians and philanthropists who hear the call will unite in earnest prayer during this day for the peace of the world. At the request of the Georgia W. C. T. U., Governor Rivers on June 5 issued the following proclamation:

Whereas: The Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Georgia is sponsoring a day of prayer for peace, to be observed Sunday, June 11, 1939; and

Whereas: The people of the United States stand today as the world's most ardent advocates of peace; and

Whereas: The peace of the world should be and is one of the highest objectives of true Christianity; now, therefore, be it

Ordered: That Sunday, June 11, 1939, be and it is hereby proclaimed a day of prayer for peace throughout Georgia, and the people of our state are hereby called upon and urged to attend services in their respective churches of their choice, dedicating their prayers on that day to the cause of peace throughout the world.

And it is so ordered this 5th day of June, 1939.

The mid-year executive meeting held last week was attended by state officers, district presidents, state directors, local presidents and key women from every section of the state. "The New Crusade," an intensive drive for new members launched during this last quarter of the Willard centenary, was heartily indorsed and plans made for its furtherance.

A scheme for raising money and at the same time enhancing safe driving was discussed and referred to the stage officers for perfecting, with full authority to act on some. A strong protest against the recent action of the county commissioners in licensing a distillery in Fulton county was unanimously adopted.

While Mrs. Robert Travelate was attending the mid-year executive of the state W. C. T. U. in Atlanta, she was called to Cartersville by the passing of her brother, Dr. R. E. Wilson. She has the sympathy of every White Ribboner.

The Druid Hills W. C. T. U. meets at Haygood Memorial church June 14, at 10:30 o'clock to observe Flower Mission Day. Members are urged to bring flowers to distribute to the sick and the shut-ins. Mrs. E. E. Barnes will bring a lesson on alcohol education. In a contest sponsored by the Druid Hills and McPherson unions at Capitol View Presbyterian church, recently, Rachel Cawthon, the 12-year-old daughter of Mrs. E. A. Cawthon, won the medal. The title of her reading was "Don't Play With Johnnie."

The Dawson W. C. T. U., Mrs. B. C. Perry, president, has again put on the alcohol study program in the high school and awarded prizes of $5, $3 and $2 to Wiley Williams, Billy Leary and Eloise Orr, respectively. Mrs. Perry reports that they have held fast with a gain, making Dawson a "fruitful" union.

Mrs. Mary Scott Russell spoke Sunday to Young Matrons' Bible Class of Gordon Street Baptist church on "The Value and History of the W. C. T. U." She said: "It is the most valiant organization of women in the world; born of such a visitation of God as the world has not seen since the day of Pentecost; cradled in a faith as high as the courage of a saint's heart and as deep as the depths of a drunkard's despair and baptized in the beauty of holiness. Nothing daunted by the seeming destruction of their work of more than half a century in the repeal of the 18th amendment, they have launched a campaign for education as to the nature and effects of alcohol, such as had not been even imagined in days gone by."

She explained the great national temperance education fund of one million dollars, being raised in honor of Frances E. Willard. Of this sum Georgia has raised $14,000 and spent it for literature, sign boards, moving picture films, trained workers, etc. She closed with a stirring appeal to join the W. C. T. U. "The liquor traffic," she said, "is not sitting still waiting for customers. It is on the trail of your boy and your girl. Young mothers must arise in their might and fight valiantly against this foe for the protection of their children and the safety of the nation."

Miss Janet Kassel, of Savannah, Will Marry Herbert Constangy

MISS JANET UDEL KASSEL.

SAVANNAH, June 10.—Of cordial interest here and to Atlantans is the announcement made today by Mr. and Mrs. Max Kassel of this city of the engagement of their daughter, Miss Janet Udel Kassel, to Herbert William Constangy, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Constangy, of Atlanta.

Miss Kassel is the niece of Mr. and Mrs. William E. Lipshutz, with whom she spent the past winter, attending the High Museum Art school in Atlanta.

Mr. and Mrs. Kassel are entertaining with a reception Sunday evening in honor of the young couple at their home on East Fifth street where which will be attended by many Atlantans. The wedding will take place in August.

Watkins-Malone Betrothal Announced.

MACON, Ga., June 10.—Miss Isabelle Brown Watkins' engagement is announced today to Robert Hardin Malone Jr. Their marriage will be solemnized July 16 at Cherokee Heights Methodist church.

Miss Watkins is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Taylor Watkins. She is the sister of Benjamin Taylor Watkins Jr., and Miss Mildred Watkins. Miss Watkins' maternal grandparents were the late Mr. and Mrs. George T. Brown, of Forsyth, and her paternal grandparents were the late Mr. and Mrs. Zachary Taylor Watkins, of Forsyth.

The bride-elect was graduated from Miller High school and attended Bessie Tift College in Forsyth, where her mother, the former Miss Bessie Brown, was graduated.

Mr. Malone is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert H. Malone. He attended Lanier High school and Mercer University and is a graduate of Georgia-Alabama Business College. He is the brother of Frank Malone. His mother is the former Miss Sara Catherine Magruder, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Frank Henry, of White Sulphur Springs. Mr. Malone's paternal grandparents are Mrs. Ida Hardin Malone, of Macon, and the late Thomas Robert Malone, of Hillsboro.

Miss Waters Fetes Popular Bridal Pair.

Miss Marie Waters, of College Park, entertained at her home on Rugby avenue in College Park last evening with a buffet supper for Miss Kathleen Taylor and Jesse B. Dolvin, whose marriage takes place today at 5 o'clock at the First Baptist church in College Park. Miss Waters is a member of the bridal personnel and her party will precede the wedding rehearsal.

Present were R. L. Ramsey, Miss Marjorie Howard, J. H. Dolvin, Paul D. West, Phillip C. Cates, J. H. Bohannon, Marshall Pitts, Frank Willingham, Dr. James L. Baggett, Roy A. Drukenmiller, Mrs. Eucbee Skinner and Mrs. W. Alonzo Harris. Pastel flowers were used in the home and the bridal motif was carried out. Mrs. Fred Waters assisted her daughter in entertaining.

Georgia Farmers Learn About Winter Farming

By LEE ROGERS.

Seated, legs crossed, on the edge of his rickety porch, the Georgia farmer bites a "chew" from his half plug of Brown's Mule and with an absent-minded contentedness looks into the sunset of another crisp but mild winter day.

If his mind were stirred to activeness, he might be comparing his lot with that of his Yankee brother, who, the chances are, is huddled around a log fire, snowed in on a frozen plot of land.

Well might the poorly clad share-cropper chuckle at his lot. The tumbling down shacks he knows would be insufficient to keep out the icy winds of a hard winter.

But, under the system of farming employed by this Georgia farmer, and by his fathers before him, these very mild winters he smiles on so contentedly are costing him the profits of many a sweaty day's work in the fields during spring and summer.

The soluble plant food in the southern soil leaches out of the land with the heavy rainfall of the winter months, simply because the Georgia farmer has overlooked the necessity of planting winter crops to utilize this surplus food and excess water—a saving which nature provides gratis for the Yankee farmer by freezing it in the ground with sub-zero weather.

Profits of winter farming were vividly pointed out to thousands of Georgia farmers recently in Athens at the College of Agriculture's annual Livestock and Equipment Day. Here the results of winter farming were paraded before the farmers. They were told how winter grains could be raised which in turn would help increase livestock and hog profits as well as keep valuable plant food in the soil.

The 1,500-acre farm at the College of Agriculture, a part of the University System of Georgia, is devoted primarily to the production of feed for livestock. Every acre of it grows some crop every month of the year. There is never a time when there is any land that is not in use. As one crop is removed, another is planted.

With Dean Paul A. Chapman acting as host, the 5,000 farmers attending the livestock day crowded the farm until it looked as though some throng were assembling for a Tech-Georgia football game. But they had come not for entertainment—only to learn. They wanted to see the winter hay and grain crops grown at the college farm.

They talked with the college instructors. Hundreds followed machines across the fields as hay was cut, raked and loaded. Later they watched the soil turned, disked or cultivated. Only visitors inspected the mules, sheep, hogs and cattle. Informal tours of the poultry department, the horticultural farm and the agronomy test plots were in progress all day.

These farmers were shown how, by working now idle land in the winter, livestock raising can be made profitable; how providing pastures for hogs can cut the cost of fattening them, thereby increasing profits.

"It costs four times as much to manger feed as to pasture feed animals," Dean Chapman points out. "If Georgia is ever to have a large and profitable livestock industry an abundance of cheap feed is necessary."

Dean Chapman explained that for more than 10 years demonstrations have been carried on in seeding cereals and legumes on Bermuda sod for temporary grazing crops. The mixture used is one bushel of rye, 15 pounds of hairy vetch, 10 pounds of crimson clover.

The College of Agriculture Experiments have also proven that all North Georgia pastures should contain hog clover, since it comes on earlier than does the Bermuda and the lespedeza. For satisfactory growth, the clovers and the lespedeza require lime and phosphorus in the soil.

Demonstrations at the college farm have shown conclusively, Dean Chapman reports, that the number of livestock carried on North Georgia pastures can be doubled, even quadrupled, by improving the pasture land at a nominal cost for seed, fertilizer and labor. These temporary grazing crops, thus planted, extend the period during which the pasture produces foodstuff by approximately 60 days, the experimenters have discovered.

These 60 days can easily represent the differences between profit and loss in cattle or hog raising.

In addition to pastures, Dean Chapman says, Georgia farmers must begin to raise more hay if they are to feed the increasing number of horses, mules, hogs and so forth being added on the state's farms.

The college farm makes elaborate preparations for growing winter hay each year and often more than two tons are produced on a single acre. Experiments have proven the most satisfactory hay mixture contains six pecks of oats, three pecks of wheat, 15 pounds of hairy vetch and 10 pounds of crimson clover. Such a mixture produces a rich and palatable feed. It has the added advantage of being ready for harvest two weeks before the oat crop is ready and after the winter crop of hay is harvested there is still time to plant a summer hay crop before the regular spring work demands the farmer's attention.

It was annual Livestock and Equipment Day at the State College of Agriculture of the University of Georgia System at Athens. In the top picture at left Professor Milton P. Jarnagin, head of the animal husbandry department—center—is shown with Mr. Reese, left, and Chancellor S. V. Sanford, right, looking over some of the livestock. At right may be seen some of the 5,000 farmers who crowded the farm that day.

Among other things on exhibit was more than $50,000 worth of the very latest farming machinery. At left center one piece of this machinery is at work. Most startling to Georgia farmers is the fact that the collegians are breeding mules and horses and raising them to work for less than half what it would cost to buy the mules. At right center are some of the young animals.

Contented cattle roam at lower left. Hogs are found to offer the Georgia farmer a greater possibility for expansion than any phase of the livestock industry. Some of the fine specimens raised on the farm are shown at lower right.

more tonage of hay per acre than any farm in the United States, including those sections in which livestock is the principal crop. It is all done because the land is utilized in the winter.

"We cannot emphasize too strongly the need of growing winter crops in Georgia," Dean Chapman declares.

"We are often told by those who make the type of speeches people like to hear, that the mild climate of the south is a great advantage to the farmer. This is not correct, unless the farmers take advantage of the climate to keep something growing on the land. In fact, the mild winter climate of the south is more often—under the old system of growing only cotton and corn—a disadvantage rather than an advantage.

"Only a growing crop will keep the rains from washing away the soil's plant food."

Dean Chapman continues:

"In addition to saving the plant food that would otherwise be lost, winter farming in Georgia makes it possible for the farmer to use more of the winter moisture. The winters and springs in the south are periods when there is water to spare; at other times of the year, moisture becomes the limiting factor in crop production."

Visitors at the college on Livestock and Equipment Day saw a large field of barley ready for harvest and several fields of oats. Barley can only be grown successfully on rich lands and where it can be produced there is no better feed for stocks, it was explained. It will take the place of corn to a large degree and usually produces more feed per acre than does corn.

For North Georgia farmers, oats is one of the best feed crops that can be raised. Another growing feed crop favorite is cane and sorghum which is grown for silage.

At one time silage, always recognized as a fine feed for livestock, was considered too expensive because of the large outlay of cash necessary to build silos. But with experiment, it has been discovered silage can be produced at no additional cost in trench silos.

A trench silo is simply a trench dug in a hillside. Georgia's future as a livestock state depends on the utilizing of her lands to grow winter crops of grain, silage and hay and the provision of mak-porary pastures. Professor Milton P. Jarnagin, head of the animal husbandry department of the college, insists.

Farmers, businessmen and bankers were interested in the college livestock. Here wild mares from the west have been imported, are broken by the students and are bred to produce mules and horses. It is an experiment that has been carried on under the direction of Dr. Jarnagin in an effort to encourage the home-raising of mules and horses for Georgia farms.

The college has not yet gone so far as to advocate mules and horses being raised in Georgia for commercial purposes but the professors are in agreement that Georgians can, and should, breed their mules and horses for their needs.

For more than 25 years, mule and horse breeding has been successfully carried on at the university farm and all animals used on the farm are bred there.

Most startling to Georgia farmers is the fact the collegians are breeding mules and horses and raising them to work age for less than half what it costs them to buy the animals.

Dr. Jarnagin reports that on January 1, 1938, there were on Georgia farms 337,000 mules, and 31,000 horses.

Approximately 20,000 animals are needed each year to replace those which die. In 1938, after an intensive campaign by the college attempting to get farmers to grow livestock at home, 3,579 mule colts and 1,148 horse colts were dropped in Georgia, representing a gain of 1,495 home-grown colts over the previous year. This was most gratifying to the men who have been working 25 years seeking to get Georgians to breed their own livestock.

But there are many difficulties facing them. The farmers have an idea mules can be bought cheaper than they can be bred, particularly since good stud jacks are so scarce and since so many of the mares in Georgia are no good for breeding. Then there is always the problem of feeding them through the ages until they can be put to work.

And that is where the winter crops come in, again. Winter hay, pastures and so forth, can be provided in the south, if the southern farmer would only heed the scientific mind.

Strongly recommended for breeding purposes are Morgan mares, which the College of Agriculture has obtained from the government ranch at Miles City, Mont. Through efforts of Chancellor S. V. Sanford and his many political connections, the mares at the university were obtained without cost, and they arrived in Athens a little more than three years ago, wild as jack-rabbits and providing entertainment for uninitiated university students to surpass the best rodeo Ringling Brothers has offered.

Private rodeos were held each afternoon by Georgia farm boys until the last of the mares were broken to ride and work. These mares were working the fields during the livestock day program.

Chief point in favor of the small Morgan mares is the fact they can be worked while in foal. The mules produced, however, are large and strong with good bone and conformation. Mules are being produced in large quantities at the College of Agriculture to determine whether or not there are reasons why Georgia cannot produce the mules required on the farms of the state, Dean Chapman said.

Georgia has more money invested in mules than in all other types of livestock combined, Dr. Jarnagin said. Not more than two per cent of these mules are produced in the state.

Since the College of Agriculture began producing mules and educating the farmers to do likewise to supply their own needs, the horse and mule population of Georgia has increased more than that in any other state of the Union.

Proudly, Dr. Jarnagin boasts: "Results to date are most encouraging, though much educational work is still to be done. In 87.3 per cent of the cases, mares have proved to be satisfactory farm workers. As the owners gain more experience there will be fewer dissatisfied owners. The need of permanent pastures and temporary grazing crops is being recognized as never before, both from the standpoint of economy in providing feed and for the health of the animals. With an increased supply of home-grown feeds and a broader knowledge of the undertaking, it is felt that the breeding of work stock will add to the prosperity of the farmers."

The coming of the livestock industry clearly points out another reason Georgia farmers must utilize their soils during the shirt-sleeve winters.

As for the hogs: These big, grunting creatures commanded at-most as much attention as did the mules and the modern machinery.

The old hog was of more than usual interest this year because of experiments in raising him that are being conducted under the direction and supervision of Professor W. S. Rice.

The experiment was to determine the value of temporary pasture for hogs.

Results show that winter time is the time to sow oats and crimson clover in the pastures for profit. Hogs can be turned loose on them in the spring and the animals will gain weight rapidly without the cost of feeding them—a cost which sometimes makes the raising of hogs unprofitable when dry lot pens are used to keep them and fattening feeds must be bought for them.

Professor Rice reports that the hogs on pasture feed are gaining 100 pounds weight at an approximate cost of $3.50 while the same type hogs, with no pasture and which are being fed bought products, makes the 100-pound gain at an approximate cost of $5.

The tests were made after starting both groups of hogs on an equal basis at weaning time.

Professor Rice assumes that one acre of pasture will carry 10 hogs and that, figuring hog feed at current prices, the acre of oat and crimson clover pasture will save $22 over a period of four months.

The results of these feeding tests have proven that oat and crimson clover pasture for fattening hogs during the winter months is a sure way to cut feed cost, and thus enable the profit to be greater in the fattening of fall pigs for the spring market.

Most important result of the hog experiments conducted by Professor Rice was his discovery that hogs on pasture required so much less concentrated feed that they added 75 cents a bushel to the market value of the corn consumed, while those fed on the dry lot added only 24 cents per bushel to the corn fed.

Corn is a supply crop, Dean Chapman points out, and more than 85 per cent of the nation's corn crop is used on the farms where it is produced. About 45 per cent of America's corn crop is fed to hogs. The best way to market corn, it has often been said, is on four feet.

Hogs offer the Georgia farmer a greater possibility for expansion than any phase of the livestock industry.

Chapman advocates the marketing of two crops of pigs each year. One of these pig crops should be fed peanuts and other such feeds, and the other crop should be fattened on corn.

Georgia devotes more acres to corn than to any other crop, though the state grows less corn per acre than any state in the nation with but one exception.

A successful corn crop could be grown with winter farming, Chapman said. The fall before the crop is planted, the land should be planted in winter legume crops. This legume crop in turn is plowed under and by following this practice year after year, it has been found the corn crop can be tripled.

Listen to Dean Chapman:

"If the general practice of growing corn after winter legumes were followed in Georgia and the additional corn produced fed to hogs that had the run of good temporary grazing crops, the total cash returns from hogs could be doubled within less than five years."

"Georgia now ranks ninth among the states of the nation in hog production; this rank can and should be raised so that Georgia would be one of the leading hog producing states of the nation."

Among other things on exhibit for Georgia farmers on livestock day was more than $50,000 worth of the very latest farming machinery. Experts demonstrated its use. The farmers saw how college students were raising chickens in home-made brooders—and very successfully, too. Actual cost of the brooders were $5 and they are heated with an ordinary kerosene lamp. They care for about 100 chicks.

The day was also sheep shearing day. Electrically-operated clippers swiftly separated the sheep from their fleecy coat, the maneuvering being done with such clocklike precision that farmers began pulling out Big Ben watches to time the operation. Two minutes for each ewe was the time—when the operator went about his work in earnest.

Livestock day is a big day for the farmers of Georgia when they come to Athens. The machinery and the exhibits are interesting, but more and more these farmers are coming to Athens to see the winter hay and grain crops grown on the college farm.

And as spring after spring passed with the college results becoming more and more convincing, who knows but even the deep stained tobacco bearders may begin thinking in terms of making use of Georgia's shirt sleeve winters. Who knows but that they may respond to the jingling tune of a sure-fire money-maker?

Dean Chapman and his associates are touring the state, in addition to teaching the youngsters in Athens, preaching the doctrine of winter farming—"if Georgia is ever to have a profitable livestock industry an abundance of cheap food is necessary (which means) the growing of an abundance of winter hay."

Hay crops in now barren months. Shirt-sleeve winters—with pay.

The board of regents of the University System of Georgia, in an effort to encourage the development of Georgia agriculture, recently appointed an agricultural committee. Members are Cason Calhoun, chairman; Knox Gholston, Clark Howell, and Marion Smith, ex-officio. They will work in conjunction with Chancellor S. V. Sanford and the scientists in the university system.

Bert Milton Atkinson, Lieutenant Colonel, American Aviation Corps, Was One of Georgia's Early Birds

By BETTY RUTH HENDERSON.

In the colorful story of American aviation, and particularly that of the World War period, one frequently comes across the names of outstanding American aces, but few Georgians know that the commanding officer of these famous aces was a native Georgian, Colonel Bert M. Atkinson, son of the late William Yates Atkinson, former Governor of Georgia, and Mrs. Atkinson. So modest and self-effacing was this great aviator that only his closest associates and members of his family know of his record.

He was commanding officer of the first American air service combat unit at the front during the World War. He organized the first aerial forest fire fighting unit in the world, and he aided in mapping the first trans-continental air mail routes in the United States. He was one of America's first great flyers.

Bert M. Atkinson was a member of the "Early Birds," an organization of pioneers of aeronautics. This organization was perfected in 1928 at the Chicago air show and its membership consists of pilots who flew before December 17, 1918. The aim of this organization is to build a collection of pioneer machines, relics and records for Greenfield Village, the museum which has been created by Henry Ford at Dearborn, Mich.

About three years ago William E. Scripps, president of the Evening News Association, of Detroit, Mich., and a trustee of the Early Birds, wrote to Colonel Atkinson, who was at that time making his home in Florida, in regard to his biography for Greenfield Village. Colonel Atkinson was ill at the time and unable to give Mr. Scripps the information he desired. Since his death in 1937, through the courtesy of members of his family, information has become available through his war diary and photograph album regarding his aviation activities.

Bert M. Atkinson was born in Newnan, Ga., on March 20, 1889. As a youngster his outstanding characteristic was a burning desire to see what made machinery of any kind, from the family clock to the family automobile, tick. His inquisitive mechanical mind became quite a trial to the family during the early days of automobiles, for before the family could go for a ride a hurried call always had to be made for a mechanic to re-assemble the car.

He attended the public school of Newnan and the Georgia Military College, at Milledgeville, Ga., where he showed ability as a leader and organizer. At the University of Georgia he was a member of the Kappa Alpha fraternity.

In Washington, D. C., he attended an army training school, stood his army examinations with honors, and on February 11, 1911, was commissioned second lieutenant in the regular army, serving with the Fifth Infantry at Plattsburg Barracks, New York, and with the Fifteenth Infantry in Tientsin, China.

In July, 1914, the aviation section, signal corps, was created, charged with the operation and supervision of the operation of all military aircraft. This new service, with extra pay to fliers, attracted the very best personnel and gave a definite status to the aviation corps. It was at this time that Lieutenant Atkinson showed his interest in aviation. He was on duty in the Philippine Islands and applied for transfer into the army aviation corps.

However, it was 1915 before Lieutenant Atkinson was transferred from the Philippines to the North Island Aviation school at San Diego, Cal., to begin the training which was to make of him one of America's outstanding "Early Birds." His ability as a flyer and leader caused him to be made an instructor in the North Island Aviation school.

His first flight, and first solo flight, were made in 1915. In Colonel Atkinson's scrapbook one finds interesting photographs of early planes and aviators, many of whom he knew intimately. One of them was Glenn H. Curtiss, who in 1912 had invented the flying boat. Next to the Wright brothers, Mr. Curtiss did more than anyone in America for aviation. Other aviators whom he was closely associated with in 1915 were Lincoln Beachey, Eddie Stinson, Captain B. D. Foulois, who was later promoted to major general and was chief of air service, and Henry Arnold who is now major general and succeeded General Foulois as chief of air service.

One of the most interesting photographs shows Lieutenant Atkinson in the cockpit of the first bi-motored plane owned by the United States government.

During the Mexican border campaign in 1916 he did duty as a military pilot.

Lieutenant Atkinson was promoted to captain on May 15, 1917, while stationed at Kelly Field, Texas. In October, 1917, he was promoted to major and ordered from Kelly Field to France.

As commanding officer of the 94th Aero Squadron he accompanied this squadron to France, and later received it at the First Pursuit Organization and Training Center at Villeneuve les Vétres. Upon the arrival of the squadron in France, Major Atkinson proceeded to establish camp, make requisition for supplies, planes and other materials necessary for the organization of American aviation corps on French soil. Aviators were in training, and in this work Major Atkinson was assisted by French officers.

In May, 1918, Major Atkinson organized the First Pursuit Group, consisting of the 94th and 96th Aero Squadrons with 100 planes, and was made commander of this group. This was the first American air service combat unit at the front. The last of May two other squadrons joined this group, the 27th and the 147th, and Major Atkinson commanded this group during the Champagne-Marne, Aisne-Marne, and Oisne-Aisne offensives.

From three squadrons at the outbreak of the World War the American air force at the front grew to 45 squadrons by November, 1918. The total personnel of the air service, including officers, students and enlisted men, increased from 1,200 at the outbreak of the war to almost 200,000 at its close.

Being of methodical mind, and assisted by a most capable adjutant, Philip Roosevelt, Colonel Atkinson kept a record of daily orders and at the end of the war compiled these into the form of a diary that gives a day-by-day detail of the activities of the First Pursuit Group.

This documentary record begins January 16, 1918, when Major Atkinson left Paris for Villeneuve les Vétres to make arrangements for the 94th Aero Squadron, and ends on December 17, 1918, when the First Pursuit Group personnel received instructions to report to the commanding officer of the First Air Depot for demobilization.

In August, 1918, Major Atkinson, at the age of 29, was promoted to lieutenant colonel of air service and given command of the First Pursuit Wing, consisting of between 300 and 400 planes. Major Harold Hartner, formerly with the LaFayette Esquadron, succeeded Colonel Atkinson as commanding officer of the First Pursuit Group. The officers of the LaFayette Esquadron had been transferred from the French army to the American Aero Squadron 103, and were in the First Pursuit Wing.

Colonel Atkinson commanded this wing during the San Mihiel and the Meuse-Argonne offensives. The American aces who served under his command were Edward V. Rickenbacker, Douglas Campbell, Frank Luke, Raoul Lufberry, James A. Meissner and many, many others.

Each line in Colonel Atkinson's war diary is filled with heartbreaks. "Lieutenant Lufberry reported missing." "Lieutenant Stout severely wounded in combat." "Lieutenant Scroggie reported missing." On July 14, "Lieutenant Quentin Roosevelt missing. Last seen in combat with enemy plane." These notations go on and on, and one frequently appearing, "Plane going down in flames behind enemy lines." Some of the aviators were unreported for as long as six months, and then a card from the International Red Cross reported them wounded and in German prison camps.

Throughout the diary is woven the story of Eddie Rickenbacker, America's outstanding ace during the war. Every plane and balloon he brought down, every medal he received is recorded, and finally his appointment as commander of the First Pursuit Group with the title of captain. Captain Rickenbacker said of his commanding officer, "As a soldier and leader, Colonel Atkinson was second to none. Those of us under his command will always remember him for his sterling qualities and friendship."

The American air force at the front brought down 755 enemy planes and their own losses were 357.

SERVICE DECORATIONS.

For his distinguished service in the war, Colonel Atkinson was decorated by France, Belgium and the United States. France awarded him the Croix de Guerre with Palm for services with the Fourth French army during the Aisne-Marne offensives, and the Legion of Honor (Chevalier) while serving with the First American army during the Meuse-Argonne offensives. The Belgium government decorated him with the Order of Leopold and the Belgian War Cross. He was cited for service by the United States and received the Purple Heart. Colonel Atkinson bore the responsibility of the lives of hundreds of aviators on his own fragile shoulders, and the grief over his boys who failed to return was a burden almost more than he could bear.

He returned from France in January, 1919. His war experiences caused a general breakdown in health and for months he was in Letterman hospital, California.

When his health improved, because of his great ability as an organizer, he was given command at Mather Field, Sacramento, Cal., to organize the first aerial forest fire fighting unit in the world. He combined love of flying as a pioneer with its modern use as we know it today. The problems of war again confronted him in combating the dread forest fires on the Pacific coast. He rendered excellent service in combating these fires that take millions of dollars of valuable resources and many lives each year.

While in command at Mather Field he found time to assist the United States Air Mail Service in establishing its trans-continental air routes. His experiences in war assisted him in establishing the necessary supply bases, and supplies to be maintained, if the air mail was to fly efficiently. He spent a great deal of time in the air on this work.

Colonel Atkinson accompanied an Italian goodwill mission on a personal visit to the family of David Bublin (founder of the International Institute of Agriculture) and for this service he was offered a decoration by the Italian King. Because of his extreme modesty he refused it.

He frequently took balloon trips in connection with the navy base at San Diego. On one occasion the voyage was rough and everyone on board became violently ill except Colonel Atkinson. Although not a lighter-than-air pilot of record he deflated the balloon and landed safely. On another occasion the temperature of the gas in the bag was lowered sufficiently to cause the balloon to drop like a plummet, and with a rare ever-present sense of air-worthiness, Colonel Atkinson dropped enough ballast to save the vessel.

Simplicity was in everything he did, including his quiet humor and an occasional spurt of anger. Enlisted men and officers loved him and respected him for his knowledge of pioneer aviation. Always he was thinking, and he always put his officers at ease by thinking out their problems with them. Because of ill health he was forced to retire from active service in 1922.

When his health improved he was appointed assistant adjutant general of Florida in 1924. In 1933 he was again forced to retire on account of his health and he died in Fitzsimons hospital, Denver, Col., in April, 1937.

During his last illness a friend and fellow officer wrote him, "Nature endowed you with a superior abundance of courage and grit and determination. To me, you will ever remain an inspiration."

Another officer said of him, "Bert established all the early policies of aviation, but he didn't give a rap for fame. He was the soul of honor. He loved his friends more than any man I ever saw."

Colonel Atkinson's wife and three children survive him, Susan Milton, Bert Milton and James Swinnerton. They make their home in San Francisco.

This great man was generously endowed with a splendid heritage. His family on the maternal and paternal sides have long been prominent in the public affairs of Georgia and Florida. During the early days of the history of this country his family were outstanding as jurists, statesmen and patriots.

He was descended from John Pepper Atkinson, who was sent to America from England by King George III in 1762 as judge of the court of appeals for the Colony of Virginia.

The Atkinson family married into the Randolph, Yates and Lundie families of Virginia. John Pepper Atkinson III moved to Georgia in 1835 and was married to Theodore Phelps Ellis, of Columbus, Ga. Among their descendants are some of the most distinguished citizens of Georgia.

William Yates Atkinson, the father of Colonel Bert M. Atkinson, was Governor of Georgia, 1894-1898, and was one of the most progressive chief executives the state has ever had. Colonel Atkinson's mother, Susan Cobb Milton Atkinson, is descended from a family of famous Georgia and Florida ancestry.

The American branch of the Milton family are descended from Judge Christopher Milton, brother of John Milton, the English poet. The first American representative, John Milton, settled in Halifax county, Virginia, about 1730. His son, John Milton, became one of the most heroic figures in Georgia history.

Upon the organization of the Georgia state government, John Milton became the first secretary of state. He served as captain in the American army during the War of the Revolution. At the first election for president of the United States, John Milton received Georgia's electoral votes for the highest office in the nation, to which George Washington was elected.

Captain Milton's son, Homer Virgil Milton, was a general in the War of 1812 and served with distinction. General Milton's son fought in the Florida Indian Wars and was Governor of Florida during the War Between the States.

The grandfather of Colonel Atkinson, William Henry Milton, was a major in the Confederate army.

It is from these distinguished soldiers and patriots that Bert Milton Atkinson was descended. His own accomplishments become more understandable when viewed in the light of the past history of these outstanding families.

Afield With a Naturalist

By GEORGE DORSEY.

ABOUT SNAKES

In coming to the subject of snakes I touch on a branch of natural history that I find of particular interest—the class of reptiles. I really don't know why I haven't written something about snakes before now, unless it is because many people do not like them. But no account of the creatures to be found in the woods is complete without saying something about snakes.

We have about forty different kinds in the state of Georgia, only four general types of which are poisonous: the rattlesnakes, the copperhead, the cotton-mouth moccasin and the coral snake. There are three different kinds of rattlesnakes in our state, the big diamond-back of the coastal plain, the familiar timber rattler, and the little ground rattler. Both of the last two mentioned are found about Atlanta, and also the copperhead, or "highland moccasin," which is also called "pilot" in the mountains. The other two poisonous snakes of Georgia do not seem to reach Atlanta in their ranges, being found as far as I know in lower regions. These are the water moccasin, or "cotton-mouth moccasin," and the coral snake, or "tunder snake."

Many things have been written about these four types (in Georgia, six forms of poisonous snakes. I shall not attempt to give a description for their identification here. There are several excellent textbooks that give their characteristics. I would particularly recommend "Reptiles of North America," by R. L. Ditmars, and "Snakes Alive," by Clifford H. Pope, who by the way grew up as a boy in Georgia.

If anyone is to study snakes, I would suggest that he read up on these poisonous varieties the very first thing. Learn them so well that there can be no mistaking them, and you may safely handle all of the others you come across. It will, of course, take a little extra nerve for you to touch your first snake—if you ever consider doing so. If you have been taught to fear snakes from early childhood, this will be quite a brave thing for you to do—to learn to hold a harmless snake in your hands. If you choose your first snake wisely, it will not be an unpleasant experience, other than the utter strangeness of it all.

I don't believe any other living creature could feel like a snake does. They have a sort of muscular, smooth feel, very interesting; their skin is as dry as cellophane. They are not slimy like an earthworm, although some of them may leave a strong scent, or musk, on your hands. Remember that I said—"if you choose wisely." Choosing wisely will mean that you have to know something about the snake. Some species are very gentle in the hand, and never offer to bite you, nor lend you any queer perfumes. Others, while non-poisonous, are vicious and mean, and will bite again and again. Still others are halfway between, and make nice pets when they have been tamed. Pick them up slowly and handle them gently for best results.

No snake bite from a non-poisonous snake is dangerous. Put iodine on it and forget about it. I have probably been bitten well over a hundred times by snakes that were harmless otherwise—I lose count long ago; it wasn't important.

Snakes make a very interesting study. There is still much to be worked out in our knowledge of their habits and their ways. Much of this can be done only while the snake is in captivity. Some of the best ones for pets include the little scarlet snake, the king snakes, the hog-nosed snake (or "spreading adder"—no, it is certainly not poisonous), the little green snakes, the bull snake, the red-bellied snake, and possibly the pilot black snake.

Of them all I like the hog-nosed snake best. It has a distinctive appearance, will never bite anyone, and can be fed loads until it can hardly eat another. It has several other interesting points. It often plays dead, which is very amusing sometimes. We had one that would do this on every occasion when it was bothered. It would turn over on its back, open its mouth, and hang its soft little tongue out. Turn him over on the right side, and back over he would roll. He insisted on being dead. It was very funny. He was so persistent that he made a spectacle of himself, and was not a very good snake for showing off other characteristics, as some hog-nosed snakes are.

The hog-nose has a false reputation of being very poisonous. I have proved to myself many times that this is not so by forcing it against its will to bite my finger. Of course nothing happened.

If you keep a snake, give him a fairly roomy cage, well ventilated, and not kept directly in the sun. Place some dead branches inside for him to hide in and to rub against when he sheds his skin. Give him plenty of water to drink. He need not be fed very often—once every two weeks will do. And never poke him at a person who has not yet learned to conquer his fear or dislike of snakes.

Nature Study for Camps III—A most interesting nature project for a camp is to construct a nature trail. This is a sort of outdoor museum along a path in the woods, with the trees and plants named and various conditions indicated. Birds' nests may be pointed out, as well as insect colonies, spiders' webs, animal dens, geological formations, and any other thing of interest. Everything can be labeled with explanations that make a trip over the trail a novel experience in nature education.

Shrubs may be named by tags—wooden ones are best. Try making them of flat ice cream sticks and woden tongue depressors from the drug store. Larger signs may be placed on the trees. Metal ones are most durable, but avoid copper nails. I suspect they might poison the trees. The nature trail will provide a stimulating activity for the camp, for it must be kept up carefully, and signs changed as things go out and come into season. Rustic bridges and seats may be placed along the trail, and it will become a show-place for visitors to the camp.

THE TEMPLE OF CHILDREN'S SMILES

By ADELINE CLARKE.

Tiny babies in rows of white iron beds . . . Eight-year-olds clutching picture books and dolls . . . Boys and girls just entering their teens . . . The sun slants invitingly into the large cheerful room. Brightly colored toys fill the corners. It's a happy sight. Happy in spite of the fact that every child there has one or both legs in a cast, or is walking with crutches. Or perhaps he can't walk at all. There's a boy in a wheel chair. One little girl has her neck and head held firmly in a brace.

The scene is the Scottish Rite Hospital for Crippled Children in Decatur. Someone has called it the Temple of Children's Smiles. Because, in spite of their paralyzed legs, their malformed feet and twisted little bodies, these children are a gay and laughing group who forget their troubles in fun and play.

There's Mary, who is a sunny, twinkling 10-year-old. Her father is a tenant farmer in South Georgia. Mary fell and injured her knee. The infection spread through the bone, and amputation of her leg was thought necessary. Broken-hearted, her mother and father brought her in their old battered car to an Atlanta doctor.

"Her leg may be saved," was his verdict. "She must go immediately to the Scottish Rite Hospital." It didn't matter that Mary's parents had no money. For the Scottish Rite Hospital takes no paying patients. All their children are from poor homes.

Immediate attention and constant care have saved Mary's leg. Now she's ready to go home, and she'll run down the walk to meet mother and daddy when they come for her next week. John is 12. He was carried in helpless, an infantile paralysis victim. He couldn't move his hands or feet. Eight months of training, massage and braces have worked wonders. He walks by himself now. Even yet, he can't feed himself, but he is constantly gaining in strength and co-ordination of the stubborn muscles.

"Someday I'll be just like the other kids," he said with a shy smile. And the doctors say he is right.

There are 60 other children in the hospital, all with similar stories. The tiny babies with legs and feet in plaster casts are having club feet corrected. Tuberculosis of the bone and osteomyelitis account for the presence of others.

This charitable work is being carried on by the Scottish Rite Body of Masons. They run the hospital, and in large measure support it financially. Dozens of doctors, surgeons and dentists, who give their services without charge, help to make it possible. A woman's auxiliary does sewing, mending and canning for the hospital. WPA provides teachers for the children, who are old enough to be in school. Bequests of philanthropic citizens have helped. And numerous individuals give time and money to guarantee this work of helping children who would otherwise face life with a tragic handicap.

To provide milk for the 62 children in the hospital, the Atlanta Masonic Club sponsors the Annual Kiddies' Revue, which is being held now at Loew's Grand theater. One hundred and fifty children will take part in the show, which will run concurrently with the feature picture.

tal when it was established in 1915. He was then 14 years old.

"There were only two cottages then," he recalls. "They and the land were donated by the late Forrest Adair."

"Mr. Adair had seen a little boy badly injured in a railroad wreck. The boy's parents were without money and he needed months of expert care. Mr. Adair and Dr. Michael Hoke, a surgeon of international reputation, conceived the idea of a hospital devoted to crippled children who couldn't afford to pay for expensive operations and treatment. That's how it started."

"The Scottish Rite Masons took it over as an opportunity to put into practice some of the principles for which Masonry stands. The hospital is intended to be an example of true charity, without a shadow of commercialism."

The hospital was among the first for crippled children and has been copied by many other institutions. Since its inception, the Scottish Rite Masons have established similar hospitals throughout the United States and Canada.

Only Georgia children under 14 years of age are admitted to the Decatur hospital. During its 23 years of service, every county in the state has been represented, as the home of one or more of the little patients.

Miss Ellen Westover is superintendent. Dr. Joseph H. Kite is surgeon-in-chief. Mr. William C. Wardlaw is chairman of the board of trustees.

The next time you get the blues, head the car for the Scottish Rite Hospital for Crippled Children. A visit to the Temple of Children's Smiles is bound to cheer you up. For the sight of children so happy in spite of suffering is a gladdening one, and so is the thought that they are being lovingly cared for and cured.

Brooks Tolar reads wild west stories to his pal, Eugene Daugherty, while the latter rests in his little white bed at Scottish Rite hospital.

She Went Up Soprano and Came Down Baritone

By NELL WALTHALL SIMMONS.

If someone dared you to make a parachute jump what on earth would you do? Most of us would force a merry laugh but Judith Lawton knocked her friends over with a feathery "Sure, I'll jump the 8,000-odd feet."

As a result of that jump Miss Lawton now makes her living crooning in baritone. You can hear her hit her low note—C below middle C—these evenings in the Spanish Room at the Henry Grady. Before she made the fatal leap five years ago she sang soprano so well that, still in the middle 'teen age, she was just establishing herself as vocalist with such big name orchestras as Rudy Vallee, Paul Whiteman and Ben Bernie.

She was having a vacation in England where she was born and where her father had been in the air corps when she impulsively decided that if other people could float down from the sky by parachute why shouldn't she. Up she went and out she bailed but something got tangled and she fell 4,000 feet thinking, my word, the thing isn't going to open when slowly it did. It was what is called, in any language, a delayed jump.

Safe on the ground she opened her mouth to say something appropriate like Gee Whiz in what had been a nice coloratura soprano, but it came out a rich and throaty Gee Whiz. When she realized that her voice had taken a downward jump, too, and that it was not just a temporary slump she was as worried about it as any professional singer would be. Throat doctors looked and X-rayed and ended by just guessing that the terrific scream she had given as she jumped was the cause.

"Two months later," Miss Lawton said, "I was back in America at a job of singing on the radio when it began to dawn on me that I had something commercially valuable in a voice with what is said to have the widest range of that of any feminine entertainer. The jump changed my high notes to falsetto."

"Audiences seemed to like my torch singing better. I later had my voice insured with Lloyd's of London for $150,000 against its turning back to soprano. Of course, there is a stipulation of no more parachute jumps, but I can fly as much as I like."

Miss Lawton is a licensed pilot and flies a great deal but she came to Atlanta by automobile from a vacation in Miami, and after reading all those signs on the highway she wants some Georgia peaches and peaches, but no more of those black-eyed peas, please. They were served as part of her first southern meal and are not on her hit parade.

What do crooners like to sing and how does a woman entertainer dress to hold the spotlight? "Heaven Can Wait," is Miss Lawton's current favorite and she likes to do her crooner's version of Celeste Aida.

"The color for the spotlight," she says, "I think is light blue, powder blue I suppose, it looks good under strong lights and almost everyone likes it, including me."

He Tempers Justice With Mercy

By BILL MUNDAY.

Denizens of the underworld call him a man with a "camera eye and a magic memory."

And their appellation to Judge John S. Cone, now finishing his ninth year as city recorder, by no means is a misnomer.

Once he sees a face or tries a case indelibly are both blotted in his mind.

From personal observation this greenhorn has ascertained as much; what with spending an afternoon with this gentleman who daily peruses a cavalcade of humanity, its pathos, its splendor and its vicissitudes.

It was out at his lovely home on Pelham road, in his den which he elects to call appropriately and paradoxically enough "In the Dog House."

We were discussing the fate of the Crackers—the judge is an avid fan, you know—when the genial missus gave word that a gentleman desired audience.

"Send him up, lady," he said.

Well, up he came, into "The Dog House."

And he began: "Judge, this morning you fined my cook and bound her over on lottery charges. She has been with me for years. Her honesty and integrity are unimpeachable. Those tickets the officers found in her house evidently were planted by some envious person. My wife cannot cook and I can't pay Eula's fines and so she and me and the children will either go hungry tonight or eat out of tin cans. How about letting her out?"

The man with "the camera eye and magic memory" demurred.

He had tried over 150 cases during the morn but instantly he recalled this one with a penchant for reflection most amazing.

"No," he declared firmly, "she has been up before me time and again on this charge and that. She was arrested by Officers (and he called them by name). She is becoming gray and she is the champion alibi maker of whom I know. I can do nothing for you, son. She must swallow her medicine."

Then with a smile of charity he advised the youth to take the matter to the mayor. His hands were washed. And he knew the mayor would support him in his judgment.

"Speaking of alibis," the veteran jurist explained, "I can hear more and sundry each day than could be listed by champion liar-tellers. Last winter one of those of color was brought before me for using his car without a driver's license. He employed with me to turn him loose, stating that he had one all right, but the police on arrest, would not permit him time enough to procure it."

"Then where was it?" I asked. "Tell yer de truth, Judge. It was so cold that I had to put on three pairs of trousers de day de officers got me and dat license was in de britches nearest my skin and dey wouldn't give me 'nough time to fetch it."

Judge Cone delights to relate the story of the occasion when the defendant, a young negro lad, was before the bench because it was alleged that he had hit his wife over the head with a frying pan.

"How big was that frying pan, Sam?" he interrogated. The boy hesitated, one eye out the window, one on his honor.

"If you must know, Judge, it was just about as big around as your head, but not quite so thick."

Judge Broyles was known as Judge Briles by the local colored contingent. And Judge Cone to them is Judge Cohen.

Recently in Macon two of the crap-shooting boys were arguing over the relative merits of the central and the capital city. The cherub from the Gate City of the South soon apparently was winning the argument. Had it cinched, in fact, came the rebuttal.

"Boy, your town may be 100 per cent but we ain't got no judge down here named Cohen."

A devout Christian and a person who strives conscientiously and diligently to improve morality among youth, Judge Cone often has sentenced minor violators to Sunday school attendance, instructing probation officials as deputies to see that his edict was obeyed in toto.

Drunkards are estopped pronto once they enter Judge Cone's court. Under no conditions are they tolerated. With them he has no patience—not a scintilla. Especially in such as the following incident:

A certain man was brought in with the admission that he was attempting to pawn baby shoes, purchased with funds from a federal relief organization, to buy a bottle of liquor,

Judge John S. Cone dispenses justice.

Said Judge Cone:

"I have had numerous cases before me where the defendant took foodstuffs given by relief and pawned it to purchase whisky but this is the first time I have ever heard of a man pawning baby shoes for money with which to buy a drink."

The man was fined and the shoes ordered returned to his pitiless family.

It was Saturday night and the young negro, en route home, had stopped by the grocery for four pork chops. But he was picked up on charges of being intoxicated.

Monday morning court. "What's in that package, Jim?" inquired Judge Cone.

"Pork chops, Judge, I've been lugging and hugging 'em around since Saddy night. They were my Sunny dinner and I've gonna eat 'em once I gets out o' dis here jail."

"Well, you are out," ruled the judge. "Go and eat them. Anyone who would hang onto four pork chops for so many hours should not go to the stockade for over-indulgence."

Portia made famous the idea of tempering justice with mercy. Judge Cone does.

Ida Worthy, a negro woman, was arraigned. Possessing lottery tickets, so proclaimed the law. "Gimme mercy, your honor," she begged. "You see, I is de mother of nine children, all under 15, and I'se trying to make a living for dem!"

"Nine children," the astonished judge opined, "that is no family. That is an orphan's home."

He then suspended a 20-day sentence with the admonition that she return home, call the roll and ascertain if any of her brood had disappeared during her incarceration.

There are thousands of sagas relative to the work of Judge Cone and his able colleague, Judge A. W. Callaway, which could be related. Daily they live history as the maelstrom of people come in and are exited before their rostrum. They have seen the well and the ill; the drunkards and the dope fiends, persons on their way to the electric chair, ad infinitum.

But with a love of their fellow man, an inherent ambition, an innate desire to help in his betterment they carry their flags at full mast. Atlanta should be proud of such gentlemen!

Griffin Has First Jaycee-ettes

By DOROTHY MADDOX.

The only organization of its kind in the South celebrated its first birthday at an inaugural banquet recently.

This event, held at Club Everree, near Griffin, by the Griffin Jaycee-ettes, marked one year of civic service by the organization which has for its slogan, "Our time, our talents, our thoughts for Griffin."

Although bearing a name derived from and similar to that of the men's Junior Chamber of Commerce, the Jaycee-ette organization, composed of young businesswomen and wives of the Jaycees, operates separately from the Jaycees, as a self-sustaining, self-governing unit. To date, investigation has revealed no other Jaycee-ette organization in the South. In November the body was granted a charter as the Griffin Jaycee-ettes, Inc.

Organized in April, 1938, by Mrs. George Ines Jr., who served as president during the year, the Jaycee-ettes have been steadily accomplishing their purpose, which, according to the president, is "to provide the young women of Griffin and Spalding county a medium for training in citizenship, to promote the civic, industrial, and educational activities of the community and to co-operate with all other civic organizations."

The Jaycee-ettes have bi-monthly dinner meetings in the Jaycee clubroom. At one meeting during the month there is a speaker; at the other, a business session.

Programs planned for the meetings have been in line with the club's purpose already stated. At the first meeting Quimby Melton, editor of the Griffin Daily News, explained "What the Jaycee-ettes Can Mean to Griffin."

One of the main projects carried on by the Jaycee-ettes last year was the aiding of Spalding county tubercular patients. Clothing and transportation were provided for persons transferred to the sanatorium at Alto. A help to one patient who remained in Griffin was a TB hut financed by the Jaycee-ettes and built by students at the colored vocational school. Also in connection with this work, members of the organization aided the Jaycees in soliciting funds for their work in stamping out tuberculosis in the county.

Another preparatory program was a discussion of Spalding county welfare work by Mrs. Evander Shapard Jr., which served to familiarize the Jaycee-ettes with conditions existing in the county, and ways the organization could be of service. The group has responded to numerous calls for food, clothing and fuel. Thus aiding local needy families was another worthy project undertaken.

In co-operation with the schools, this civic group contributed to the Griffin High School Food

Fund for undernourished children and helped a grammar school buy the regulation white raincoats and hats and boots for its school boy patrol.

Recently the Jaycee-ettes began sponsoring the Homemaking Institute inaugurated by the WPA, to train unemployed young women for home services such as housekeeping and caring for children, and sick persons. A monthly sum is contributed to furnish supplies for the training classes.

Whenever organizations want tickets sold, it is to the Jaycee-ettes they go. During the past year the members have boosted and enlarged ticket sales for worthy causes sponsored by the Jaycees, the Garden Club and the Elks.

Plans are now being made for the coming year. One of the main projects being the sponsoring of the cancer control drive in Griffin. Co-operation with the Spalding County Safety Council has a place in the plan of work. During the year the organization is interested in organizing other Jaycee-ette groups in Georgia to render community service.

Such projects as the Jaycee-ettes undertake naturally bring on financial problems, and for them there is a solution. Money was raised last year by sponsoring six dances, an all-feminine cast play, a benefit bridge party and a movie, in addition to the regular monthly dues.

The Jaycee-ettes are governed by the board of directors, composed of the six officers and six directors. Serving the past year were Mrs. George Ines Jr., president; Mrs. Preston Bunn, first vice president; Mrs. Henry Langford, second vice president; Mrs. Charlie Patton, secretary; Miss Mary Langford, treasurer; Miss Dorothy Maddox, chairman of the board of directors, and Miss Mamie Fullilove, Miss Sara Frances Stanley, Mrs. Gordon (Continued on Back Page)

BOOKS - - - AND THEIR AUTHORS

Written to Sell.

MEN CAN TAKE IT. By Elizabeth Hawes. Random House, New York. 275 pp. Illust. with line drawings. $2.

Some time back Elizabeth Hawes, a New York designer of costumes for ladies, wrote a very entertaining treatise entitled "Fashion Is Spinach," in which she exoriated the slavery women evidence in changing their wearing apparel to suit the whims of manufacturers, who decree "Fashion" changes in order to sell more goods. In the course of this book she took many "cracks" at the clothing style of men; and while she didn't say so one inferred that she would like to see men wearing knee breeches, silk stockings and silk coats with lace at the cuffs.

The book sold well, so now she gives us "Men Can Take It," meaning that the average man wears the style of clothes he does today and likes them. After wading through a lot of very cleverly written "hokey," wise-cracks and other evidences of writing a book to sell, one gathers the idea that no one female women are wearing shorts, next-to-nothing bathing suits, and some of them patronizing nudist camps, it is time for men to chuck their present style of habiliament and adorn themselves in like manner—of course, all in the interest of comfort.

Well, some males have already adopted the glorified undershirt, open far down the waistline; many exhibit billiard-ball craniums the color of crushed strawberry short cake, and wear their socks rolled down to exhibit rabbit-hair shanks; while others have burdened themselves with eyebrow streaks between their noses and potato receptacles. But, by-and-large, the he-man of today will "continue to take it," even if it causes Mrs. Hawes enough distress to write another book on the subject.

Rare Stamp Mystery.

CANCELLED IN RED. By Hugh Pentecost. Dodd, Mead & Co., New York. 266 pp. $2.

He was a rat all right and nobody was sorry that he was found dead in his palatial office; but there were several who were uneasy about having the police nosing around among the people who were interested in rare postage stamps.

Larry Storm had a hunch he was sticking his neck out when he started to solve the mystery of who killed the greatest crook in the stamp business, but once he was into the mess there was nothing to do but wade through it.

Inspector Bradley was friendly at the start, but it was up to him to solve the mystery, let the guilty one be whom it might—Larry, a beautiful girl who had been swindled, a dealer who had been crooked—or someone else.

By Three Little Girls.

OUR FAMILY. By Adet and Anor Lin. John Day Company, New York. 256 pp. $2.

Adet and Anor Lin, 16 and 13 years old, respectively, daughters of the well-known Chinese philosopher and author, Lin Yutang, for ones so young, have made out a remarkably readable and interesting volume on their parents, their friends and the travels of the Lin family over three continents.

A forward and running fire of comments has been supplied by Melmei, eight, and the remaining daughter in the Lin family. But the fact that the volume has been written by children does not mean that it has been written for children. The personal-essay style adopted by the authors perhaps will be most appreciated by adult readers. Their comments on America ("I like dogs in America when they are hot") are particularly interesting. As added color, the original manuscript has been put into book form without editing. Style, spelling, punctuation, and even the explanatory sketches that dot the book are just as the youthful authors first put them down.

To those who find the present flood of volumes that affect to probe underlying trends of our present civilization beginning to pall upon them, the naive observations of these three little girls will be most refreshing.

ROBERT BURKHARDT.

Fof World Peace.

WORLD FEDERATION. By Oscar Newfang. Barnes & Noble, Inc., New York. 120 pp.

The author of "The Road to World Peace" and "The United States of the World" extends in this volume his central thesis that universal peace cannot be achieved without an evolution of all nations in much the same manner that present national harmony has been established in the United States. In other words, by the provision of a supreme world power.

Newfang proposes an immediate strengthening of the League of Nations, and eventual transfer of national armed forces into a world force, together with the establishment of a court of international justice, a central monetary authority. Basically, he advocates that the existing world structure be allowed to disappear, being replaced by world states, self-governing in the sense that American states are self-governing.

From the idealistic standpoint the author presents a very logical plan, yet from the practical view he falls into a fundamental error in his appraisal of the international concepts. He proposes to apply law as to individuals within a state, a social order which defines and establishes rights and duties, at the same time applying these to the individual conscience. This application to individuals abolishes recourse to violence in the settlement of disputes by the application of legalistic principles. In other words, force is eliminated as a basis of relations, and becomes a crime.

Yet Newfang would build this world plan around a foundation that makes recourse to violence—to war—a precondition to its existence. He would establish a world police force for enforcement, as against the basic tenet of individual relationships that conscience and acceptance of legal interpretation alone withholds anarchy. He falls into the same error that led to the downfall of the League of Nations as a force in international relationships; an error that authorizes war as a means of settling disputes.

World peace will become a reality only when nations and the men who make nations abolish the war system in international morality. The implication of force in the establishment of a world order must in itself be abhorrent. The development of a social order in which war is banned will come only with the growth of a world conscience that permits the establishment of an international court of justice, the decisions of which will refuse to take cognizance of war as an instrument of relationship, and which will be rendered enforceable through world-wide acceptance of the principle that recourse to force is criminal in any manifestation.

Whatever the merits of his argument, however, Newfang makes a distinct contribution to the forces groping toward world peace, since he offers a thoughtful study of the growth of national structures and peaceful national relationships, at the same time adding to the synthesis of thought which some day must find the path along which the world can travel.

Care of Lawns.

THE LAWN. By Charles W. Parker. Hale, Cushman & Flint, Lexington, Mass. 118 pp. $1.

Mr. Parker's treatise on the growth, care and cure of lawns fills a long-felt need, both for the new home owners and the veteran of the mower. The text matters is simple enough for the layman to digest, yet sufficiently detailed to instruct even the expert. For those who would take pride in a velvety green carpet, it has all the answers. It is a must for the garden library.

Czecho-Slovakia.

NORTH OF THE DANUBE. By Erskine Caldwell. With 64 photographs by Margaret Bourke-White. 136 pp. $3.

The Czecho-Slovak equivalent of "You Have Seen Their Faces." Giving literary and pictorial expression to a struggle which has, at least for the moment, ceased to exist, this work is extraordinarily well-timed and possessed of an importance scarcely to be exaggerated. Unless it is written with "after-the-event" wisdom, it is apparent that the struggle, as well as its outcome, cast long shadows before. Said, for instance, the vineyard-owner of Surany: "The Hungarians want my land, even though it really belongs to the Slovaks. If the Hungarians take it, the Slovaks will become their serfs instead of mine. . . . And while all of us wait to find out who is master and who is serf, the German God Almighty is coming as the master of us all."

One wonders what became of him. And whether the starved peasants of Uzok have any more to eat now. And whether the defiant tinsmith pictured on the last page is now in a concentration camp. The first lesson driven home by this extraordinary work is that the ordinary travel book (with a few exceptions) gives us very little information that is really significant. The second is that in power to transmit impressions the printed word cannot compare to skillful photography. If the terse and carefully chosen words of Mr. Caldwell were left out of this record, we should still have an adequate picture of the last days of Czecho-Slovakia. Without Miss Bourke-White's photography we should have very little.

New Book News

By JOHN DREWRY,

Director Henry W. Grady School of Journalism, University of Georgia

Courtney Ryley Cooper.

So that the public may have reliable information about white slavery and its many criminal ramifications, especially its potential dangers to the young—male and female, Courtney Ryley Cooper has written "Designs in Scarlet" (Little, Brown).

This is more, however, than a book about white slavery. It is an arresting treatise on what the author terms "youth's three deadliest weapons: Sex, liquor and the automobile."

In the preparation of this somewhat alarming volume, Mr. Cooper has been aided by the Federal Bureau of Investigation, the United States Post Office Inspection Department, the Federal Bureau of Narcotics, the United States Public Health Service, the alcohol tax unit of the Treasury Department, and many district attorneys, sheriffs, chiefs of police, crime prevention officers and detective departments.

As for his technique in gathering the facts for this book, the author has this word of explanation: "The writer assumed a dual role, that of a reporter assembling facts for a book, plus a status as a federal informer regarding the infractions. . . . Thus uncovered. That this was not merely a surface investigation may be gauged from the fact that evidence thus adduced has resulted in the arrest and federal prosecution of several persistent offenders. . . ."

If the disclosures of "Designs in Scarlet" are thought by some to be sensational, it is because of the facts which Mr. Cooper has unearthed and his desire to shock a complaisant public into socially constructive action. His publishers have written in this connection: "To collect the evidence presented in this book, Mr. Cooper has punished himself by spending months wading in the slime of civilization. But he has not had to hunt for it in the sewers. It flows along main highways, on brightly-lighted streets, past schools and churches, and spreads its microbes with utter impartiality. This book will not amuse or entertain. . . . It is a harsh dose, but a vitally necessary one. It has been written for one purpose, to tell the facts, in the belief that when you know them, you will not rest until you have done what you can to correct them."

Mr. Cooper is very much concerned about the potential dangers to the unsuspecting in the various "designs in scarlet" which he has discovered and about which he writes. "Everything that is printed in this book is something that can happen to you, to your sisters or brothers or to your children," he observes. "The crimes, the degeneracy, prostitution, drug addiction, slavery, peonage about which his conference with attempt to tell the stark truth extend their tendrils into a minimum of more than half of all the homes in America!"

This author is alarmed, as are many educators and social workers, about the increasing youthfulness of the criminals of the country. "It is indeed shocking," he writes in this connection, "to read in the statistics of the Federal Bureau of Investigation that 18.8 per cent of all our crime in 1938 was committed by youths less than 21 years old—a rise of eight-tenths per cent over 1937. . . . More than 60 per cent of all officers murdered by criminals within the last five years have been killed by persons less than 30 years old. . . ."

As for the causes of this crime among youth, he reports that, one warden discovered, after talking with many prison inmates, that "three groups of reasons were uppermost: A primary one was sex and drinking. Another was bad company. But the most uniform was a variation of blame for parents who had made the first two causes possible, either through lack of discipline, lack of interest, lack of religion, or because of brutality, loneliness, neglect, broken homes and even crimes encouraged by fathers and mothers. . . ."

"Designs in Scarlet" does not make pleasant reading, but its disclosures are such as to make a wide perusal of it among parents, teachers, ministers, social workers, and similar groups highly desirable. This book is the third in a series of sociological studies by Mr. Cooper, its two predecessors being "Ten Thousand Public Enemies" and "Here's to Crime."

In the realm of fiction, "Wickford Point" (Little, Brown) by John P. Marquand, is one of the best productions of the spring. This is the new book by the man who wrote the Pulitzer prize-winner, "The Late George Arpley." Reviewers everywhere have been enthusiastic about the book. Harry Hansen, of the New York World-Telegram, has observed that the Brills of New England (around whom Mr. Marquand's novel centers) are the "dinner-table topic of the nation." Everybody, it seems, wants to know who Mr. Marquand had in mind when he wrote this book. Some of the possibilities which the author himself has overheard are: John Brill; John Greenleaf Whit-tier, Edward Everett Hale, Thomas Wentworth Higginson, Mr. Longfellow and old Mr. Frank Sanborn, of Concord.

Joe Slove; Sinclair Lewis, Sidney Howard, Mr. Hemingway and Kenneth Roberts.

Allen Southby: One well-known literary critic and historian, three Yale professors, and three members of the English department at Harvard.

Justice and the "Black Widows"

Murder-for-Profit Ring Sets Record in American Crime

By FRED PASLEY.

Justice in Pennsylvania is today knee-deep in an investigation of the most infamous murder-for-profit conspiracy in American history. No one knows how many more killings may be uncovered. The staggering toll of victims may reach as high as 250—all slain purely for their death value.

The crimes of this "black widow" gang were motivated by greed. The directing geniuses exploited the ignorance and superstition of simple-minded, emotional people. The victims were all from humble walks of life, the forgotten men and women of a great metropolis.

The bulk of them, first generation immigrants, could neither read, write nor speak English. They were ready prey for glib-tongued sharpers of their own race who had mastered the get-rich-quick way of our American civilization.

EX-CONVICT'S TALE STARTED WIDE PROBE

This strangest story of modern times begins on the most commonplace note imaginable. An obscure handyman and upholsterer, George Meyers, needed $25 to buy ingredients for a cleaning fluid he had perfected. His idea was to manufacture it and peddle it from door to door. He had figured that the formula while serving a term in the workhouse at New Castle, Del., for a minor offense.

A fellow inmate, Dominick Policane, to whom Meyers had confided his project, suggested he contact Herman Petrillo, an erstwhile spaghetti salesman, because "he is lousy with money." Meyers did so immediately upon his release in June of 1938. Petrillo was then living in Langhorne, northeast of Philadelphia. Meyers introduced himself as a friend of Policane.

"So you know Nic, eh? What can I do for you?" was Petrillo's greeting.

Meyers explained his mission, adding he was a former Philadelphia, but was now desirous of settling in Lakedood, N. J. Petrillo laughed uproariously. "Why should I lend you dough?" he asked. Then, appraising Meyers keenly, "You say you want $25. That's chicken feed. What if I got you $500?"

Meyers' answer was a gasp. Petrillo let the suggestion sink in for a full 30 seconds before he relieved the suspense with:

"It's a job I want done. A job that'll take a good while. The situation was assuming sinister aspects, but Meyers was determined to see it through. Nodding understandingly, he grunted: "Okay by me."

All that Petrillo wished Meyers to do was to eliminate a WPA worker named Ferdinand Alfonsi. The reason—as he gave it to Meyers—was that Alfonsi's very pretty wife, Stella, was tired of him. He nagged at her continually and often beat her. Alfonsi had been a prosperous cement contractor prior to the depression, but had gone broke.

Meyers would run no risks. Everything was fixed. Mrs. Alfonsi would take the two children to the neighborhood movies, leaving her husband alone in their North Philadelphia home and hanging a towel on the back fence as a signal. Meyers, impersonating a plumber, would enter the house, slug the unsuspecting Alfonsi into lethal slumber with a lead pipe and toss him down the stairway to make death appear accidental.

"It's a cinch, and listen," continued Petrillo expansively, "I'll either pay you $500 cash on the line or $2,500 in 'queer.' You can make more for yourself that way. The stuff is perfect. You can pass it like gravy."

FEDERAL MEN GET COUNTERFEIT BILL

Now, indeed, the situation was not only sinister, but complicated. Keeping a poker face, Meyers said he would accept the counterfeit money, but that he would like to have a pal examine it. He didn't doubt Petrillo's word; he just wanted to double-check to make sure he would have no trouble getting rid of it. Petrillo willingly acceded, giving him a sample $5 bill. That was a fatal blunder. For there was more to Meyers than met the Petrillo eye. He was, it was true, an upholsterer, but he was likewise, on the side, an undercover informant for the federal authorities. So it was that after concluding his conference with Petrillo he hotfooted it for the Philadelphia office of William Landvoigt, supervising inspector of the United States Secret Service.

No sooner had Landvoigt scanned the spurious bill than he declared, "That's a Petrillo. Where did you get it?"

Meyers related his experience. Upon learning a man's life was in danger, Landvoigt saw it was a two-way case. His office could investigate the counterfeit angle, but the murder plot was for the Philadelphia authorities to handle. He accordingly notified them after assigning Stanley B. Phillips, one of his agents, to work with Meyers.

It was thus, nearly a year ago, that Assistant District Attorney Vincent P. McDevitt took over the apparently run-of-the-mill case that was to develop into the greatest murder conspiracy in the annals of American crime. Detailed to run down clues were Detectives Anthony Franchetti, Samuel Ricciardi and Michael Schwartz, of the Philadelphia homicide squad. They were also to cooperate with Meyers and Phillips.

Acting under instructions from Landvoigt and McDevitt, Meyers returned to Petrillo and informed him the killing job was too risky for one man; that he had a buddy, "a tough guy just out of a Newark jail," whom he could get to help him. Also his buddy was anxious to pass some of the queer. This was the better plan, Petrillo readily agreed, and so was introduced to Phillips.

But here a hitch developed. Phillips was against using a lead pipe. It was too messy. He had done his best jobs with a padded sandbag. It left fewer marks on the victim's skull. "I can arrange that," said Herman. "I'll telephone my cousin, Paul." He called a South Philadelphia number, talked in a low tone for some minutes and said: "It won't be ready for a few days. You fellows come back next week." Now began a battle of wits that lasted through the summer. The law had three objectives: (1) To thwart a murder, (2) to round up the plotters and (3) to catch a counterfeiter. Phillips must buy the queer while at the same time keeping Herman from becoming suspicious and staving off the killing until the police worked up their case.

He and Meyers resorted to one excuse after another to postpone the projected "accident." Either the time was inopportune or one of the wasn't available—until the evening of September 23. Herman, angered at the continued delays, had set that date as the limit. They would bump Alfonsi off that night, or else. They drove out to the house at 2515 An street. Everything was set. The house was dark, the towel fluttered from the picket fence. With them were the police, who thus obtained circumstantial evidence of Mrs. Alfonsi's complicity.

INTENDED VICTIM HAD BEEN POISONED

Meyers and Phillips had achieved one of their objectives, but they felt sure they were doomed to failure in the others. Herman would go berserk in the morning when they tried to stall him again. Both were nervous when they visited him on the 24th. Both therefore were astounded at their reception.

"Come right in, boys," he beamed. "I'm going to make your fortunes. We'll drive to Trenton, N. J., where the queer's made. I'll let you have $200 worth for 60 smacks." Arrived in that city, Herman directed them to a house on the south side, where they viewed vast amounts of the newly manufactured counterfeit money. It was here that Phillips made his "buy." Meanwhile, he and Meyers were consumed with curiosity as to Herman's silence regarding Alfonsi. Meyers broached the subject when they returned to Philadelphia.

"I guess we can do the Alfonsi job tonight. There were too many neighbors around last night," he ventured. "Hell," retorted Herman. "You don't have to worry about him. He's in the National Stomach hospital. I don't think he'll live."

"You mean you got somebody else to bump him?" asked Meyers. "No, nothing like that," grinned Herman. "He's been poisoned." "Did you?" "Not me," interrupted Herman hastily, "but he's been poisoned all right."

Meyers and Phillips left as quickly as they could and sped to Landvoigt's office, and laid their information before him. He immediately notified the Philadelphia authorities and Detectives Franchetti and Schwartz raced to the hospital. The humble WPA worker was fast passing into the shadows. He was being treated for severe toxemia. They asked him where he had been eating.

"At home, like I always do," he murmured. "Except for my lunches which my wife prepared."

"Do you realize you're being poisoned?"

"No, my orange juice and my eggs—they tasted all right. So did my sandwiches. Everybody used to want to trade me for them."

"Did you carry any insurance?"

"No. They wouldn't give me any. Oh, my poor babies."

"Are you sure you didn't have any insurance, Ferdinand?"

"No, no. I sign the applications. I send them in. But always they turn me down. My wife she reads the letters to me. I can't read the English. Always, she says they turn me down."

Then his friend, Herman Petrillo, he brought an agent to the house. All had to do was sign and it would help the agent."

There the interrogation ended. Ferdinand was too weak for further talk. Meanwhile, Ricciardi, third member of the homicide squad trio, was reporting to Assistant Attorney McDevitt certain curious facts he had ascertained concerning Herman's cousin, Paul Petrillo, who had made the Alfonsi sandbag that was never used.

He was a tailor. He was also a witch man. He dealt in charms, love potions, white powder. He could peer into the future in his crystal ball. He predicted people would die. And they died. He also possessed the power of malocchio, the evil eye. His tiny shop at Passayunk avenue and Mifflin street in South Philadelphia's teeming Italian section was a Mecca for dissatisfied and loveless wives.

McDevitt had the information filed away in his card index system. Eventually, it might dovetail into the pattern of this case which was so rapidly assuming fantastic and widely ramifying proportions. He instructed Ricciardi to continue following up his leads.

He himself was busy elsewhere. Franchetti and Schwartz had made their first arrests. They had brought in Herman Petrillo and Mrs. Alfonsi.

That was on September 24. The two were held for the grand jury for attempted murder. A month later, October 27, Alfonsi died and the charge was changed to first-degree murder.

A post-mortem had disclosed traces of arsenic.

Ricciardi, by then, had submitted still another report to McDevitt. It was, in substance, that he had been checking on Paul Petrillo's black magic customers.

"I found so many I couldn't investigate them all," he said, "but among them is a woman I think we'd better concentrate on. She is Mrs. Carina Favato, who runs a boarding house. She knows both Herman and Paul. She's had two sudden deaths in her family. The first, her common-law husband, Charles Ingrao, the second her stepson, 17-year-old Philip Ingrao."

McDevitt issued orders to exhume the bodies. The post-mortems disclosed arsenic in heavy quantities. Mrs. Favato on November 2 was charged with murder and held without bail. Herman Petrillo was also named as a co-conspirator.

Next sensation in the crime classic was the announcement that the body of Giuseppe Di Martino, a WPA worker and neighbor of Mrs. Favato, who died February 4, 1937, following a severe cold, yielded sufficient arsenic "to kill six men." Insurance companies were responsible for this disclosure, which was made on December 13.

Their investigators, suspicious of the circumstances of Di Martino's death had refused to pay off the policies, which totaled $4,000. They also told the police that when the widow, Susie Di Martino, came to their offices to complain about the stoppage, she was accompanied by Mrs. Favato and Mrs. Alfonsi. Mrs. Favato, by the way, was a beneficiary in one of the Di Martino policies to the extent of $2,000.

Marching with the inexorability of a Greek drama towards its denouement, the case produced its first big climactic moment early in February of this year, when Chief Deputy Coroner Vincent Moranz conducted a joint inquest into the four deaths, those of Alfonsi, the two Ingraos and Di Martino.

Testimony highlights were that "an arsenic murder ring" operating systematically in and around Philadelphia had mulcted the insurance companies of thousands of dollars, causing at least 12 deaths; that, besides arsenic, the ring leaders had sought typhoid germs to insure "quicker and more natural death." It was also disclosed that victims had been insured as many as 16 times. The defendants refused to open their lips when called to the stand. They were Herman Petrillo and Mmes. Favato and Alfonsi.

Detective Schwartz testified that Di Martino had had eight insurance policies on his life. They were taken out between March 30 and July 7, 1936, and totaled $4,817, the largest one being for $2,000.

INSURANCE MAN TELLS OF WOMAN'S ANGER

The roles played by Mrs. Favato and Mrs. Alfonsi were revealed by Benjamin Koren, local superintendent of one of the insurance companies.

"After Di Martino died, three women came to my office," Koren said. "They were Mrs. Di Martino, Mrs. Favato and Mrs. Alfonsi. They came to ask why the company had not paid off the two policies which it had issued to Di Martino. "Mrs. Di Martino could not speak English very well, and Mrs. Alfonsi acted as her interpreter. Both said Mrs. Favato were quite angry, and demanded that the policies be paid off. I told them that we were suspicious about the case and were investigating it, but if they wanted, they could have the premiums on the policies back."

"They agreed to take the premiums and we gave back $125 on one policy and $496 on the other."

Herman Petrillo was tied into the Di Martino case by Dominick Corigliano, assistant superintendent of another insurance company.

"I happened to meet Petrillo on the street one day," he said, and added significantly, "I knew him because he had informed us of prospective insurance clients. He asked me why we had not paid off in the Di Martino case. 'They are poor people, and need the money,' he said. I told him we were not satisfied, and he made no reply."

Recalled to the stand, Detective Schwartz testified that Charles Ingrao, Mrs. Favato's common-law husband, a $20-a-week laborer, had insurance policies of a total value of $9,000. The largest, for $5,000, named Mrs. Favato as beneficiary. Four others for $3,500 specified no beneficiary, but were claimed by Mrs. Favato. A sixth policy for $500 was made out to Theresa De Luca, which investigation disclosed was Mrs. Favato's maiden name.

Schwartz further testified cancelled checks showed that one company paid off $7,801 to Mrs. Favato on three of the policies and another $1,076 to Mrs. Favato posing as Theresa De Luca.

CALIFORNIA SUN LOOKS DOWN ON TARA

By ANNIE LAURIE FULLER KURTZ.

A 1 o'clock a. m. studio call to go on location is one of the frequent variations in routine here at Selznick International Pictures. Recently we were notified to be at the studio gate at that hour of the morning. A sunrise shot being on the agenda, it required this margin of time to get set for the cracking of dawn over the Sierra Madres. The local weather boys had kept us informed as to when Old Sol would deign to poke his golden rim over the eastern barrier of the San Fernando valley, and all our hopes were keyed to the prediction of beholding it without clouds or fog.

A 31-mile motor trip out Sepulveda and Ventura boulevards on such pavements as are found in California is not at all unpleasant, even in the small hours of the night. Our route to location is, or will be, historic some day, for the reason that countless fleets of studio caravans have traversed it, bent upon such enterprises as "Robin Hood," "Dodge City," "Jauze," "Jezebel," "Marco Polo," "Maid of Salem," "Wells Fargo," and "Tom Sawyer."

While these California hills, lakes, and streams have been spread upon myriads of silver screens, the baser metal of their native aspect has been transmuted to the golden realms of romance in the magic alembic of the cinema.

We cannot but marvel at the silent and impelling forces that operated in the planting of a section of old Clayton County, Georgia, out here on a ridge overlooking one of southern California's smiling valleys. To the eastward lies the ancient mission founded by the padres in the 1780's. Hard by is the enterprising village of Tarzana, promoted by a writer of weird stories, and somewhere upon the enviering terrain are the ranches of Clark Gable and Ken Maynard.

But on reaching location we found ourselves, for all practical purposes, at Tara. It was the post-war Tara, where Scarlett works out a plan of campaign that would have made even her famous contemporary, General Sherman, look to his laurels. Here stood the ruined cotton press gin house, vegetable garden, cotton patch, barns, slave quarters, etc.

It was absurdly simple to walk around and take snapshots of the ensemble, but with technicolor cameras, simplicity is not the word. That large crew of grips, electricians, prop boys, green men, directors, and their assistants, script girls, sound engineers and technical advisers connoted anything but ease and simplicity. Not to be overlooked was the breakfast truck. This rolling kitchen is always a welcome visitor to location; it's gas-heated steam table, its white-clad chefs and its general air of hospitality does more than take the edge off the unseemly hour of the adventure. The line formed on the right, as usual, and for a table, a huge metal tray and a pair of knees made an excellent substitute.

But to the main event. Came the dawn! This was one time we actually saw the famous whizz in action—in full color and with such sound effects as were afforded by the whirling wings of the doves as they, too, early birds like ourselves, were about their own affairs on the mesa. The golden rim pushed up over the mountains without any help from Kate Smith or the special effects department. The camera, meticulously mounted on a "dolly," got the close-up of Scarlett, then rolled back to get the wide sweep of the heavens and the silhouette of landscape.

We often wonder what cruising aviators think while in passing over wide stretches of terrain they catch glimpses of a detached and colorful huddle of people and cars on the earthen floor. These cluster about a common center like ants around a drop of syrup. What the huddle of people think about aviators when their whirling propellers gum up the sound track is something else.

The long-awaited period of clear weather had arrived—gone were the clouds and the fog. The brazen orb that had leaped above the horizon soon had us seeking the shade—all of us who could. The lads of the no-hat school of thought were importing "wardrobe" for straw hats which the ever ready wardrobe supplied. Later, from nowhere, a batch of cork-lined sun helmets was produced, whereat the incorrigible director, Victor Fleming, donned his and was promptly saluted by his similarly be-helmeted associate, William Cameron Menzies, with, "Dr. Livingston, I believe!"

Throughout the long day the cameras ground out film, the principals went through their parts in the Tara settings, the "Georgia" sun continued to beat down upon the red roads and faded grass—upon paddock and the cotton fields. At 5 o'clock the welcome "wrap it up" was sounded, and the caravan began its 31 miles of homeward journey.

The special effects department of a motion picture studio is a set-up designed to take care of any kind of weather phenomenon, pyrotechnical displays or any other physical condition. The gadgets employed in this work are many and varied. Is a snow storm wanted? The answer is likely enough to fulfill every requirement of realism; rain and mud are equally convincing; thunder storms are built out of the most typical elements of their infinite variety.

In "Gone With the Wind" we have had a lot of effects that connote the blighting visitations of war. Exploding shells not only sound, but they give off an angry spurt of light. Remote conflagrations pass their glow athwart foreground or facade; sinister plumes of smoke write their menace upon the pages of the sky.

Our "special effects" are in charge of Mr. Lee Zavitz, who has the reputation of being second to none in the profession. His big moment came last December 10, when the burning warehouses and the exploding ammunition train made movie history.

Lee's laboratory comprises all the latest items in the catalog of special effects. A dusty road or dusty furniture are all in a day's work—and, as for busy spiders which do not observe union hours, there is a gadget that can outdo them in their web making which operates quite within organized collective bargaining.

One of the commonest stand-bys of this department is a ligneous substance known as balsa wood. It hails from Central America, and finds its light-hearted way into all the studios, where it contributes its bit to the gaiety of nations. The substance is even lighter than cork. When sawed into "four by four" timbers, sixteen feet long, it looks as formidable as if it were heart pine—but when the lumber-checker racks them with only three fingers and a thumb, the passer-by stops in his tracks, lifts his eyebrows, and, with a doleful shake of the head, passes on in silent bewilderment.

From this exotic lumber are fashioned chairs, tables, ball bats, rolling pins, muskets, bayonets, and revolvers. When any one of these items lands with a terrific crash upon the head of a victim, the effect upon the spectator is appalling, but upon the victim the effect is negligible. All break-away furniture is of balsa—all exploding safes, wagons, room interiors, are of the same frivolous material. Nature, indeed, was in a playful mood when she created this, the most practical of her practical jokes!

When we received invitations to a California barbecue—guests from Georgia to the west coast—we were highly elated, especially as this was to be a particular occasion—an all-day picnic given at Casa Manana, the ranch home of the Earle Osbornes in the Tajunga valley. It is an annual custom of the Osbornes to give a barbecue in the late spring to the Los Angeles Pioneer Society of which they are members. This is an exclusive organization, its membership consisting only of native sons and daughters, descendants of the original settlers of early California. Mr. Joseph Mesmer, 83 years old, is the president.

Casa Manana comprises 160 acres and lies in a beautiful valley with the tall San Gabriel mountains completely surrounding it. Mrs. Osborn was the former Emma Joughin, of the old Joughin family, known all over the state of California for its contributions to the cultural, civic and philanthropic life of the community. The Osbornes have a home in Los Angeles and an estate at Avalon on Catalina Island.

'Twas a gloriously beautiful day, and the ride through the big Tajunga canyon was lots of fun. We southerners are noted for our hospitality, and Georgia is famous for its barbecues, but I want to tell you that nowhere have I met with such charming informality, such a gracious "make yourself at home" feeling as here in this California ranch home of the Osbornes. Why, soon we were wandering all over the place, peering here and there, into attractive nooks. As for the barbecue, it will be something to remember in the days to come.

We ate under a big live oak tree the trunk of which measured twelve feet in circumference; its huge boughs shaded the tables where were seated the 300 guests. Spanish musicians played and sang for us during the meal, walking around and in between the tables, and the guests joined in singing many of their songs. After the barbecue, these same musicians played, while others in costume danced the ancient native dances in the little open-air theater which is built under two large live oaks. After a particularly lovely dance, I asked one of the young girls taking part what it was called. "Oh," she said, "it's just an old-fashioned hoe-down." Youth will be modern in spite of all!

Senora Consuelo Castillo de Bonza, of Olvera street, oldest section in Los Angeles, was one of the guests. I was told that it was the senora's public-spirited interest that has preserved Olvera street and that she has done much toward stimulating an interest in perpetuating Spanish traditions and customs.

At dinner I sat next to Mrs. Dexter Monroe, great-granddaughter of Luis Antonio Arguello, who was governor of California in 1822-1825, the first native son to become a governor. Mrs. Monroe's great-great-grandfather, Jose Dario Arguello, father of Luis Antonio Arguello, was long the Spanish comandante of the town and for a time acting governor of Alta California. The son, Luis Antonio, succeeded his father as comandante, and in 1822 was appointed governor—the first under Mexican rule. Arguello's sister, Dona Concepcion, is famous in California legend and literature as the heroine of a romance with Kezanov, the Russian plenipotentiary.

Mrs. Lucien Gravel, descended from Dr. Obed Macy, first practicing physician in Los Angeles, was also a guest. I could tell you of ever so many more—descended from distinguished pioneer families. California history is positively fascinating and we mean to learn more of it when we have the time. We told these native sons and daughters something about our own Atlanta Historical Society and what we have done and are doing toward gathering together and preserving historical records of our city. Since the publication of the book "Gone With the Wind" Atlanta has a historical significance all over the country, and these Californians expressed themselves as greatly interested in the forthcoming picturization of the book.

MILK IS TOOTH AND BONE BUILDER

By SALLY SAVER.

June is National Milk month. And I take this opportunity to give three cheers for milk and to say a fervent "Thank you" to Mother Nature for having provided in such appetizing form one of her most valuable articles of food.

Remember the saying, "You can't improve on Nature?" In milk you find Nature at her very best, because into milk, with lavish hand, she poured some of her richest treasures. One of these treasures is calcium, principal tooth and bone builder. Milk and milk products (meaning cheese and other by-products made from whole milk) contain calcium in abundant quantity. And inasmuch as no other food contains enough calcium to rely upon wholly, it is an accepted dietary fact that every person needs some milk daily, in some form, to supply this necessary element.

There is no food subject which arouses so much controversy as milk. Everyone has an opinion about it. Some say it makes one fat; some say it makes one thin; others say they can't take it because of this reason or that. Then there are those who say that milk and fish or milk and acid fruits shouldn't be taken in the same meal, and many other various statements which have been picked up here and there, or arrived at from some unusual or misunderstood circumstances.

Here are some milk facts which have been summarized by authoritative sources from feeding tests and studies conducted by reputable nutritionists: "Milk is one of the most important foods. It excels almost all others in the variety and quality of materials that it furnishes the body, and is suitable for persons of all ages."

"The solids of milk include protein, fat, sugar, and mineral matter, all in such form that they can easily be utilized in building and repairing the tissues and bones of the body. Milk is far richer in lime, for instance, than other common foods, which makes it especially valuable for young children."

"Milk is one of the easiest of all foods to digest for the normal healthy person as well as for invalids and children."

"Milk supplies, in particularly convenient and usable form, materials that children need if they are to develop strong, normal bodies; and it is a valuable food for adults, especially when it is combined with such foods as cereals and green vegetables."

The theory that milk cannot be combined with fish and fruits is disproved many times daily, because fruits and milk are generally eaten with cereals and some of the most renowned chefs use lots of milk in preparing seafood dishes. Chowders and creamed fish dishes are widely used, as are puddings and custards combining milk and fruits.

And as for making one fat or thin, that depends almost entirely upon what other foods are taken along with the milk and in what quantity, also depending, of course, upon how the body metabolism is functioning. Milk, if taken as an accessory drink, would add more calories, which would tend to add more weight. But if counted as a part of the food, because it is a food, milk would not necessarily change the weight. In fact, skim milk, or milk with most of the cream removed, is put into most reducing diets, because of the margin of safety which milk gives to a limited diet.

In order to get the benefits of milk, it is not necessary to drink it as a beverage. Milk may be taken in many forms; on cereals, in cream soups, creamed fish, meats and vegetables; custards; puddings; sauces; souffles and omelets; ice cream; cottage cheese and other cheeses; breads, cakes and muffins—made with milk; and, of course, in various flavored milk drinks.

It is safe dietary practice to include in the day's food a quart of milk for each child and a pint for each adult, counting that which is taken cooked or combined in other dishes.

Custards as a dessert are deserving of more attention and consideration than they usually are given. Small children often would not get enough milk were it not for their cereals and custards which use milk freely. But custards not only are a good means of getting a lot of milk in one dish, properly made, they are a very tasty dessert. Before taking up custard making in detail, let me suggest a few general points: 1. Don't skimp on the eggs; it is the eggs that produce a satiny texture. 2. Cook custards at low temperatures (below boiling point) surrounded by water. 3. Don't cook them too much, or they will be watery or will curdle. A soft-boiled custard, smooth and creamy, is the basis for many excellent desserts. Here is the recipe:

Soft-Boiled Custard.

3 eggs, (or 6 yolks); yolks make a creamier custard.
2 tablespoons flour, blended with
½ cup of granulated sugar
¼ teaspoon salt
2½ cups milk

Cook in a double boiler, over low heat, until custard thickens a little. Beat steadily while cooking and remove from heat as soon as custard is done. Stir several times for five minutes to prevent a coating forming on the top. Add blended extracts; ½ teaspoon vanilla, and ¼ teaspoon each of lemon and almond. Chill thoroughly and serve, poured over cake crumbs, fresh or canned fruits, macaroons, or just plain with a spoonful of whipped cream on top.

The photographs in the adjacent columns suggest ways of getting the full quota of milk into the daily diet. The young lady, knowing that milk helps build sound teeth and good health, drinks her glassful. Recipes for the dishes contain milk and cream follow:

Cranberry Sherbet.

Crush one can cranberry sauce; add grated rind and juice of 1 orange. Freeze partially. Fold in 1 cup whipped cream. Finish freezing.

Cottage Cheese Salad.

1 package of lemon or lime-flavored gelatine
1 cup hot water
1 cup canned pineapple juice and water
Strips of red or green pepper.
1 cup canned crushed pineapple
1 cup cottage cheese
1-4 teaspoon salt
Dash cayenne.

Dissolve gelatine in hot water. Add pineapple juice and water. Chill until slightly thickened. Decorate mild with strips of red or green pepper. Combine pineapple, cheese, salt and cayenne. Fold into slightly thickened gelatine. Turn into mold. Chill until firm.

Custards.

The custard is made of different flavors of soft custard, such as butterscotch, vanilla and chocolate, put in alternate layers in parfait or sherbet glasses.

Neat Mixtures at Comedy, Drama Feature Week's Fare on Screens

By LEE FUHRMAN.

There's keen satire, imagination and subtle humor in the "Merrie Melodie" on view at the Paramount and the Betty Boop animated cartoon on view at the Fox.

It seems to this reviewer that short subjects of this nature do not get their fair share of praise or publicity. And yet, many of them, like the two mentioned, contain more entertainment to the moment than many a ballyhooed feature film.

Walt Disney and his associates, of course, get a certain amount of recognition. Why not be fair and give worth-while shorts their just due? If audience reaction means anything, and apparently it does, the two cartoons listed rate mention in any critic's column. And so, here, they get it.

Good mixtures of comedy and drama are on view this week in Atlanta theaters. "Bridal Suite," starring Annabella (Mrs. Tyrone Power) and Robert Young, is an amusing piece at Loew's Grand. On the stage is the 11th annual Kidie Revue.

"The Gorilla" stars the Ritz Brothers in a madcap "chiller" at the Paramount.

"Invitation to Happiness," at the Fox, is a sound drama with Irene Dunne and Fred MacMurray in leading roles.

"Only Angels Have Wings," starring Cary Grant and Jean Arthur, is a varied stage show also is billed.

"Bridal Suite," Light, Airy; Laid in Switzerland.

With most of the action taking place in a Swiss resort hotel, "Bridal Suite," starring Annabella and Robert Young, is a light and airy piece on view at Loew's.

Annabella and Young turn in good performances. And the supporting cast does capably by their roles. For instance, Walter Connolly as a noted psychiatrist; Billie Burke, as a flutty mother; Gene Lockhart as a hard-headed businessman, and Reginald Owen as an English nobleman. Arthur Treacher and Virginia Field also perform well in minor parts. The film was directed by William Thiele.

The story concerns the efforts of Young, who plays a wealthy man of leisure, to escape from marrying a girl definitely not of his dreams. He flees to a Swiss resort, there meets Annabella, wins and loses her love, and then regains it.

The scenes where Annabella, Young and Connolly are lost on the edge of a precipice high in the mountains; the explosion of a hot water heater, which pitches Connolly into the snow, and the fight and riot which Young starts on board a ship are highlights of this entertainment.

Ritz Brothers Romp Along In Thrilling Mystery.

The Ritz Brothers romp merrily through "The Gorilla," now playing at the Paramount.

It's better than the usual Ritz Brothers fare, mainly because the story is a genuinely attention-holding mystery of the disappearing person and sliding panel kind. The brothers play the role of detectives.

There are laughs and thrills aplenty in "The Gorilla." Direction, dialogue and photography are of high order. The story concerns efforts of the Ritzes to track down a man-killing gorilla. They get their man—pardon, beast—in the end.

Anita Louise, Patsy Kelly and Bela Lugosi are among supporting players. The entire cast is good, and the film moves at a good rate. The terrifying-looking gorilla should satisfy everyone who gets a thrill out of being scared. It's an O. K. show.

Dunne, MacMurray Parts Warmly Done at Fox.

"Invitation to Happiness," now playing at the Fox theater, is a warmly and sincerely acted drama starring Irene Dunne and Fred MacMurray.

The supporting cast is excellent, with Charlie Ruggles playing "Pop" Hardy, prize fight manager; Billy Cook as MacMurray's 10-year-old son; William Collier Sr., as Miss Dunne's millionaire father, and Marion Martin, as a blond siren.

The film turns a new twist in that the hero fails to win the big fight. Instead, he regains the love of his wife and son. The fight sequences pack wallops. Eddie Hogan plays the champ.

It's above-average entertainment, at times moving and touching. Wesley Ruggles directed.

"Only Angels Have Wings" Now in Third Week.

"Only Angels Have Wings," Howard Hawks' air classic, is still packing 'em in at the Rialto theater, where the picture is in its third week.

Plenty of story, good acting, comedy, thrills and flight sequences of the hold-on-to-your-seat kind contribute to make this a box-office smash hit.

In the cast are Cary Grant, Jean Arthur, Rita Hayworth, Thomas Mitchell, Richard Barthelmess and Allyn Joslyn.

If you haven't seen this film—well, there's still time.

Barrymore, in "Natural," Heads Capitol Bill.

John Barrymore in "The Great Man Votes" and a varied stage show come into the Capitol theater today.

The feature picture is billed as one of the year's surprises. In other words, one of those naturals that crop up from time to time. (Remember "It Happened One Night"?)

Peter Holden and Virginia Weaver have important roles as Barrymore's children.

The stage show brings Jackie Green, singing comedian; Waller and Lee, comedians; Nadine and Charles, novelty entertainers; Yvonne Belmont, Atlanta songstress, and the Three Busy B's.

Faith and Simple Life Themes at Roxy.

Two features open today at the Roxy theater.

They are "Fisherman's Wharf," starring Bobby Breen, and "Street of Missing Men," starring Charles Bickford.

The Breen film is a simple story of companionship between father and son. Henry Armetta plays the "Dad." Lee Patrick and Rosina Galli are also in the cast.

Strip Tease Girl Picks Starlet Competition

By MARK BARRON.

NEW YORK, June 10.—(P)—Mary Martin, the girl who brought refinement to the strip tease dance, snuggled deeper into her fur coat and said she wanted the stage door closed because she didn't want people peering in while she rehearsed her act.

It was the same number which catapulted this hitherto unknown girl into overnight stardom when she opened in the musical "Leave It to Me" last fall, paved the way to further glory in her after-midnight song fests in New York's most luxurious night club and brought her gilded contracts from the same movie producers who had heretofore spurned her efforts in Hollywood.

Slipping on a trick dress that goes on or off her svelte figure with a single motion, she decided she would like a cold soda pop.

"As soon as the run of this show ends," she said as she sipped her lemon soda, "I'm going back to Hollywood and at long last actually be starred in a picture."

When that is finished I'm coming right back to Broadway to do another musical show for the competition is so terrific that once you get started riding high you can't afford ever to let down."

The competition that Miss Martin considers so terrific is, paradoxically, not so much from established stars as from the as yet undiscovered talent among obscure new faces in Broadway musicals and night clubs.

"There are a half dozen or more youngsters now on Broadway who look to me like pertinent material for stardom before another season passes," Miss Martin said. "If you like, I'll name my choices for the top five in the running."

First choice is really a plural one—the five ready-made debutantes first choice is really a plural one—the five ready-made debutantes who play the daughters of Sophie Tucker in "Leave It to Me," all individual performers and none being a graduate of the chorus lines. They are April (simply "April"), Kay Picture, Mildred Cheneval, Ruth Daye and Audrey Palmer. They range from blond to brunet, from 18 to 20.

"Those are the youngsters who are on the upgrade, and you never know when a skyrocket you never even suspected will blaze right past you," Miss Martin said.

"That's why I'm never going to stay away from either Broadway or Hollywood too long at a time. I want to hold onto what I've won so far and make that even better."

HOLLYWOOD, June 11.—Today, Mary Healy is playing a big part with Sonja Henie in "Second Fiddle." A year ago she was working as a stenographer in the 20th Century-Fox Exchange in New Orleans.

The 21-year-old golden-brown-haired miss was in a good spot to attract the attention of movie talent scouts.

Eleven months ago she was offered a screen test, brought out here by Fox for a course of dramatic lessons. Irving Berlin heard her sing, sold her to Zanuck—and everyone else on the lot. And that's how it came to pass that Mary Healy was given the second top feminine role in "Second Fiddle." Her future looks bright with a big part in Elsa Maxwell's "Hotel for Women."

Today, Susan Hayward is playing the leading lady's role opposite Bob Burns in "Our Leading Citizen." A year ago she was studying commercial art in Brooklyn.

Susan hit the Hollywood trail via the search for Scarlett for "Gone With the Wind." George Cukor tested her for the sought-after role. But she was turned down.

Susan decided to stay on in Hollywood anyway—and show them. Warners signed her to a brief contract—but did nothing else for her. George Cukor was worried.

After all, he had brought her here. He telephoned Paramount. With the result she landed the only woman's role in "Beau Geste," starring Gary Cooper, followed by "Our Leading Citizen." I would say that Brunet Susan has a definite future in pictures.

Today, 13-year-old Linda Ware is playing an important role in "The Star Maker," with Bing Crosby. A year ago, she was called Beverly Stillwagon and working hard at music lessons.

When she was four years old, Linda's mother died and she was sent to an orphanage.

She was taken out a year later by her aunt, who discovered that her niece could sing. Eight months ago, she induced Charles Rogers (star maker of Deanna Durbin) to stage the girl an audition. Linda staggered the executive with a "C" above high "C." And that's how she got into "The Star Maker."

Today, Kansas City-born Brenda Joyce is playing Fern in "The Rain Came." A year ago she was merely a cute blonde called Betty Leabo and studying at U. C. L. A.

When she left college, Betty took a modeling job. Mr. Zanuck saw her face in an advertisement, decided she looked like his conception of Fern, tested her—he had already tested 58 girls for the part

New Screen Team Delights Crowds At Rhodes

A new and refreshing screen team, James Stewart and Claudette Colbert, are paired in "It's a Wonderful World," now delighting audiences at the Rhodes theater.

The film brings Miss Colbert and Stewart together for the first time in their busy screen careers.

In the supporting cast are Guy Kibbee, Nat Pendleton, Frances Drake, Edgar Kennedy and Ernest Truex.

The picture was directed by W. S. Van Dyke, famed as the director of "The Thin Man," and is his first production since two other notable offerings, "Stand Up and Fight" and "Marie Antoinette."

Striking into new channels of comedy, "It's a Wonderful World" finds Stewart playing the role of Guy Johnson, a private detective, who has been hired to keep out of trouble an off-married Broadway playboy.

When the playboy becomes involved in a murder, Stewart turns his talent toward solving the mystery. Miss Colbert, who is cast as a scatter-brained writer of poetry, becomes entangled in the plot to find the murderer.

Complications follow one another rapidly as Stewart and Miss Colbert go about their detective work. A highlight of the film comes when Stewart, for appearances sake, socks Miss Colbert on the jaw.

The 47 sets present a kaleidoscope of modern metropolitan life, ranging from elaborate night clubs to trains, yacht, theater, automobile camp and Sing Sing prison.

JANE RAIDS ICEBOX; MILK BATH RESULTS

Screen Star Also Suffers Cut Ankle.

Jane Wyman now believes the statisticians' contention that it's more dangerous in your own home than anywhere else.

Jane was raiding her icebox for a midnight snack. A slippery milk bottle dropped from her hand. It struck the refrigerator and shattered into pieces.

Jane received a milk bath and a cut on her right ankle. She applied first aid, and reported for work at the studio the next morning.

—But Betty got it. Of course, they had to change her name.

She was named Brenda after glamor deb Brenda Frazier. The Joyce was given her by Director Clarence Brown, who thinks Joyce is the sweetest name he ever heard (he married Alice Joyce).

Today, Brenda Marshall (the town is full of Brendas) has the leading role opposite Joel McCrea in "Career Man." A year ago, in New York, they called her Ardis Gaines. She was eking out a small livelihood in the Federal theater project (where she was spotted by a Warner talent scout) and spending a large percentage of her salary at Madame Ouspenskaya's dramatic school.

Brenda is black-haired, looks like Hedy Lamarr—and they say she can act. After "Career Man," Brenda plays opposite Edward G. Robinson in "The Prince of Imposters."

Which all goes to prove that a lot can happen in a year!

U. S. CAMERAMAN WEDS IN TOKYO

March of Time Man Marries American Girl.

NEW YORK, June 10.—Victor Jurgens, motion picture cameraman for the March of Time in the far east, was secretly married to Miss Lloyd Shelton, of New York, in Tokyo last March 20, it was learned at the offices of his employers today.

Jurgens, now 25 and the youngest cameraman with March of Time, had planned to marry Miss Shelton in New York January 1, but was sent to the Orient on special assignment last summer and has been there since. Jurgens was an office boy until his study of cinematography and his work on small jobs won him a chance to film scenes of the war in China and of Japanese cultural and economic life.

Traveling more than 18,000 miles through China, Japan and Manchukuo, Jurgens exposed and shipped uncensored to the United States about 40,000 feet of film from which was made the recent March of Time picture, "Japan: Master of the Orient."

Nearly 50,000 parcel post packages were stored at one time recently in the postal "godown," or warehouse, in Shanghai, China, awaiting shipment to Yunnan and other interior destinations in interior China.

HOME TOWN TO HONOR WYMAN, MONTGOMERY

HOLLYWOOD.—Citizens of St. Joseph, Missouri, are planning a joint statue for two persons who have represented the town in the theater. That famous old partner of Fred Stone's, the late Dave Montgomery, will represent the stage. Jane Wyman will represent Hollywood.

The statues will be of heroic size. Miss Wyman will face the west, or Hollywood. The Montgomery statue will face the Broadway where he achieved his triumphs.

News of the plan came to Warner Brothers in the form of a letter from Chas. Everett Nuernberg, St. Louis sculptor who will come to Hollywood to mold the Wyman figure as soon as she finishes her Torchy Blane role in "Dead or Alive."

Center Theater Film Shows Nancy Kelly

"Tailspin," the exciting air film which opened yesterday at the Center theater, continues today and tomorrow.

The picture assembled a strong cast of women stars, Nancy Kelly, Alice Faye, Constance Bennett and Joan Davis. The romantic side is taken for the men by Charles Farrell.

The film tells a story of three women airplane pilots. Each flies for a different reason. One flies because she needs the money for her mother and brother. Another flies because she wants to be near her husband, and the third takes to the air because she considers flying is the greatest thing in the world.

An unusual film with a genuinely modern twist, "Tailspin" ranks as one of the better air screen offerings.

The Center's schedule for the coming week includes:

Tuesday, "Swing, Sister, Swing," featuring Ken Murray, Eddie Quillan, Alice Weaver and Kathryn Kane. This is the story of a trio of small town youths who perfect a new dance. Their idea catches on, fame and money comes to them, with the resultant complications.

On Wednesday, "Girls on Probation" is billed. This film tells of an innocent girl who gets into trouble. The difficulty leads to her being put on probation, and the main interest revolves around her battle to lose the stigma of being a girl on probation. An appealing romance adds to the story. "The Informer," which made an Academy Award winner out of Victor McLaglen, is the film fare for Thursday.

"Magnificent Obsession," starring Irene Dunne and Robert Taylor, comes on Friday, and Saturday, the Ritz Brothers hold forth in "The Three Musketeers." Don Ameche and Gloria Stewart romance to the antics of the Ritz Brothers.

MOVIES CROWD NATURE IN 'OLD MAID' PICTURE

Miriam Hopkins became a bride, the mother of two children and a widow all within the course of two days during filming of "The Old Maid."

The movie "miracle" was performed so that James Stephenson, who played the groom, father and corpse, could bob in and out of the cast in a hurry because of work in another picture.

YOUNG PLANS PARTIES. Robert Young is installing a barbecue pit at his Tarzana ranch for the benefit of horseback parties which he and Allan Jones have planned for their Bel-Air stables.

MIRIAM HOPKINS LENDS ANTIQUES FOR PICTURE

HOLLYWOOD.—Three pieces of living room furniture, famous among dealers and collectors of Americana as "the Elizabeth Marbury celebrity set," are to appear on the screen through courtesy of Miriam Hopkins, their owner.

The pieces, a beautifully carved walnut settee and matching chairs once owned by Governor Winthrop of Massachusetts, are believed to have held more famous authors, statesmen and public figures through their many years of use than any other three similar pieces in America. They were acquired by Miss Hopkins when she bought the Marbury home in New York City several years ago. The salons in the home of Miss Marbury, author and author's agent, friend of literary greats the world around for years, made social history during her lifetime.

The furniture will appear in one scene of Miss Hopkins' current picture with Bette Davis, "The Old Maid," through the insistence of George Hopkins, Warner Brothers set dresser and an authority on American antiques.

Play's the Thing To Make Good Actresses

NEW YORK, June 10.—The lovely girls with the rich voices—Katharine Cornell, Tallulah Bankhead and Katharine Hepburn—are spectacular stars who continue to prosper today as Broadway drifts away into the accustomed summer interlude.

Ordinarily Miss Cornell plays tragedy, but in "No Time for Comedy" she is strictly a performer designed for laughs. Miss Bankhead customarily plays comedy, but her triumph in "The Little Foxes" is where she deals with a sad plot and where she feels the grim character of her story.

Miss Hepburn had mostly heartaches on Broadway before, but in "The Philadelphia Story" she gives a performance that establishes that young woman as an actress who can be the often-troubled, often-romantic woman that she has to be in this comedy that Philip Barry has written.

Miss Bankhead has a tragic quality in her voice needed when Lillian Hellman's drama approaches those stages where a human life has so disintegrated that only the acting can triumph. It is a southern story, of course, and Miss Bankhead is brilliant as the mentor of a fading family.

In "The Philadelphia Story" Miss Hepburn opened in one of the town's top hits last March 28 and the dry speaking, elegant actress at terrifically long last convinced Broadway critics she could be a good actress. She plays the part with authority, with a sense of humor and with a spirit of gaiety.

Miss Cornell, the tragedy actress, now plays a comedian. Miss Bankhead, the comedy actress, now plays an extremely serious role. Miss Hepburn, both tragedienne and a comedienne, plays a role that covers both of those qualities and is making the hit of her career in the play that wins her acclaim from the critics who have been denouncing her so long as any kind of an actress.

TIGER CLAW GUARDS STAR IN WEIRD ROLE

HOLLYWOOD, June 10.—Lyla Lys wears a tiger's claw ring, an old Russian heirloom, as her charm against evil in "Return of Doctor X," in which she is featured at Warner Bros.

In this mystery picture, Miss Lys wears a ghastly makeup and portrays a woman who is dead, but exists in the world of the living. She plays the victim of a modern vampire.

The ring the star wears was created from an amulet credited with saving the life of an aunt, a woman of titled Russian family, who won it when she escaped from the Bolsheviks. Before that it had been the proud possession of several generations of courtiers, one of whom was the only officer to come unscathed through a battle against the Austrians 100 years ago. Its mystic properties were bestowed upon it by the blessing of an orthodox patriarch in the 1700's.

WALKIN' THE DOG. Gale Page's daily hikes with her Scottie have reduced the pup three pounds. Gale has gained two.

KID'S GLOVES. Wayne Morris now owns the gloves with which Joe Louis knocked out Jack Roper.

The Planets--Your Daily Guide

By BERNICE DENTON PIERSON.

Bernice Denton Pierson, eminent astrologer, has prepared this forecast in brief for a handy reference convenience to Constitution readers. This guide will aid you, for it indicates the most auspicious time to begin any new endeavor, whether it be business, social or domestic.

JUNE 11--SUNDAY: This is not considered a good day for new beginnings, for you will have a tendency to be brusque and independent, and these qualities you do not seem to be able to get over with others. Additional responsibilities are likely to meet with restrictions, therefore avoid new contracts and unions.

JUNE 12--MONDAY: Before 12:41 noon is not an auspicious time for making changes. Your mind will be active enough, but you will not be able to make definitely correct decisions. Your plans will probably meet with opposition. Between 12:41 p. m. and 6:15 p. m. will be a better time to attend to private matters and old business. After 6:15 p. m. pleasures, social contacts, dealings with women and matters of adornment are especially favored.

JUNE 13--TUESDAY: Before 8:17 a. m. will be the better part of today and try to get your important work done before that hour. After 8:17 and continuing throughout the entire day, favors activities that require quickness, a quick mental attitude, and dealings in machinery, consultations and agents.

JUNE 14--WEDNESDAY: Before 8:53 a. m. and after 4:14 p. m. will be the better part of the day. Before 8:53 a. m. you may turn your attention to matters of a serious nature, as to those things that have heavy responsibilities attached to them. After 4:14 p. m. conferences or agreements can be made with great rapidity.

JUNE 15--THURSDAY: Before 2:52 p. m. is very favorable for laying out plans, to draw up specifications and contracts, to travel, and for all matters where an active, snappy brain is needed. Contacts with other people should prove satisfactory, and you should take advantage of these conditions to shove yourself ahead. Between 2:52 p. m. and 4:45 p. m. use caution in all matters. Be careful that your business does not over- come your judgment. After 4:45 p. m. and through the afternoon and evening is a favorable time for matters having to do with the sunny side of life, such as social affairs, matters of adornment and artistic ideas.

JUNE 16--FRIDAY: The entire day through 7:48 p. m. should result most satisfactorily in almost all lines of endeavor. After 7:48 p. m. favors ordinary business matters, but suggests caution in making sudden and unpremeditated moves.

JUNE 17--SATURDAY: Whatever you want to accomplish, try and start it before 9:33 a. m. and after 3:05 p. m., for you can advance your position at these times. Between 9:33 a. m. and 3:05 p. m. does not favor new undertakings and charges. Attend to personal problems and unfinished tasks.

HOW TO USE THESE INDICATIONS TO BEST ADVANTAGE.

Should you receive an important telephone call, giving you the first news you have of a certain thing, look and see if the influences at that particular time are friendly or unfriendly. The outcome of that call will be colored by the influence prevailing then.

perintendent of the cemetery which paid out the $7,801, testified that, when he went to the Favato home after Ingrao's death to investigate the insurance claim, he met Herman Petrillo there and Petrillo told him that Ingrao's son, Philip, was a good insurance risk.

"He said Philip had never been sick," McCann declared. "I told him to make application in the customary way and the company later insured Philip for policies totaling $9,531."

The boy had been a ward of the Children's Catholic Bureau, having been brought to Philadelphia in 1924 when Ingrao deserted his wife, Gratia, in Buffalo. Ingrao went to live with Mrs. Favato some four years ago. Soon after, the couple took Philip from the Bureau to be deliberately "fattened for the kill" by Mrs. Favato.

"I doubt," said Chief Deputy Coroner Moran, after the last of the inquest testimony had been heard, "whether any jury in thousands of years has had to consider anything quite as fantastic, or if true, quite as cold-blooded as these planned deaths."

The jury required only seven minutes to reach its verdict and the three prisoners were held without bail for the Grand Jury.

A poignant aftermath of the inquest was the appearance in Philadelphia of Ingrao's former wife, now Mrs. Gratia Mancino. She had read of her boy's death in the papers and had come down by bus. Along with Philip, their eldest son, Charles Ingrao had also taken with him their younger son, Michael, when he deserted her. Michael is now in a CCC camp in New Mexico.

Going to the cemetery where Philip is buried, the mother fell on her knees, weeping and pressing her face to the grave. Then she went to City Hall. Learning Mrs. Favato was in an adjoining room she became hysterical, darting toward the door and screaming wildly, "Let me in there. I'll kill her with my bare hands."

Restrained and quieted by attendants, she wept piteously in broken English: "How could she have done such a thing? How could any mother be so cold-blooded?"

Asked if she wished to visit her late husband's grave, she cried: "No, he was a bad man, just as bad as the woman who killed him and who killed my boy. I have learned that he and Mrs. Favato kept telling my boys that I was dead."

If a shuddering public thought the inquest had been a lurid thriller, it soon learned they were as nothing compared with what was to come. The case from now on was to pyramid sensation upon sensation, with new suspects, murder confessions, indictments every few days and an ever-increasing membership in the notorious "black widows" case.

February 10 of this year the police arrested Herman's cousin, Paul Petrillo, the witchman tailor. For months, delving into the complicated mass of facts they had been amassing evidence against him. They had also borrowed from New York State's Sing Sing Prison, for a thirty-day period, Paul's own nephew, John Caporaso, serving a life sentence for the slaying of his sweetheart, Mollie Starace.

Caporaso, when arrested in New York City two years previously, had told the authorities there he was being framed by Uncle Paul, whom he described as head of a murder-for-profit syndicate. Paul's chickens were coming home to roost. It was he who at Caporaso's trial had given the testimony that had sent the nephew up the river.

"He was sore," said Caporaso, "because I wouldn't go in business with him. He already had a victim selected. He fingered him for me one day when I was visiting him in Philadelphia. He said to me, 'Get acquainted with that fellow, make the rounds of the saloons with him and when he's not looking drop a powder I'll give you in his beer.' I'll split with you fifty-fifty on my cut from the insurance, which will be $500."

"Is that the way you make your money?" Caporaso asked him. "How do you think I make it?" snapped Paul. "What do you suppose happened to Mary Gesso in Jersey City?"

He was referring to a victim of the ring whose death is still to be investigated.

Also, as revealed by Caporaso, there was the case of Dominic Starace, father of his sweetheart, Mollie. Dominic was insured for $25,000, of which Paul was to get $10,000 for bumping him off. He hinted to the nephew he would give him half for playing along with him.

But Caporaso, enamored of Mollie, didn't want that kind of money. Paul then shifted his tactics, exercising his charms on Mollie. So successful was he that in January of 1937 Mollie slipped away with him to New York. Caporaso trailed them. He had a double reason. He wanted to save Dominic's life and he wanted Mollie back. Confronting his uncle in Mollie's presence, he engaged in a furious struggle for possession of a gun. It was accidentally discharged and Mollie was killed.

"And so I got my reward for trying to save Dominic's life," said Caporaso. "A life hitch in Sing Sing."

Largely upon the testimony of Caporaso at Petrillo's trial, the jury was bound over for the Grand Jury, charged with murder conspiracy.

"If all we have heard about this man's participation in the arsenic murder ring is true," commented Detective Riccardi, the case will put the Bluebird killings in France in the picture. Paul Petrillo's home and tailor shop was a central clearing house for a cash and carry trade in death. That is he sold his fatal powder--arsenic--at $300 the dose and then cut himself in on the insurance. Not only that, but he and his agents even solicited new policy business among disgruntled housewives, going so far as to tip off insurance agents to prospective clients."

This Week In History

JUNE 11, 1578. Sir Humphrey Gilbert, who led the first attempt to establish a permanent English colony in North America, received his patent for discovery and settlement from Queen Elizabeth. Following the failure of his first expedition, he sailed the second time on the fifth anniversary of his patent. His fleet included five vessels. He arrived at the site of the present St. John's on August 3 and began the plantation of a colony two days later. On the return trip to England in the fall of the same year, Sir Humphrey went down with the frigate "Golden Hind," which was lost in a storm near the Azores. He was a half brother of Sir Walter Raleigh.

About 27,000 Americans were engaged in the battle of Noyon-Montdiver, in which a powerful German drive was halted. This was one of three attacks intended to wipe out "tongues" in the allied front and to draw reserves away from Flanders. The effort so depleted Ludendorff's own reserves that projected major offensive in Flanders was abandoned.

JUNE 12, 1917. General Pershing and members of his staff landed in France. This contingent was the vanguard of a stream of two million American soldiers that flowed to France in the following 18 months. First combat outfit to reach France was the 1st division. By 1920 the only American troops left in Europe were in the army of occupation.

JUNE 14, 1825. Poverty-stricken and disappointed, Pierre Charles L'Enfant, French engineer who prepared the plan for Washington, D. C., died in Prince George county, Maryland. He never received satisfactory remuneration or

Summer Pruning of Shrubs And Trees

By W. ELBRIDGE FREEBORN.

One of the greatest differences between a well-kept and an unkempt place lies in the proper pruning of shrubbery and shade trees. If there is any doubt in your mind as to the truth of this statement, we would like to ask you to bring to mind some place where the pruning, either summer or winter, has been neglected for a season.

Because of the fact that a majority of the pruning should be and is done during the winter, that part of the pruning that should necessarily be done during the summer is very often neglected.

It is important, too, to remember that there is nothing mysterious about pruning. After all, it is a simple, understandable, necessary operation. If we will think of pruning in the terms of purposes desired, it will resolve itself into the simplest of garden operations.

There are three underlying purposes in the practice of pruning: First, sanitation; second, stimulation; third, training.

Probably it sounds rather peculiar to say that pruning means cleanliness, but to that end it is most important. Whether it be summer or winter, with coopers, broad-leaved evergreens or deciduous plants, because with whatever plants we may have and in whatever season it may be, we must trim out all of the dead, broken or diseased branches.

Disease and insects both delight in having a comfortable, decayed or partially decayed location in which to rest over awhile, and these useless parts of the plants furnish just such a place where they await a favorable opportunity to spread their deadly havoc and destruction to other parts of the same plant or to nearby neighboring plants. In many cases, the eggs of insects or the spores of disease are actually stored in just such protective situations for growth and maturity.

So pruning is quite necessary throughout the year for this, if for no other reason.

We learned back in the winter that more or less moderate pruning caused, as quickly as spring opened the season of growth, an outburst of fresh vigor in the plant, such as may be had from judicious application of manure and fertilizer.

It must be kept in mind in all dealings with plants, that there is an even balance between the tops and the roots, so consequently when we cut back top growth, we stimulate the plant to throwing out new growth to replace it, and naturally such bold effect on the part of the tops, hushes actively below the surface, the roots, which all in all, results in a better and finer specimen. Of course, this does not displace proper feeding and care but naturally goes hand in hand with fertilization and cultivation to producing healthy, vigorous growth.

An old theory stated that pruning decreased the vitality of the plant, but such is not the case with the possible exception of some very few plants, like grapes, that bleed very profusely, if pruning is done while the sap is running.

It can positively be said here that practically all of our common plants and trees may be safely pruned in summer, and that this pruning will act as a direct stimulus to their growth.

The third reason for pruning is for the purpose of training the plant.

Thus, with some trees and shrubs that thrive better with open tops, allowing sunshine to penetrate through to the inner branches, we must thin out the outer ones to make it possible.

Then we strive with many of our broad-leaved evergreens and practically all of our coopers, to keep them in shapely bounds, round or globe shaped, some pyramidal, others columnar, and on with the various desired shapes.

Now, in order to maintain these shapes with strong, vigorous plants, we must prune several times during the summer or rapid growth period. This pruning not only keeps the plants looking neat and attractive, but tends to thicken them where there may be thin places along the sides.

Of course, each different kind of plant requires a little different type of pruning, according to the purpose we have in mind and according to the natural habits of the plants.

Roses constitute one of the largest plant groups with which we have to deal, and so when we consider them we are speaking the language of thousands who love them and grow them.

Judicious pruning of roses in summer, besides taking out the very old, the dead, diseased and broken branches, consists of keeping the top rather open and airy, avoiding in so far as possible, branches that cross and thereby rub and chafe each other. Also, as each flower is cut, if we leave at least two good eyes on the remaining uncut portion, we shall have two new flowering branches where there was but one before.

With the various seasonal flowering climbing roses, the summer pruning is the most important and should be done within a reasonable time after flowering, in order that lots of new growth be made before dormant season again. This new growth is the flowering wood of next spring, for large numbers of blooms and for them to be placed over the breakfast room window or on the side-porch trellis, or whatever we so desire, we must prune out the shoots except those running in the desired direction and so train them to the location we wish.

Without deciduous shrubs, summer pruning is resorted to to keep them in bounds and with the early flowering sorts such as forsythia and the fragrant bush honeysuckle, it induces new growth, which flowers next spring.

Our broad-leaved evergreens, being naturally of more slow growth, require but little more than sanitary pruning.

Extra vigorous branches shoot up now and then that must be cut back to a reasonable length to maintain the dignity and beauty of the plant, and when we stop to consider that the broad-leaved evergreens are the very backbone of our home plantings, then we readily see the importance of handling them intelligently.

The most refreshing part of the entire landscape plan is that played by the shade tree and, I'm unhappy in saying that these beautiful joy-giving members are usually those very badly neglected, not only from the standpoint of pruning, but from fertilization and care in general.

Proper pruning of these cool companions will oftentimes save them from disease and decay that in time is apt to either destroy the tree or else require the service of expert tree surgeons to save them.

Too much attention, thus, can not be given our true friends, the trees.

FALSE CARDING. False-carding, which is simply playing any card designed to mislead opponents, is a favorite bit of hocus-pocus resorted to by declarer who hopes to disguise actual strength in some suit. It is entirely within declarer's rights to induce in such convenient endeavors, not being accountable to dummy.

False-carding by defending players is an almost unforgivable sin, for the reason defending partner is more apt to be the one who is misled.

There are rare situations, however, when one defender, for very good reasons of his own, will false card, knowing it makes no great difference even though he might deceive his partner.

TRICKS TO BURN.

South opened the bidding one no-trump. West passing and North jumping immediately to game. As East and South passed, West opened the Heart 5. With dummy now exposed it seemed hopeless for the defense to stop game. Dummy's 6 followed. East played the Heart ace, instead of the king. South's heart 9 fell on the trick.

CAN COUNT HEARTS. With the heart 3 and 2 in his own hand, the heart 6 having been played from dummy on West's heart 2. East knew West held the heart 4, or South would not have played the heart 9 holding the 4, 7 or 8.

East counted South for three hearts originally, and West for five hearts. There was no way of preventing South from making the heart queen by natural play.

EAST LEADS LOW. If South held the heart queen-ten, a low heart returned by East might force South to finesse the 10. If West held the queen it made no difference. East led the heart 2. East believing West must hold the heart king, because East went up with the ace on the first trick, played the heart 10 to force the king and establish South's queen, but West won the trick with the Jack and led back another heart.

With the heart king, dropping South's queen. West returned his heart 2 and East cashed his two remaining hearts to defeat the contract.

Pull the Trigger on Lazy Bowels, and Also Pepsin-ize Stomach!

When constipation brings on acid indigestion, bloating, dizzy spells, gas, coated tongue, sour taste, and bad breath, your stomach is probably loaded up with certain undigested food which may linger in your stomach, to cause belching, gastric acidity and nausea. This is how pepping-up your stomach helps relieve it of such distress. At the same time this medicine wakes up lazy nerves and muscles in your bowels to relieve your constipation. So see how much better you feel by taking the laxative that also helps Pepsin to work on that stomach discomfort, too. Even finicky children love to taste this pleasant taste-Senna with Syrup Pepsin at your drugstore today!

McNICHOLS OPERATES A FIRE-CONTROL TRACTOR IN THE SANTA MONICA MTS. BEHIND BEVERLY HILLS, HOLLYWOOD, AND LOS ANGELES. HE CUTS FIRE-BREAKS (WIDE, BARREN LANES ON RIDGES) TO PREVENT FIRES SPREADING. ONE DAY 'MAC' GOT WORD OF A TERRIFIC FIRE IN AN UNGUARDED AREA — SWEEPING DOWN STRAIGHT FOR THE HOMES OF THE MOVIE STARS...

I ENJOY CAMELS MORE BECAUSE THERE'S MORE TO A CAMEL — THEY'RE Milder, Mellow, AND CAMELS TASTE BETTER!

Every woman can be famous for something. If you don't have the instincts of a celebrated cook or the flair for sewing or a way with interior decoration, then why not concentrate on flower arranging. Elizabeth MacRae Boykin will send you her bulletin, "Principles of Flower Arranging," on receipt of a stamped, self-addressed envelope sent to her at The Constitution.

TERRY GO OUT ON HIS USUAL
MYSTERIOUS
ERRAND TODAY,
CONNIE?

IS SO, MIST' PAT!
MIST' TERRY HAVE
CONNIE SEND OUT
DLESSY CLOTHINGS
TO BE FIXED FANCY-
BUT WHEN COME BACK
HIM LOOK AT SAME LIKE WAS FUNERAL
SHROUD!

PLANNED TO GO TO A PARTY—
THEN HAD IT CALLED OFF!
HE SURE IS KEEPING IT A SECRET!

DANCING LESSONS
WERE COMPLETED!
DOES THE YOUNG ONE COME FOR THE POST-GRADUATE COURSE?

NAW... I JUS'
HAD T' TALK T'
SOME ONE! I DON'
EVER WANTA
HEAR OF DANCIN

... SO, INDEED?
AND WHAT DIRE
CIRCUMSTANCE
ABOUT?

THIS ENGLISH KID,
DEETH CRISPIN, THE THIRD,
ASKED MY GIRL, APRIL,
AND ME T'GO TO TH'
GOVERNOR'S RECEPTION!
I COULDN'T DANCE-SO
I WROTE HER A NOTE
SAYIN' I WAS LEAVIN'
HONGKONG!...

...THEN I RAN INTO YOU,
AN' YOU AGREED T' TEACH ME!...I FORGOT ABOUT TH'
NOTE....CONNIE FOUND IT
IN MY POCKET-AN' MAILED
TH' DARN THING!....

ЧМММ

...SO APRIL THOUGHT I HAD RUN OUT ON HER! THIS CRISPIN GUY HEARD ABOUT IT AN' ASKED T' TAKE HER TO TH' BIG SHINDIG!
NATURALLY, SHE SAID YES...

... BUT

NOW, THE YOUNG ONE HAS THE KNOWLEDGE OF DANCING - THE INVITATION TO THE GRAND BALL - THE DESIRE TO BE THE GREAT LOVER ... BUT, ALAS, NO JULIE

...AND HE FEELS LIKE
TH' WORLD'S PRIZE
CORE T' BOOT!

PLEASURE OF
PRETTY LADY'S COMPANY?

WOULD I ASK?
I DON'T KNOW
ANY OTHER PRETTY GIRLS!

INDEED? THERE
HAVE BEEN PERSONS WHO LOOKED UPON
THE DRAGON LADY
AS NOT ALTOGETHER
REPULSIVE!

OH, GOLLY—I DIDN'T THINK....YOU MEAN
YOU WOULD GO...
I MEAN...GEE...
WOULD APRIL BE JEALOUS!...DO YOU MEAN YOU'D REALLY GO WITH ME?

BUT OF COURSE.
EVEN THOUGH IT REQUIRED THE SUBTLETY OF THE
INVITATION /

I NEVER
WOULD ENJOY
PARTY!

AH, YOUNG ONE...
 IT IS NOT EXACTLY A MATTER OF ENJOYMENT! THERE WILL BE SOMEONE AT THAT FUNCTION WHOM
 THE DRAGON LADY
 WISHES VERY MUCH TO SEE!

BOYS!

I WANT YOU TO DEPOSIT THAT FIFTY DOLLARS IN THE BANK AND DON'T LOSE
IT !!!

WHEW
OF MONEY

A black and white illustration showing a boy in a tuxedo and bow tie pouring liquid from a can into a large barrel. A horse is on the left, and a smaller boy is crouching nearby. The scene is set in a stable or barn.

WE HAD IT WHEN WE SLID DOWN TH' PORCH
AT HOME --AND I REMEMBER
WAITED FOR THE RED LIGHT !!!

YETH, AND
WHEN WE WALKED ON THE HORTH TROUGH

THAT'S RIGHT... I WAS HOLDING ON TIGHT TO IT WHEN WE JUMPED OVER THAT OLD BARREL... LETS SEE NOW... OH,
YES... REMEMBER WHEN WE STOPPED TO SEE THE LITTLE PUPPY... I HAD

AND I KNOW
YOU HAD IT WHEN YOU WALKED IN THE DOOR TO THE BANK.

A cartoon illustration of a man in a suit and hat talking to a woman and a child. The man says, "SAY, WHAT'S THAT UNDER YOUR FEET? LOOKS LIKE MONEY!!!". The woman replies, "GEE, THAT'S A FACT, BUT WHEN...". A sign above the man says "RECEIVING TRUNKS".
